Farmers, homemakers, editors, rural clergymen, businessmen and agricultural agency officials from 13 northwestern Minnesota counties are expected to attend the Crookston meeting, which will be in the Northwest School and Experiment Station. The counties include Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Beltrami, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Norman, Mahnomen, Clay, Becker and Clearwater.

Local arrangements for the meeting are being handled by a committee consisting of Dr. B. E. Youngquist, Carl Ash, Max Larson, Beltrami; Douglas Sillors, Moorhead; William Klewell and H. V. Sommer. General chairman of the Governor's Conference on Agriculture is Robert C. Rupp, managing editor of "The Farmer" magazine.

At the one-day session, farmers from the 13 counties will serve as chairmen and secretaries of workshops at which problems affecting Minnesota's farm production potential will be discussed and recommendations made to improve both agriculture and farm family life.

Polk Board Votes to Keep P.P. Tax

Rejects Resolutions of Crookston, EGF Councils

The personal property tax will not be abolished in Polk county.

At a meeting of the county board of commissioners in Crookston Thursday, a three-man delegation from the city of Crookston met for nearly an hour with the county board to seek an abolishment of the tax, but to no avail.

Resolutions asking that the tax be abolished were presented from city councils of East Grand Forks, Fosston and Crookston, but the only delegation at the meeting to speak on behalf of the resolutions was the Crookston group.

The only county commissioner to support a resolution to abolish the personal property tax was Alfon Hanson of Crookston. The resolution did not receive a second. Against the proposal were Commissioners Louis Giese of East Grand Forks, Oris Moen, Orlean Estenson and Olaf M. Enerson.

The commissioner's apparently felt that the tax has been better equalized since the exemption of $400 due value ($100 assessed valuation) was removed last fall, prior to issuance of the 1961 tax bills.

Since the exemption was removed, hundreds of Polk County residents who previously did not have to pay taxes on their household goods are now subject to the tax.

Removal of the personal property assessment would probably have increased the burden of taxes on real estate owners and businessmen.

Arson Suspected in $100,000 Fire at EGF

More than 40 men fought a downtown fire from 12:30 a. m. till dawn at East Grand Forks Saturday and watched three business buildings collapse in ruins.

Fire Chief Vincent Sullivan said an unidentified airman from the Grand Forks air base is being held on suspicion of arson in connection with the fire.

Pete Fall, owner of the destroyed buildings, and his bartender, reportedly caught the 21-year-old airman in the basement under Pete's Bar about 12:30 a. m. just after a fire started there.

Flames destroyed Pete's Bar, Wong's Cafe and Knapper's Radio and TV Service store, all on De Mers Av., East Grand Forks' main street.

Despite the work of more than 40 firemen using seven hoselines and five firefighting rigs, the flames raged out of control till 6 a. m. and crews were manning hoselines at the scene till noon.

No one was injured seriously. Damage is estimated at about $100,000. Two of the structures were two-stories high, and the third was a one-story building. Several families living in apartments over two of the buildings escaped.

Sullivan said he will ask the state fire marshal to send an agent to investigate the fire and interrogate the arson suspect.

Council Gives Approval To Four Street Projects

Harold M. Johnson, superintendent of the city water plant reported on a program of testing and repairing water meters in the city this year. It was noted that city ordinance provides the water department with the right to make such inspection and repair although home-owners own their water meters.

The liquor store committee was given authorization to accept applications for a waitress at the municipal liquor store in place of a man to succeed Russell Lane. The latter has succeeded Frank Klein who recently retired.

A petition on improvements for street surfacing on State avenue was ordered returned to the petitioners since it contained insufficient signatures to be valid. Other discussion centered around the proposed power conversion slated for this summer and plans made recently with an engineering firm.

A representative of the firm will be in the city Tuesday to further discuss the conversion project.

A board was elected from the five participating dairy groups with George Pfeiffer, former president of North Star, secured as manager of the group with offices in St. Paul.

Elmer Syverson of Clearbrook was elected to the district board of directors to succeed Ben Christianson of Greenbush. Reelected to the board were Carl Krohn of Viking, Edgar Rokke of Newfolden and Art Nordby of Grygla.

Efficiency prizes for butter production were awarded to Hjalmer Martin, Newfolden, 99.90 per cent; Wendel Swan, Greenbush, 99.86 per cent; Hugo Lundmark, Clearbrook, 99.82 per cent; and Elwood Jacobson, Karlstad, 99.80 per cent.

Attendance prizes for having delegates in attendance at the meeting were awarded as follows: Grygla Cooperative Creamery, Amos Thompson, manager, first; Roseau Cooperative Creamery, Clifford Skime, manager, second; Middle River Cooperative Creamery, Vernon Stardig, manager, third; and St. Hilaire Cooperative Creamery, Merle Rafteseth, manager, fourth.

Miss Betty Johnson, Northwest Dairy Princess, appeared on the program and slides of Switzerland were shown by Bill Svendsgaard, Goodridge, IFYE student to that country a year ago. Music at the noon luncheon was provided by the Lincoln high school band under the direction of John Moum. Roland Larson, executive secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce, gave the welcome and Joseph Jacobson of the Wannaska creamery gave the response.

CHAMBER L.I.F.E.

Living-Industry-Farming-Education

By Rolly Larson
Manager Chamber of Commerce

Winter is gradually wearing out whether we think so or not. Every year without fail March brings some sign of spring and a forerunner of warm weather.

Warm weather will also find an abundance of activity this year. Already our Chamber community calendar finds a women's golf tournament scheduled. Baseball, trap shooting, farm fieldwork, Northwest Dairy Day, Greenbush Sheep Days, Legion Convention and all sorts of things are being planned for now by many folks. Meanwhile, we can turn on the TV and Sing Along With Mitch in the comfort of the easy chair.

One activity that deserves immediate mention is the Institute for Organization Leadership being planned by the Education Committee. Dr. Orlon D. Beich and Arnt Aune will be urging all directors and officeholders of all community organizations to participate free of charge. The three sessions will be held on March 23rd, 30th and April 3rd. Graduation certificates will be awarded to all who complete the three sessions.

There will be many more activities made apparent to you soon. The apparency of spring will meet your eye as you Shop and Trade Where Bargains Are Made Here in the Heart of Northwest Minnesota, Thief River Falls.

Backache May Be Inherited

That aching back may run in the family. An Ohio State University doctor reports that in one Columbus, Ohio family the father and 11 of his 12 children suffer from similar backaches. Dr. Benjamin R. Wiltberger, clinical associate professor of surgery, claims that some people inherit a structurally weak back and that a sudden movement can produce a painful slipped disc. So when puttering around the house or garden go easy on your back, the doctor warns, since treatment is time-consuming and not always successful without a bone-fusing operation.

Worldwide air travel was the greatest ever in 1961. International and domestic scheduled airlines of 90 United Nations member states carried 112 million people 72 billion passenger miles during the year, reports the International Civil Aviation Organization, a UN agency. These figures represent a six per cent gain over 1960, according to ICAO.

American youths should know as much about mathematics, physics and chemistry as they know about driving a car, says Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris (Ret.), former head of the Redstone missile project. Scientific knowledge won't be confined to research, Medaris says. He believes it will be fundamental to the art of living is man is to control the machines that are built for him.

A dozen years ago plastic piping was something of a novelty. Today it is finding ever-increasing acceptance in industry and in the home. According to Tube Turns Plastics, more than nine out of 10 applications carrying corrosive liquids at temperatures below 225 degrees F. are handled better and more economically by plastic pipe and fittings than by metals or other conventional materials.

Peanut oil can be used as a fuel in an experimental turbine engine for passenger cars. It will also run on diesel oil, gasoline, Kerosene, alcohol, furnace oil or jet fuel.

Cellophane is trying to push cotton out of the top of the pill bottle. About four million pounds of cellophane will be stuffed into the bottles this year by one leading maker. Adherents claim cellophane protects the pills more efficiently against chipping and breaking.

Tape-recorded distress cries are startling starlings who endanger Tennessee Valley Authority high-power lines. Foreign objects on insulator wires may cause a circuit to the ground, permitting a surge of power which can damage equipment and cause power failures. The taped cries are played over portable loudspeakers and starlings evacuate their roosts for a half-mile around. A few repeat performances drive them away for good. How do you get those recorded distress cries? Just catch a starling, says the TVA, and turn him upside down.

Farmers Home Administration Names Official

Appointment of Hyrom S. Sorenson, a native of Bagley, to the office of rural areas development specialist with the Minnesota state office of the Farmers Home Administration was announced last week by State Director Arthur Hansen.

For the past six years Sorenson served as assistant commissioner of the state's Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation Commission, an agency created by the Minnesota legislature to develop the economy of Minnesota's Iron Range communities and the natural resources of Northeastern Minnesota and thereby create employment in that area.

In his U. S. D. A. assignment Sorenson will work with local and state officials of rural development programs, and Area Redevelopment groups in the 18 northern Minnesota counties designated under the Redevelopment Act of 1961 on projects and industries related to agriculture.

HAPPY HOMEMAKING

by Laura Duorst

PENNINGTON COUNTY HOME AGENT

When you put something away in your home today, you should put it where you can use it tomorrow. This is well-planned storage and it just doesn't happen or fall into place when you make your house plan. Good storage must be planned like any room in the house, put where you want and need it.

Certain articles are used in each room in the house and you want to be able to keep these articles in or near that room. For example, you use towels, soap and other bathroom supplies in the bathroom so that is where you want storage space to keep them.

A central hall which opens from the kitchen and workroom areas is an ideal location for storage areas. Besides being convenient, it places closet doors in the hall rather than in the rooms. This leaves wall space in rooms free for furniture, an important item in these days of smaller rooms and high building costs. You, however, still need closets in some of the rooms, such as in the bedrooms.

After you have all the space required for storage and the most convenient location for the different types, you need a plan for each area so you can make the best use of the space. Too often we waste as much space as we use.

Because of the many variables involved in setting up standards for storage, it is impossible to establish iron-clad recommendations. Each family has different types of articles to be stored and different quantities of them. Each has different ideas as to where they want items to be stored. These ideas, furthermore, are not static; they change over a period of years.

Leroy J. Sabourin, seaman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Sabourin of Brooks, is serving aboard the anti-submarine warfare support aircraft carrier USS Randolph which participated in the recovery operations of the "Project Mercury" orbital space flight.

The Randolph is one of more than 40 U. S. Navy ships which were on station in the Atlantic for the operation.

The "Friendship 7" capsule which carried Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn, Jr., on the history-making three-orbit flight was retrieved at sea by the destroyer USS NOA approximately five hours after launching.

Mrs. Lottie Ottum, Longtime TRF Resident Dies

Mrs. Lottie Ottum, a resident of Thief River Falls and community for over 50 years, died Tuesday evening, February 27 at Northwestern hospital at the age of 88 years. Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, March 3, at 2 p. m. in the Evangelical Free church. Rev. Joseph Swan officiated with interment in the Greenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Ottum was born January 4, 1874 in Sweden and came to America with her parents when a young girl and settled near Grafton, N. Dak. where she attended school and grew to womanhood. On October 17, 1896 she was united in marriage to Ole Ottum at Grafton, N. D.

They farmed near Grafton until 1909 when they moved to Thief River Falls and bought a farm in Silverton township east of this city where they farmed for many years. Her husband passed away in 1927. She was a Gold Star Mother and had received a purple heart from the government after her son's death in the war.

The past 15 years she had made her home in Thief River Falls. She was a member of the Evangelical Free church. She is survived by three daughters: Mrs. Dan (Ida) Ness of this city; Mrs. Andrew (Myrtle) Vistad of Roseau; Mrs. Julius (Alice) Bakken of Minneapolis; four sons: Oscar Ottum of Aitkin, Minnesota; Leonard Ottum and Enock Ottum of Detroit, Michigan; and Ole Ottum of Shelby, Montana; two sisters: Mrs. Alvin Sundin of Drayton, North Dakota; and Mrs. C. D. Tuckerman of Lincoln, Nebraska; four brothers: Emanuel Anderson of Minneapolis; Andrew of Roseau; Fred of St. Paul and Axel of Drayton. Nine grandchildren and ten great grandchildren also survive her.

She was preceded in death by her husband, two sons and two daughters.

The Green Funeral Home was in charge of arrangments.

Gophers Defeat Trotters 75 to 45

Dennis Bakke Scores 22 Points for Viking Team

The Golden Gophers basketball team, led by the 25-point performance of forward Jack Park, a former Aitkin high school star, and the 23-point effort of Ted Rude, who played his high school basketball at White Bear Lake, defeated the Viking Trotters 75-45 in a well attended exhibition game played on the high school gymnasium here Saturday night.

The Trotters, one of the strongest independent teams in this area, kept within reach of the former University of Minnesota Gopher gridders during the first period and several minutes of the second period, but Rude's four field goals in the second quarter, and three fielders by Bob Frizbee, boosted the Gophers lead to 38-25 of the intermission.

Dennis Bakke, the former Newfolden Nordics' high school athlete, paced the Viking scorers with 22 points. Dave Hanson, former Prowler center, added 13 points to the Trotters' total.

Thieves Trample Crookston 10-3 In Hockey Action

Arrowhead Loop Leaders Fall Before Onslaught of Local Puck Pushers

With a four-goal outburst in the first period and three more tallies in each of the last two frames, the Thief River Falls Thieves easily topped the Crookston Pirates 10-3 in hockey action at the local arena Sunday afternoon. A return game will be played on Tuesday evening at Crookston.

Chip Strand opened the scoring for the Thieves when he hit the net unassisted at 1:50 of the first period. Monty Markstrom tallied on an assist from Joey Poole at 4:10, George Schlieff scored unassisted at 14:16 and Cal Offerdahl bent the twine at 15:01 on assists from Mike Poole and Arlan Hjelle to complete the first period scoring. Expected Run-off This Year Recalls Floods of 1951

Mud Lake Area Was Under Water and Late Planting Was Rule Throughout Area

Predictions of floods along the Red River again this year bring recollections of record floods that caused so much damage in 1950. The high water levels of that year were not reached until late in April and in May, and were not anticipated in March.

The first story on flood conditions in the Times appeared in the issue of April 27. Ice had not gone out of the pool above the Thief River Falls dam until April 23, about two weeks later than usual. Washouts and other road damage at that time in Pennington county was estimated at more than $50,000.

Then conditions changed and became worse. The Times of May 4 reported nearly 12 inches of soggy snow over a wide area and Grygla was said to be in danger of isolation because of road washouts. The Mud Lake area had been evacuated and that "a veritable lake extends from a point four miles east of Holt to the area east of Grygla. Here at Thief River Falls the water was going through and over the dam and the level was two feet above normal.

The May 18 issue reported that the water levels in the Mud Lake area had started to recede. In the meantime conditions were becoming worse down stream and record floods were causing a great deal of damage at Crookston, Winnipeg, Grand Forks and other points along the Red Lake and Red rivers.

The crop in this area was put in late that year but the late spring was offset to some extent by a late fall and a fair crop was harvested.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

The Century Mark

It isn't often that a high school basketball team will roll up a score-total in three digits, but that was the feat performed by Coach Irv St. John's Warren Ponies a couple of weeks ago. In a game played on the Warren court, and against Erskine of District 30, the Ponies scored a 100-44 win. That was, understandably, a Warren team scoring record.

That mark called for a checking of the Prowler cage scoring records to see if a local team had ever hit the century mark. The Prowler teams, over the years, have rolled up some good-sized totals, but have never reached three figures.

The tops, according to the records at hand, was a 92-14 win over the Oklee Bobcats during the 1933 season. That was the squad, coached by Roger Dooley, that was the defending state champions, having won the title in 1932, and had such players as Wendell Kielty, Arnold Stadum, Lawrence Nicholson, Ing Hendrickson, Jack Ward, Paul Dahl, John Langseth, Eddie Froseth and others on the squad.

That was the year of the big squabble in the Region Eight tournament, with both Bemidji and Thief River Falls being declared ineligible for having over-age players on their squads.

Other High Scores

Surprisingly, the next highest Prowler team total was the 88-11 win posted by the Lincoln high school team of 1916 over the Red Lake Falls team. That 88-point total must be rated as more an accomplishment than a 100-point in these days of better equipment, better coaching, etc.

That 1916 team won the district basketball tournament and participated in the state tournament, losing to Fergus Falls, 27-25, in a first round game. The Prowlers, or Midgets as they were called in the early days, were coached by Albert Johnson, and the team was captained by Roy Brown, and had such players as Al Holzknecht, Elmer Tandberg, Carl Hovie, Willis Fasel, Vince Borry, Chuck Conners, and Coleman Linde on the roster.

Perhaps the most decisive win in Prowler cage history was the 84-2 win over Climax that the 1935 Prowlers recorded in a district tournament game. That Prowler squad — Lawrence Nicholson, Wayne Kielty, Per Berg, Vic Jung, Carl Lee, Art Nelson, Don Hermanson, Jim VanPelt, and Gil Mickelson — is rated as one of the best developed here. After trouncing Climax in a first round game, the Prowlers were upset by Crookston 28-24 in the semi-finals. And Crookston in turn was upset by East Grand Forks in the finals.

From that team, Gil Mickelson went on to make a fine record at Ohio State, being captain of the Buckeyes in his senior year.

Three of Their Best

If the basketball Prowlers are to capture their 20th title in the fifty-year history of district basketball tournament play, the boys will have to put together three of their best games. And these games will have to be played in succession, which will be quite a task.

The district tourney opens this afternoon on the spacious court in the fieldhouse on the North Dakota U campus in Grand Forks. East Grand Forks will tip the lid off the tourney when they meet Fisher at 2:30 p. m. At 4:00 p. m., the defending champion Prowlers will meet a highly-rated Climax Vikings club. The evening session will open at 7:30 p. m. with Warren playing the Oslo Bobcats; and at 9:00 p. m., the Plummer Cardinals, the sub-district champions, will play the Crookston Pirates. The semi-finals are scheduled for Tuesday evening; and the district championship finals are billed for 9:00 p. m. on Wednesday.

The Prowlers are as ready, mentally and physically, as they ever will be, and they are primed to make the good try in defense of their title. Playing up to the potential the boys exhibited against Stillwater, the Prowlers can win the district title. But they' will need three such games, and that's asking much of a squad that has been plagued by inconsistency all season. But win or lose, the Prowlers have played an interesting and entertaining brand of ball this season, and there should be few complaints from the paying fans.

And speaking of the district tourney. Said Red Thyren, "Why don't you make yourself famous and pick the Plummer Cardinals to win the district title?" Well, that's not a bad choice, but I'll let Red become famous. I'll just make myself great by picking East Grand Forks.

Goodridge PTA To View Films

Alaskan Travel Adventure Related in Hetteen Log

Editor's Note: Edgar Hetteen, head of Polar Manufacturing company in Thief River Falls, in 1960 made an unprecedented Alaskan trip. Together with three friends, he piloted Roseau-made Sno-Travelers through heavy snow from Bethel to Fairbanks, a rugged, 1200-mile cross-country trip.

Designer and originator of the vehicle, destined to become known by Alaskan natives as the "iron dog", Hetteen is currently manufacturing two sizes of the Polar all-season vehicle at the plant in Thief River Falls. Because a number of local residents are familiar with Hetteen and because of the reader interest in hazards involved in such an expedition, the Times will publish his journey log in series form in forthcoming editions.

Illustrated with pictures taken along the route as well as before and after, the stories will run in Monday editions. The Times hopes that the readers will follow the interesting narrative.

CHAPTER ONE

March 4, 1960

Our long-planned trip from Alaska's seacoast to Fairbanks began at 1 p. m. today when we waved final farewells, edged open the throttles of our three Sno-Traveler tractors and moved northward on the frozen surface of the Kuskokwim River.

Bethel, which is at the head of Kuskokwim Bay, on the Bering Sea was our starting point for this long journey into central Alaska.

To we four heavily-bundled travelers making the final adjustments of gear and supplies stowed aboard our five rigs, it seemed that almost half of Bethel's population was gathered at the river's edge to see us get under way.

Many among the watching group of men, women and children had cameras and thoughtfully snapped pictures of us and our caravan.

One or two persons brought letters and asked us to mail them upon our arrival at Fairbanks so they would have a souvenir of our overland trip. We warmed up the engines and brought them to a steady reassuring purr that told us we were all set to leave.

There were hasty shouts of farewell back and forth. Well-wishers called out last-minute words of advice about trail conditions between here and the Yukon. Then our machines, strung out in single file, began moving up river, steadily picking up momentum.

The weeks and months of preparation that had begun back at Roseau were over and the expedition was under way at last!

Four of us are making this overland voyage into the frozen interior. Besides myself there are Bessie and Rudy Billberg, who are husband and wife, and Erling Falk.

The Billbergs have lived in Bethel and Fairbanks for many years and are well known in both communities. I dare say they are as well acquainted with this vast countryside as I am with the back of my throttle-hand.

Rudy has been an Alaskan bush pilot for 20 years or more and he has served as Bethel manager of Northern Consolidated Airlines. He and I were raised together in Roseau county which I still call my home, and he and I for years have dreamed of an Alaskan trip such as this.

Erling Falk, quiet and reserved but always so dependable, is one of my top production men back at the Polaris factory in Roseau where the Sno-Travelers are manufactured.

Our caravan consists of three engine-driven tractors, or snow sleds, two of which are drawing approximately 900 pounds of supplies each on a pair of freight toboggans.

Two of the motor sleds are Ranger model Sno-Travelers, powered by 10-horsepower Kohler Co. K 241 gasoline engines. They are the ones that are towing the toboggans. The third vehicle is a Trailblazer model, powered by a 7-horsepower Kohler K 161 engine.

When we left Bethel we carried 60 gallons of gasoline, but at this point it is too early to tell how far that amount of fuel can take the loaded vehicles. Weather conditions and the type of terrain we will have to negotiate will be important factors as to gasoline mileage.

We passed through the small village of Akiachak this afternoon. At least 50 excited native children came running out to the river bank to meet us as we approached, and they followed along with us for quite a stretch. They were very much interested in our sleds and engines, but I do not believe they could speak more than a few words of English because we received not one answer to the questions we asked of them.

Tonight—our first stop on the trail—it's 10 degrees above zero outside the two tents. I am writing this as I lie in my sleeping bag, using a flashlight that I have propped up beside my note pad.

So far it is warm and comfortable in the big sleeping bag; however, I could not find my air mattress among the gear stowed on the toboggans, so there is a lack of padding between me and the 36 inches of snow that is beneath the tent. Every time one turns or moves there is the crunch of frozen snow underneath.

We pulled up and stopped here at 5 o'clock this afternoon so we would have plenty of time to make our first camp. After learning how to set up the tents and unpack the other equipment required for our camp, I believe now we could do it in the dark, if need be. It developed that there were many things to learn about this type of travel, and under these conditions, during this first day out.

TRACING the 1,200-mile route followed by his four-member party from Bethel to Fairbanks, Alaska, is Edgar Hetteen, originator and designer of the Sno-Traveler and currently head of Polar Manufacturing company in Thief River Falls. The cross-country trip was made in 1960 to give a severe test to the vehicles produced by Polaris Industries at Roseau, a firm which Hetteen formerly headed. Beginning in today's issue of the Times, Hetteen's personal log of the cross-country journey will be published in serial form in each Monday edition. Pictures taken by Hetteen and others on the trip will illustrate some of the chapters to be published.

Failure to file the report could possibly result in additional loss of benefits. This report must be filed no later than April 15, 1962, in addition to the person's income tax returned.

53,000 State 4-H'ers Noting Annual Week

More than 53,000 members of Minnesota's 2,171 4-H clubs will observe National 4-H Club Week March 3-10.

They will be among more than two and a quarter million boys and girls in rural, urban and suburban areas throughout the United States who will mark the week with special events to tell the public about their program of "learning by doing." These young people carry on educational projects in community service, homemaking, farming and dozens of activities geared to city as well as rural youth, according to Leonard Harkness, state 4-H club leader at the University of Minnesota.

Established as an educational program for young people, 4-H club work is sponsored by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the land-grant colleges and universities—in this state, the University of Minnesota—cooperating with county governments and local people.

Kick-of for the week in Minnesota will be the finals in the statewide 4-H radio speaking contest on the University of Minnesota's St. Paul Campus Saturday at 8:30 a. m., culminating participation by more than 1,000 4-H members in preliminary contests. Seventeen district winners will compete for state honors, giving talks on the subject, "How Would You Present the United States to the World?" The top four contestants will be interviewed on WCCO radio at 1 p. m.

Special programs and exhibits are being planned in local communities during the week. Many clubs will give recognition to the 9,969 adults who are contributing a total of a million hours of their time annually to help Minnesota's 4-H members and give guidance to the program. Club members will also review past accomplishments and plan ahead for the future.

Among achievements of Minnesota 4-H clubs last year, Harkness cited these: nearly 20,000 4-H members received training in citizenship, in farm and home safety and in health and first aid; about 12,500 were trained in recreational leadership; more than 18,000 received help in personality improvement; about 7,000 learned about money management. Among most popular of the projects in the "learn by doing" program were meal planning and preparation with more than 24,000 enrolled, clothing with 15,748 and meat animal projects with nearly 23,000 enrolled. Nearly 10,000 members recived experience in helping to plan and direct the program and assisting younger members by serving as junior 4-H leaders.

Physicians Offer Data on Fainting

Medical Assn. Supplies Advice on Prevention

The nervous bridegroom who passes out at the altar, the mother who collapses upon hearing the news of the death of her son, the salesgirl who "keels over" at the counter in a crowded and stuffy bargain basement, the "he-man" who drops at the sight of a physician's vaccination needle, are all examples of simple fainting.

Simple fainting occurs when the blood vessels, particularly those in the leg muscles and abdominal organs become widened temporarily by paralysis or active dilation. Temporary enlargement of these blood vessels causes the supply of blood and oxygen to rush rapidly away from the heart and brain.

Normally the body has protective mechanisms in the blood vessels and nerves to prevent fainting during sudden position shifts which affect blood circulation.

However, fear, worry, fatigue, anxiety, may temporarily destroy these protective mechanisms. When this occurs, blood from the other parts of the body is allowed to "pool" in these dilated or expanded vessels.

Sudden changes in the total quantity of blood in the body may also cause a person to faint. This is why blood donors are encouraged to rest briefly so that their body can make a satisfactory adjustment to the loss of blood.

The Minnesota State Medical association offers these suggestions for prevention and treatment of simple fainting:

If a person feels "faint" have him lie flat with the head low. If this procedure is impractical at the moment, have him lower his head between his knees and encourage him to breathe deeply.

In simple fainting, have the victim lie flat on his back for a minimum of ten minutes.

Consult a physician when the victim does not respond to these simple treatments, or if the fainting spells continue to recur, advises the association.

Malmquist, class of 1924, who is chief of the Minneapolis fire department. Principal speaker at the banquet will be Keith N. McFarland, director of resident instruction on the St. Paul Campus.

Older People Back to School

Arnt Aune, director of the Area Vocational School, reports an upward trend in the average ages of those who seek to improve their earnings by acquiring special skills. He cites the course for practical nursing as an example of this interesting trend.

While these classes are made up largely of girls just out of high school, older women are now showing greater interest in practical nursing as a field of employment for which they feel well suited and for which they can qualify with one year of training.

And what is true for practical nursing probably would be true for most of the other courses that are being offered, Mr. Aune believes. He stresses the fact that vocational training is not for just the young. There is no good reason why an older person should shy away from the idea of going back to school merely because most of the members of the class would be younger.

Our Portion Too High

Members of Congress, taking a look at the United Nations financing as a result of President Kennedy's request for the purchase of $100 million of a United Natalons bond issue, are discovering that our country has been paying about half of the cost since it was formed in 1945. During that period the organization has spent $3.43 billion. Our contribution has been $1.617 billion or 47 per cent.

Considering how recklessly we toss the billions around for other purposes that is not a large figure for so long a period of time. The federal government wastes much more than that here at home each year. But even tho the total of our contribution has not been great, we do have a right to complain about the large portion of the total that we have been paying.

Danger Ahead

More than half of the students attending the University of Minnesota are from the five metropolitan area counties, the great majority of them being commuters. Most of the good people of that area no doubt appreciate the advantage they enjoy in having a state-supported university within reasonable commuting distance.

The University of Minnesota probably is Minneapolis, greatest asset, both culturally and commercially. The state-maintained payroll is very substantial, but it represents only a fraction of the dollars that pour into the city from students and from other citizens interested in the school's cultural and athletic activities.

St. Paul shares in the advantage of a large state-maintained educational center, and also has the benefits of a huge state payroll and the many activities that are brought to the city as the state capitol.

We are not complaining about this. Minneapolis and St. aul are fine cities and we like them a lot. But too often a city is judged by its newspapers and the newspapers of Minneapolis and St. Paul, particularly Minneapolis, do much too much crying about how unfair the State of Minnesota has been to them. We are satisfied that the State of Minnesota has been very fair to both Minneapolis and St. Paul and that there is no justification for the yammering.

The situation is disturbing to us, not from the standpoint of our problems here in Minnesota alone, but rather from the national standpoint. The large cities are politically strong and rapidly are becoming stronger. Soon the large cities will control all government, and we fear the consequences.

David Lawrence, in a recent article on this trend and the possible implications of developments at the Washington level, asked this question:

> "Why is the administration seeking to tighten its control of all the political organization in the larger cities of the country by building up a department of urban affairs that could conceivably dictate to municipal governments and take from the local authorities the control of their own cities?"

David Lawrence did not attempt to answer the question directly, but indirectly he warned about the tendency toward too much centralization of power that could be dangerous. We are ssure that the thing David Lawrence fears is not what the good people of St. Paul and Minneapolis want, but we are inclined to think that that is what they are going to get in response to their unrealistic demands on government at both the state and national levels.

Strange World

The United Fruit Company is trying to liquidate its vast empire in Latin American countries to avoid the threat of expropriation. The land domain is estimated at 865,000 acres. Such a gaint, which the Latins often refer to as the octopus, has of course been subject to constant attack by politicians and labor leaders.

But now the company is discovering that neither the politicians nor the labor leaders want it to sell. Local governments are reluctant about assuming the cost of operating United Fruit's vast system for maintaining the health and literacy of its work force. The system includes 188 schools with 500 teachers, and 15 hospitals with 1,500 beds, 60 doctors and 200 nurses.

United Fruit isn't going out of the banana business. It is offering parcels of banana growing land to "associate producers" and will contract with them for the purchase of their crop. The new owners would continue to receive technical help from United Fruit.

The labor unions are opposed to the idea because they fear the small operators will not pay wages as high as those now paid by the company. The governments do not want to be saddled with the cost of operating the schools and hospitals. But the company lost properties valued at $27.1 million in Cuba by expropriation and fears the same kind of treatment in other countries. It has little faith in the integrity of Latin American governments, and that is understandable.

It also indicates that the company has little confidence in our own government and its willingness to protect the property rights of Americans abroad. Strange world.

Greener Pastures

(Wall Street Journal)

Mr. George Schwartz, the erudite columnist of The London Sunday Times, recently commented on the increase in emigration from the United Kingdom. His remarks, entitled "Dodging the Debt," discussed the widespread belief that many Britons were leaving their homeland in order to escape the national debt.

The British debt comes to a considerable sum. In dollars it amounts to around $75,600,000,000. This is, indeed, a heavy burden for 51 million people to pay off—or leave as a dubious inheritance to their children.

The British have had a hard time of it for the past 40 years. They were on the winning side in two wars, but lost an empire in the process. They are a long way from being among the richer nations of the world today. And opportunities aren't what they used to be on the tight little isle.

Contrariwise, the United States is unquestionably the richest on the globe. Our opportunities here are virtually unlimited. Production, earnings, and almost every other phase of our economy clicks off new records every year. Doubtless some restless Britons who aren't satisfied with things as they are at home look forward eagerly to this land of milk and honey.

Before they set sail, though, maybe we better let them in on a little secret. Our debt, Cousins, is $276,000,000,000. We have 170 million people here. The way our arithmetic figures it out, each American owes $1,600, whereas each Englishman owes about $1,480.

Those Britons who want to leave home because their own national debt is too big would do well to look elsewhere than the good old U.S.A. They might even do best to stay right at home, if it's just a matter of national debt that bothers them. Chances are we'll pay off theirs before our own.

Cuban Question Mark

(Financial Post, Toronto)

No Canadian government enjoys being out of step with the U. S. on a question of foreign policy but Canada's concurrence with the American line is not, or should not be, mandatory.

At the conference of the Organization of American States in Punta del Este, Uruguay, the U. S. failed to sell the Latin Americans its plan for a hemispheric quarantine of Castro, diplomatic and commercial. The banana republics were persuaded. The more self-reliant members, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile and a few others, were not.

Presumably the object of American policy is to bring down Castro's regime; but the evidence to date suggests that he may be able to make Cuba viable on the basis of trade with the Red block. Why push him into redoubling his efforts to prove this?

He began his rule three years ago, or so it seemed at the time, in a mood of friendliness to the U. S. He sought American aid, unsuccessfully, and at one time intended to pay, in bonds, for the industrial plants he wished to nationalize. Is there no possibility that he could be led back to his earlier position?

Britain and France were obliged to cut their Suez Canal losses. Perhaps the U. S. would be best advised to cut its losses in Cuba and seek a modus vivendi. The Rusk policy involves a risk of humiliation if Castro gets away with defiance of the U. S. boycott. Or else the boycott could lead eventually to a blockade of Cuba, which would amount to an act of war.

Interesting Opinions

Experience in dangerous and unexpected situations is even more valuable than good conditioning. If you have successfully controlled your airplane in an emergency, or dealt with an enemy pilot whose prime object is to destroy you, your chances of making the proper decision next time are increased.

New Archbishop

I was honored on February 27 to have a visit from the new Archbishop of the St. Paul archdiocese, His Excellency Leo Binz. It is interesting that he comes from Dubuque to St. Paul.

It was a Dubuque priest, Father Lucian Galtier who consecrated a pioneer chapel to St. Paul, and thus gave the capital city its name. St. Paul was then part of the Dubuque diocese. It was a Dubuque priest, Father Joseph Cretin who became St. Paul's first bishop, in 1857.

Archbishop Binz is a kindly man who smiles easily. I believe he will be close to his people and become as beloved as his predecessors, Archbishops Brady, Murray, Dowling, and Ireland.

Minnesota State Flag

Gradually I am seeing more state flags in use as I travel around. Why don't you get one for your own use? Veterans organizations—please include it in your color guards. Service clubs — see that schools get equipped. Business firms your customers will like to see you exhibiting state pride.

Both American and state flags should be flown on every nice day—not just holidays. Generate pride—patriotism—fly our flags. Every time we see a state or national flag we are reminded of what is good and fine in our way of life and the great sacrifices that have been made to secure sentiments to encourage.

Red River Valley Shows

Nearly fifty years ago farm leaders of the Red River Valley working with staff of the Northwest School and Experiment Station, the Crookston agricultural branch of the University, started the Red River Valley Shows. To promote this and other projects the Red River Development Association came into being. Over the years these institutions have developed a strong well diversified agricultural economy in northwestern Minnesota, and powerful public support.

Latest evidence is a huge display building built by contributions totaling over $330,000 from more than 3000 contributors.

The Red River Valley Shows place main emphasis on education. Outstanding farm couples are honored and an outstanding young farmer is named King Agassiz, who this year was Herman Natwick of Ada. Livestock projects are growing as is the acreage of legume and grass seed production. These supplement the heavy acreage in wheat, sugar beets and potatoes.

Highway Plowing

May I use this means to thank and congratulate the State Highway Department maintenance crews for the excellent job they have done during recent weeks of heavy snow.

Minnesota highways have been kept open and in good condition to an amazing degree under difficult conditions. If you've noticed this and appreciate it — mention it to Highway people you know write a letter to your newspaper, or stop at the Highway Department headquarters and give the men there a word of appreciation. Nothing so encourages good work as showing appreciation of it.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans' benefits may be obtained by visiting or writing the VA Contact Office at the Fargo VA Center, Fargo, North Dakota.

Q—I am a veteran who has been retired from active service because of disability. I have GI Insurance with the Total Disability Income Provision rider. May I apply for the TDIP payments?

A—You may apply. In order to qualify for the TDIP payments, you must present medical evidence that you are disabled to the extent that you cannot carry on substantially gainful employment.

Q—I have a participating GI insurance policy. When may I expect to get my 1962 dividend payment?

A—The VA is paying the 1962 insurance dividend on the anniversary date of each policy that is, on the date the policy became effective.

Q—Does marriage bar an otherwise eligible child of a deceased veteran from the War Orphans Education program?

A—No. The child is still considered an "orphan" for all purposes of the program until age 23 and, in certain cases, after that age.

Q—Is it still possible for a World War II veteran to enter on a course of education of vocational training through the VA?

A—No, the so-called GI Bill of Rights which provided that education or training for World War II veterans has expired and the program is completed.

INCOME TAX ADVICE

By Minnesota State Bar Assn.

Deductions For Taxes

(This is the thirteenth in a series of articles on income taxes made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar Association, Public Relations Committee.)

The taxes most commonly deducted on your Federal return are state income taxes, real estate taxes, personal property taxes, automobile license taxes, state gasoline taxes, sales taxes and state cigarette taxes.

While the ordinary real estate tax is deductible, special tax assessments which are levied against your property are not deductible if they are for improvements such as streets, sewers or sidewalks which increase the value of your property.

The taxes listed above which you may deduct on your Federal return are either imposed directly upon you or are treated as being imposed upon you by the tax law. However, taxes which are included in the price of the items you buy, but which are not imposed directly upon you, are not deductible. Included in this category are such items as alcohol and certain tobacco taxes. In addition, Federal law does not permit the deduction of Federal income taxes paid, social security taxes paid for yourself or for your domestic employees, inheritance taxes, hunting license fees and dog tag fees. None of the Federal excise taxes on personal expenditures such as those on automobiles, jewelry, furs, theater admissions, luggage, cosmetics, telephone, air, rail or bus tickets, gasoline, tobacco and wine are deductible on your Federal return.

The Minnesota tax on gasoline is 5 cents per gallon. Gasoline taxes imposed vary from state to state. The deduction for gasoline taxes should, of course, be based upon the specific number of gallons purchased in Minnesota and in other states. However, where this computation is impossible due to inadequate records, you can often arrive at a reasonable approximation of your gasoline taxes paid by determining the number of miles you drove your car in each state, dividing this figure by the number of miles you drive per gallon, and then by multiplying the number of gallons used by the tax per gallon in the various states where you used your car. The same method of determing tax can be used where you made purchases and paid a state sales tax. For example, you would approximate state sales taxes paid by determing the amount of your income subject to tax which you spent in a state where a state sales tax is imposed and by multiplying this figure by the percentage of tax imposed on each dollar of purchases subject to tax.

The Minnesota cigarette tax is 7 cents per package, and is imposed directly upon the consumer effective April 11, 1961. In computing your deduction for the cigarette tax, multiply the number of packages of cigarettes which you purchase per day times 7 cents and multiply the product by 265 (the number of days in 1961 for which this tax will have been imposed directly upon the consumer). You can probably arrive at a reasonable approximation of cigarette taxes paid by determining the number of packages of cigarettes which you smoke per day.

All of the above taxes are also deductible on your Minnesota return except for the Minnesota cigarette tax, state income taxes and real and personal property taxes on property located outside the state of Minnesota. Certain Federal taxes such as excise taxes on telephone and telegraph service, transportation, club dues, safe deposit boxes, and social security taxes on domestic help can also be deducted. However, excise taxes such as those imposed on the sale of jewelry, liquor, tobacco, and other articles where the tax is not imposed directly upon you are not deductible.

On your Minnesota return, you are also entitled to deduct Federal income taxes paid during 1961. However, if you have income which is included in your Federal return but is not included in your Minnesota taxable income, you must apportion your Federal income tax paid between income taxable in Minnesota and income not taxable in Minnesota in arriving at the amount of Federal income taxes deductible on your Minnesota return.

This column, based on Minnesota and Federal law, is written to inform, not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of a trained expert who knows the facts, because the facts may change the application of the law.)

Educational and entertainment features of county fairs will be stressed at one-day fair management short courses scheduled for St. Paul, Morris and Bemidji this month.

The courses will be held on the St. Paul Campus of the University of Minnesota, March 12; the Morris Campus of the University, March 14; and the Markham Hotel, Bemidji, March 16, according to Robert R. Pinches, acting director of agricultural short courses at the University.

Attending will be county fair managers, superintendents and supervisors, county agents and others interested in fair management.

The same program will be held at each location, says Harold C. Pederson, program chairman. He is a University of Minnesota extension economist in marketing and a past president of the Minnesota Federation of County Fairs.

Theme for the morning sessions will be "The Educational Challenge for County Fairs."

"The Changing Nature of Our Counties" will be discussed by three University of Minnesota extension economists—one at each of the three locations. Kenneth N. Thomas will speak at St. Paul; James L. App at Morris; and Harold C. Pederson at Bemidji.

Leonard Harkness, state 4-H club leader, will discuss "The Role of Premiums at County Fairs."

Theme for the afternoon sessions will be "Entertainment Considerations."

Stan Muckle, member of the board of managers of the Minnesota State Fair and director of amusements at the Steele County Fair, will speak on "Entertainment that Draws People." Douglas K. Baldwin, secretary-manager of the Minnesota State Fair, will discuss "Entertainment for Income Purposes."

Harold B. Swanson, agricultural editor at the University of Minnesota, will speak on "New Ideas Plus the Best of the Past" at a dinner meeting.

More information may be obtained from Agricultural Short Courses, Institute of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 1.

State Nurseries out of Norway Pine

Other Conifer Varieties May Still Be Obtained

This year will be a pace-setter for tree planting in Minnesota if orders received by the State Division of Forestry are any indication. All of the Norway pine seedlings available from state nurseries already have been sold, according to William R. Miles, University of Minnesota extension forester.

This includes over 20 million trees or about one-half of the nurseries' total production.

Conifers still available for planting include approximately 4 million white spruce, 750 thousand white pine and 200 thousand white cedar. No further applications for Norway pine are being accepted by the State Division of Forestry.

Hardwood species still to be sold include 250 Thousand elm, 225 thousand green ash, 75 thousand caragana, 40 thousand cottonwood and 80 thousand box elder.

Deadline for ordering trees is March 15. Orders must be for 500 trees or more and trees may be ordered in multiples of 100. The cost for conifers is $10 per thousand and for hardwoods $8 per thousand.

For further information and application blanks, contact your county agent, ASCS office or local state division of forestry office.

Traffic Safety to Be Topic Tuesday

Federal, State, Military People Join In Workshop

The inclusion of federal agencies covering civilian and military employes into the Minnesota official traffic accident prevention program was made known today with the announcement that a safety workshop will be held for this specific purpose.

The first annual federal-military-state traffic safety workshop will be held on Tuesday, March 6 at the Highway Department — Civil Defense Training Center at Arden Hills beginning at 9 a. m.

Integrating federal agencies with those state agencies responsible for traffic is another effort to find suitable means of reducing the seriousness of the traffic accident program for federal employes, a spokesman for the Federal Safety Council said. "This is particularly important as the military departments have a greater loss of manpower due to off-base, off duty accidents than they have in actual combat."

The workshop has been called by Governor Elmer L. Andersen, who will keynote the morning sessions on "Cooperation Wins."

The purpose of the meeting is to establish a coordinating organization which will provide joint traffic safety activities on a continuing basis. The plan will be presented by Harry F. Berlin, traffic safety administrator for the Department of the Air Force, Washington, D. C.

You also contribute to a more responsible and competent citizenship — which is today's greatest challenge to young people.

I would commend you especially for your constructive and worthwhile efforts in learning to live and work cooperatively with others. Your promotion of good will and friendly association with other people, and your ever-enlarging circles of friendship, will help bring about better and happier relations at home and abroad.

Already you have built bridges of understanding to more than 50 other lands with 4-H or parallel organizations, and I trust your program will continue to grow and expand. Gov't. Spending In U.S. Matches USSR Production

Amount Spent Would Buy All Goods and Services Produced in All Russia

Government spending in the United States has grown so vast that in a 15-month period it would be sufficient to buy up everything that Soviet Russia produced in one year, including financing the Russian armed forces and all missile work, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In 1960, federal, state and local governments in this country spent $190 billion. The federal government alone accounted for $130 billion.

This $190 billion total equaled 80 per cent of the value of all the $230 billion in goods and services produced in all of Russia that year (the Russian Gross National Product).

The large size of government spending in this country is not generally known. For one thing, most people consider that the federal budget reveals all the federal spending. It does not. Omitted are tens of billions spent on highways, Social Security and other programs not included in the budget.

The American governments were cradled on the concept of limited government. But they now appear to spend close to the full means of Communist Russia.

Concert Series At Crookston To Host Boys Chorus

As a part of the concert series being held in Crookston this year, the Tucson Arizona Boys Chorus will appear at Crookston Central high school on Sunday, March 11, at 4 p. m. Admission to the concert is by season membership only.

Under the direction of Eduardo Caso, the choir consists of boys eight to 15 years of age who are selected from the Tucson area. The important requisite for becoming a member of the chorus is a desire to sing. No school work is done by the boys on tour, but upon their return home they make up for lost time with private tutors made available by the Tucson public school system.

After the first coast-to-coast radio broadcast by the chorus from Tucson's San Xavier del Bac mission in 1944, network officials termed the presentation "one of the finest Christmas programs of the year".

Ely Planning Wood Processing Plant

Multi-million Dollar Plant Sought for State

Requests of aid from the Area Redevelopment Administration (ARA) to help finance a new lumber mill and a feasibility study for a multi-million dollar wood processing plant in Ely have been filed with the Minnesota department of business development, Commissioner Tom Swain reported today.

The two proposals from the Ely Municipal Area Redevelopment Agency seek a technical assistance grant of $50,000 for the feasibility study and $130,000 of ARA funds for the lumber mill.

The feasibility study would be undertaken by Grover Dimond Associates, Inc., St. Paul, to establish the basis for a multi-million dollar plant to process aspen wood fiber, according to Swain. No other details were revealed.

The lumber mill is proposed by Kainz Bros., Ely, who seek a total of $200,000. Under ARA requirements, 65 per cent of the total investment would come from state and federal funds. Kainz Bros. and the Ely redevelopment agency would supply the balance. The mill would employ about 40 men.

Swain said both applications have been forwarded to Washington for processing.

The commissioner praised the Ely agency for its initiative in developing the two projects. He pointed out that the effectiveness of the ARA program depends on the degree of initiative and interest exercised at the local level in the 18 counties of northern Minnesota qualified for assistance.

Snow & Cold Hamper Area Economic Pulse

Severe snowstroms and unusually cold weather during January and February slowed the area's economic pulse somewhat, the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis noted in its Monthly Review.

Total personal income, which was expanding rapidly in the first quarter of 1961, slowed up in January 1962. December department store sales paralleled year earlier levels, but retail sales of appliances are reported slow. Automobile sales, however, are up.

Nonagricultural employment in the district moved up in January, gaining 2.1 percent from a year earlier. Manufacturing in Minnesota gained 5.3 percent, and durables manufacturing employment was up 8.3 percent, the bank said.

Relatively high levels of construction contract awards and building permits, except in the residential sector, suggest a favorable trend in construction activity in the region this spring.

Heavy marketings of livestock and livestock products during late 1961 have brightened the district's farm picture. By December, cash farm income had risen above year earlier figures and the build-up of livestock inventories during 1961 promises a continued high level of marketing in the next several months, the Review noted.

On January 1, both beef cattle and hog numbers were up 4 percent from a year earlier, although milk cow numbers are substantially reduced from the recent ten-year average.

Stocks of wheat and feed grains on January 1 are also substantially below year-ago levels, reflecting the short small grain crops of 1962 and indicating a reduced level of cash marketing for the remainder of the current crop year, according to the bank.

In banking, the Federal Reserve Bank noted the heavy inflow of time-deposit money at both city and country banks since the December announcement that maximum rates of interest on time and savings deposits at commercial banks would be increased from 3½ to 4 percent on January 1. At the city banks the increase in time money during December and January was 700 percent of the recent fifteen-year average. The country bank increase was 300 percent.

Beet Growers Hear More About Acreage Expansion

Leonard Furuseth Is Named New Head of Tri-County Ass'n.

Prospects for expansion of beet sugar acreage was the subject of discussions at the annual meeting of the Tri-County Sugar Beet Development association held in the court chambers of the Pennington county court house Wednesday afternoon. Principal speaker was Marvin Syverson, Ada, deputy commissioner of agriculture for Minnesota.

Charles Campbell, Hallock, secretary of the Minnesota-North Dakota Sugar Beet Development association, reported on developments within the industry and W. E. Dahlquist, Thief River Falls, reported on his attendance at hearings before the House Committee on Agriculture at Washington in May. President Harry Oen presided.

Syverson, introduced by county agent Paul Stelmaschuk, stated that while the sugar act was intended to help the industry, it has been directed largely by the state department in the interests of foreign relations.

Up to the present time, production in this country has been about 75 per cent by beet growers and 25 per cent by the growers of cane. Those who speak for the beet growers are trying to maintain this relationship but there are indications that cane will receive a larger share of the American Markets in future allocations.

He urged that all beet grower organizations should be united and back a program that would serve the best interest of all. There is a lack of harmony among beet growers that is harmful, he pointed out, and that without harmony progress would be difficult.

Campbell was hopeful for the future of the beet industry and predicted a big increase in acre-

Library Board Orders Inspection Of Floor Strength

Inspection of the floor structure at Carnegie Public library to determine if it will support the weight of additional stacks of books was ordered when the library board met Tuesday evening at the library. A local contractor will be engaged to conduct the inspection.

Discussion at the meeting centered around changes which will have to be made in the immediate future to meet the needs of increasing library use. Final plans for improvements were tabled pending the result of the building inspection, according to Mrs. H. O. Chommie, board chairman.

Miss Frances Shanahan, librarian, left Tuesday evening for Minneapolis to spend several days attending an executive's workshop for librarians there.

Historical Group Plans Open House

April 29 Date Picked At Society Meeting Wednesday Evening

In a move toward reactivation of the Pennington County Historical Society, a tentative date of Sunday, April 29, was set for an open house at the society's museum in the basement of the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls. The date was selected at a meeting of the society last night in the courthouse meeting room.

Millard Nelson, secretary of the society, and Marvin Lundin were appointed by chairman Joe Rosengren to arrange a program for the open house. Appointment of Paul Roy, C. E. Hellquist and Herman A. Kjos to a committee in charge of arranging the museum and cataloging historical items was also accomplished.

Setting of the target date for an open house had several purposes, it was noted at the meeting. It will force action on documenting material housed in the museum, serve as a kick-off for a concentrated membership campaign and permit a large number of county people to see what historical items have already been contributed.

All persons attending the Wednesday night meeting expressed a

Second degree murder is the charge filed this week by Warren A. Saetre, Marshall county attorney, against Paul Wangberg, 19, Thief River Falls. Wangberg is under 24-hour guard at Northwestern Hospital in this city after the fatal shooting of Donald Myers, Thief River Falls police sergeant, February 17.

County Board Gives Approval To Dissolve School District 1561

Number of rural school districts in Pennington county was reduced by one more as a result of action taken by the county board of commissioners at the regular meeting Tuesday. With no objectors appearing at the afternoon hearing, School District 1561 (former Dist. 147) in Section 24 of Numedal township was ordered dissolved and annexed to School District 445 at Viking.

The annexation of the district will become effective June 30 at the end of the current fiscal year. In approving the request of petitioners in the district for dissolution, the board reduced the number of rural districts in the county to seven. District 1561 was the last rural district remaining west of Thief River Falls.

Roy Johnson of the state department of taxation met with the board in relation to giving assistance to local assessors with real estate valuation problems. He will meet again with the board at an adjourned meeting called for Monday afternoon.

A delegation from Polk Center township in Pennington county and Wylie township in Red Lake county appeared at the meeting to request county assistance for road construction between the two townships. One section of the boundary, about 1,000 feet in length, does not have a road due to a swamp in that area. The request was referred to the road committee for study and recommendation.

March 26 was set as the date for a hearing on the cleaning of the main channel of County Ditch 68 about five miles west of Thief River Falls. D. H. Stewart, consulting engineer, discussed the matter with the board and it was noted that cleaning is necessary to make the ditch function properly.

Bids were opened for the year's supply of No. 1 and 2 diesel fuel, No. 1 and 2 fuel oil and gasoline with Western Oil and Fuel company of Thief River Falls being awarded the contract among five bidders. Total amount of the bid on estimated quantity needed was $6,262.

Seven bids were received on the annual supply of culverts for the county with Armco Culvert company of Minnespolis submitting the low bid on eight different diameter culverts of various lengths. Philippi Equipment company of Minneapolis was awarded the bid for the year's supply of grader blades.

Bids Due April 6th on Home for Aged

Having completed arrangements for a federal loan of $390,000 payable over a period of fifty years, the Valley Home society of Thief River Falls today is publishing in the Times a call for bids on construction of a new home to be built in the southwest area of the city at an estimated cost, including equipment and furnishings, of more than $500,000.

Waldie Christensen, president of the society, announced that bids will be received until 4 p. m. Friday, April 6, adding that combination bids will be received, as well as separate bids on the general contract, plumbing and heating, ventilating, electrical work and kitchen equipment. Plans and specifications are on file at the Thief River Falls and other building exchanges.

It was indicated that award of contracts, in the event acceptable bids are received, will hinge largely on the success of the current campaign for new contributions and for payment of outstanding pledges. The federal money will not be available until the sponsoring agency has supplied its allotted share of the funds.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Ness and Janell visited at the Clarence Ness home in Holt Sunday.

Roseau Liquor Vote Unchanged After Re-Count

Results of the Roseau county liquor election remain unchanged following a recounting of the ballots conducted by inspectors Archie R. Lee, Herbert Monsrud and Mrs. Glenn Gregorson of Roseau. The election was defeated by 81 votes, the same margin the "dry" element was awarded in the February 5 election.

A hearing on charges or irregularities in the conduct of the voting will still have to be held, however, stated Judge Arnold Forbes, Bemidji. The recount was ordered by Forbes at an earlier hearing on a petition to contest the election. Protest of the election, in which at least eight irregularities were charged, was filed by L. H. Kiefstad and others.

Enthusiasm Runs High

Membership Sale Begins for Fair Organization

Solicitation of membership in the Pennington County Fair Association, Inc., is now underway following an organizational meeting held Monday at the Pennington county courthouse. Chairmen have been contacted for nearly all rural areas and workers are receiving supplies for the membership sale, according to Silas Hanson, county chairman.

Interested members of eight major organizations in the city will meet Friday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Chamber of Commerce office to formulate plans for the city campaign. In addition to the Chamber of Commerce and Jaycees which have already named delegates, assistance will be requested from the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Rotary, Lions, Eagles and Elks organizations.

"Enthusiasm is running high," chairman Hanson told the Times today. "We have contacted many individual helpers in the rural areas and have not had one refusal of assistance. This indicates a definite interest on the part of farmers in continuance of the fair and we appreciate the cooperation which is being received."

Hanson noted that membership in the organization is being sold at five dollars with the hope that in many cases both husband and wife will be enrolled in the organization. The five dollar fee covers life membership in the organization with the non-profit stock being non-transferable and having no resale value.

Chairman Hanson asks that all county residents give serious consideration to the organization and receive membership salesmen with a spirit of cooperation in the county-wide campaign. A united effort can make an extra-successful membership drive and provide a substantial working foundation for the annual county fair.

Recruitment Tea Planned for Nursing Prospects

To interest women in a career in practical nursing, a recruitment tea will be held Saturday, March 17, from 2 to 4 p. m. in the cafeteria of Northwestern Hospital in Thief River Falls. The tea is sponsored jointly by the Northwestern Hospital Auxiliary and the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school.

"Because the need for nurses is growing, the field of practical nursing offers an excellent opportunity to the woman between the ages of 17 and 55," states Miss Adeline Iverson, coordinator of the practical nursing program of the vocational school. "It offers an opportunity to learn a worthwhile occupation and at the same time help her community."

Members of the school faculty will give information concerning the qualifications required for admission to the school, admission procedures, curriculum offered by the school and scholarships that are available to the prospective student.

The practical nursing course is approved by the Minnesota Board of Nursing and is planned to give theory and practical training in the fundamentals of patient care in home or hospital, with approved techniques as used in present day hospitals. Theoretical training is given in the nursing suite of the area vocational school and the practical completion is received in modern hospitals in the area.

Satisfactory completion of 50 weeks of training and passing the state board examination earns the licensed practical nurse (L. P. N.) title for the student. These nurses assist physicians and professional nurses, serve in homes, hospitals, institutions, doctor's offices, health agencies and where medical and nursing services are needed.

All women in the 17 to 55 age group who are interested in what the program has to offer are encouraged to attend the tea.

Mrs. Norma Hanson Is Red Cross Secretary

Mrs. Norma Hanson

Mrs. Norma Hanson, rural Goodridge, was elected secretary of the Marshall County Chapter of the American Red Cross at the annual meeting held Thursday evening at Warren. A past county chairman of the organization, she succeeds C. B. Johnson of Warren who had served as secretary for about 20 years.

Ralph Larson, Argyle, was reelected chapter chairman and John Hildenbrand of Warren was renamed treasurer. Hildenbrand reported that the current balance in the county Red Cross treasury is $910 of which $235 belongs to the Junior Red Cross.

Departmental reports were given by John O. Pearson, Warren, home service chairman, and Miss Jeri Knitter, Stephen, Junior Red Cross chairman. Larson summarized the work of the organization on the county level and pointed out that the swimming instruction and water safety program was cut short last summer due to the lack of rainfall which forced closing of the swimming pool at Old Mill State Park.

Several first-aid classes were conducted throughout the county, the chairman noted. "We have been fortunate in not having any major disasters hit our immediate area," he added.

Glenn E. Johnson, Warren, county fund drive chairman for 1962, presented his report. Two films, "Meanwhile, Back on Earth" and "Neighbor to Neighbor" were shown to the 30 persons who attended the annual dinner.

William Carpenter, Crookston, member of the state Red Cross planning commission, was guest speaker at the meeting. He noted that annual expenditures of the American Red Cross have averaged more than a million dollars during the past 10 years.

"During the past year, the American Red Cross has cooperated with other league members in disaster relief operations around the globe, including Pakistan, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Philippines, Poland, India, Algeria, the Congo and Japan. It's a big operation," Carpenter stated.

Carpenter began his remarks by reading a letter written in May of 1942 by Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, directing the American Red Cross to refrain from giving free coffee and doughnuts to American servicemen in the British Isles. "This is what touched off a feeling of resentment by many G. I.'s against our organization," he said.

He countered the letter with a recent editorial from the Disabled American Veterans magazine which stated: "What really matters is not the sale of some doughnuts because the military ordered them to be sold. It is that during the same period of time and before that time and since that time --the American Red Cross was performing and has performed countless feats of quiet, selfless heroism on battlefields and in disaster areas throughout the world."

Chamber Board Views Calendar of Activities

Coming events were given close scrutiny when the board of directors of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce met Tuesday evening to conduct monthly business. President Joe Holter presided at the meeting with all directors present at the session.

Plans were approved for the spring opening promotion, fire prevention demonstration series and Institute for Organizational Leadership. Also encouraged were completion of the industrial survey and arrangements for the highway billboard program.

Funds were appropriated by the board for the Lincoln high school athletic banquet to be held in April, Dairy Herd Improvement association tour and luncheon to be held later this month, Science Fair to be held at Lincoln high school in April and luncheon sponsored for area school superintendents and band directors in conjunction with the annual spring music festival.

Approval was given to a general membership meeting at noon during the month of April and a Town and Country night to be held sometime before spring field work starts. Names of several candidates for honorary life membership were referred to the committee. Continuance of work on rail, airline and mail service problems by the transportation and communication committee was urged.

Receipts for 1962 have reached the 50 per cent of quota mark, according to the treasurer's report presented by Gene Belto, considerably greater than at the same time in 1961. The membership and finance committee was urged by the board to make all of their calls early in the year in order to meet the budget and permit a full-scale program in 1962.

Snow Falls Again To Cover Area In White Blanket

Two Inches Received Last Night; Temperatures Hold At High Normal Levels

Just so area residents wouldn't feel that Spring is entirely on its way, the weatherman ordered an additional two inches of snow which began falling late last night and continued into this morning. Temperatures have generally held high during the past few days.

A high reading of 30 degrees Wednesday, the highest mark since February 13 when a reading of 34 degrees was recorded, caused considerable thawing in the city. Snow banks began to blacken and small trickles of water were noted on packed surfaces but last night's snowfall neatly erased these signs of Spring.

High and low temperatures during the past several days included 23 and 0 on Monday, 28 and −15 on Tuesday, 30 and 15 Wednesday and a low last night of 25 degrees.

Cloudy skies with occasional snow is expected today with little temperature change tonight and tomorrow. High today will be near 30 with lows of 5 to 15 expected as skies clear tonight. Winds will switch to north this afternoon and be light and variable.

In its business session, the club was asked by Stuart McLeod, member of the group working on the reorganization of the Pennington county fair society, to supply several members of a large committee which will sell memberships in the new organization at $5 each. Lions president Gordon Reierson said he would appoint two or three members this week.

Durum Wheat Plan Is Clarified by ASC

To be eligible to take part in the special 1962 durum wheat program a grower must have produced durum wheat in one or both of the years 1960 and 1961, Winton Knutson chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committee, announced today. His statement was made to correct some apparent misunderstanding as to which growers may participate in the program.

The special durum program is intended to encourage increased 1962 production of durum wheat—temporarily in short supply. It is available only in designated counties in N. Dak., S. Dak., Minn., Mont., and Calif. To be "designated", the county must be one in which durum wheat was produced for commercial feed products during one or more of the years 1957-61, inclusive.

Higher price supports will be available for durum wheat grown on farms participating in the special program, with increases ranging from 10 to 40 cents per bushel over basic county wheat price-supports rates.

Explaining some of the points about which there has been some confusion, the chairman said that the amount of the permitted increase is an acreage equal to 40 per cent of the producer's 1960-61 average plantings of durum. This figure, added to the farm's 1962 wheat allotment, becomes the farm's "new wheat allotment" under the 1962 durum wheat program.

Knutson emphasized that the "eligible" grower must file an application to take part in the special durum program no later than March 30, and he must actually increase his 1960-61 average acreage of durum but plant no more than the "new 1962 allotment." He could however, plant all of his new-allotment acres to durum wheat in 1962, even though in other years part of his wheat production had been of wheat other than durum.

If a grower complies with the 1962 durum wheat provisions, he will not be subject to marketing quota penalties because of increasing his durum acreage. He will not, however, be eligible to participate in the 1962 wheat stabilization program.

G. Forks Air Base Man Admits Arson

EGF Police Report That D. C. Miatech Confessed

East Grand Forks Police Chief also on the March list of plentiful William Strait said Tuesday that a 21-year-old airman stationed at Grand Forks Air Force Base has admitted setting the fire which caused an estimated $100,000 damage to several East Grand Forks business places early Saturday.

He is Donald Charles Miatech, a native of Iron River, Mich., who signed a statement in Minneapolis Monday after having submitted voluntarily to lie detector tests.

Strait said Miatech made his admission to setting the fires at about 5 p. m. after having undergone the series of tests at the University of Minnesota police department.

Miatech had been booked into the city jail just before 1 a. m. Saturday, after being caught trying to run from the basement of Pete's Bar, where a second fire was started. The first fire, started under the cafe in the adjoining basement, had been extinguished shortly before by the East Side Fire Department.

Christensen Herd Tops County DHIA During February

Herd Average 48.6 Pounds of Butterfat; Luvern Johnson Herd Is Second

	Milk	B.F. Av.
Clyde Christensen	1322	48.6
Luvern Johnson	1158	46.6
Darrow Lundeen	1333	43.3
Dale Svendsguard	1010	41.8
Martin Hanson	1051	38.4
John Burtness	1029	36.9
Paul Morkassel	932	36.7
Myron Carlson	966	36.5
Clarence Swanson	1011	34.6
Art Stenberg	947	33.7

The herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butter fat produced is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month.

If too many dry cows are included in the herd then the average for that month may be low even though the cows which are milking produce a lot of milk.

Cows finishing with over 500 lbs. of B. F. during the 1961-1962 testing year, in a 365-day or less lactation were: Maynard Mehrkens herd; cow 30 lbs., 278 days; 12,630 lb. milk; 502-lb. fat. Clyde Christensen herd; cow 39, 365 days; 17,370 lbs. milk, 574 lbs. fat.

The cow records are published only after she is dried and has made 500 pounds or more in 365 days or less.

Roseau Will Host Shippers Meeting

Bernard Myers Heads FU Association Directors

Annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Farmers Union Shipping association which is based at Thief River Falls will be held Friday at 1:30 p. m. in the city auditorium at Roseau. Art Stordahl and Maynard Wedul of Thief River Falls are managers and truckers for the association.

Bernard Myers, rural Thief River Falls, served as president of the board of directors with Lloyd Nelson of rural Thief River Falls as secretary. The association serves a broad area in the Thief River Falls to Roseau territory.

In addition to reports and the regular annual business of the meeting, a talk will be given by Edwin Christianson, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union. He will discuss the outlook for farm legislation and explain the importance to livestock producers of an effective feed grains program.

Christianson was recently in Washington, D. C., to testify before the senate agriculture committee regarding the continuation of existing dairy support levels for the remainder of 1962.

Rehearsal Dates for Washington PTA Show Set

Rehearsals on skits for "65th Precinct", a variety show written and directed by Mrs. William (Velma) Holmes, have been scheduled for the coming week. An all cast rehearsal will be held March 12 and a full dress rehearsal will be held March 15, both practices to be at 8 p. m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.

"65th Precinct" will be presented to the public at 8 p.m. on Monday, March 19, in the high school auditorium. It is a local talent variety show presented as a fund-raising project by the Washington elementary school parent-teacher association.

"It is important that all participants in the show be present at both rehearsals," Mrs. Holmes said. She requested persons who do not as yet have their costumes to contact Mrs. Sig Sinding. age during the next 10 years. He stated that capacity at the Crookston and Grand Forks plants would be increased and that a new plant would be built at Drayton if increased acreage were authorized.

Campbell also reported on a letter he had received from Congressman Odin Langen stating that there had been no recommendations from the Department of Agriculture on changes in the present sugar act which expires June 30, and there has been no indication by the chairman of the agriculture committee as to when this matter would be considered.

The sugar industry has agreed on what should be provided in a new act, Campbell said, but the Minnesota-Dakota association is not supporting this program.

W. E. Dahlquist expressed his appointment with the hearing he attended in Washington, but pointed out that the Red River Valley did have a large delegation present and the fact that so many states were represented no doubt justified the large attendance as proof of interest.

Leonard Furuseth of Thief River Falls was elected chairman of the board of directors to succeed Harry Oen who has served in that position since the origin of the association about six years ago. Oen was named vice president to succeed Melvin Torgerson and Kenneth Onken was reelected secretary treasurer.

All directors whose three-year terms expired were reelected. David Nelson of Clearbrook was opposed by Palmer Horn in the only contest but was reelected. Also renamed to the board were Harry Oen, Pennington county; B. M. Wichterman, Red Lake county; and Melvin Torgerson, Marshall county.

Warren Defeats Climax 56-52 to Win District Title

For the sixth time in the fifty-year old history of district basketball tournament competition, and for the first time since 1950, the Warren Ponies, by defeating the Climax Vikings, 56-52, in the finals of the 31st district tournament that was concluded at Grand Forks on Wednesday night, won the district cage championship. Coach Irv St. John's club will represent the district in the Region Eight tourney at Grand Froks next Friday and Saturday, and the Ponies first round opponent will be the champion of District 30.

Coach St. John's Warren team and the Ponies used but five players during the game exhibited remarkable accuracy from the free-throw line in piling up their winning margin over the ever-trying Climax Vikings. During one stretch in the fourth period, Warren marked up thirteen consecutive points from the free-throw line before Howard Elseth missed on the second try on his one-and-one.

The game was deadlocked at 10-all at the end of the first period of play, and 25-25 at the half-time intermission.

Opening the third period, Dave Fischer drove in for a lay-up; Jerry Cook hit on a jump shot from the lane; and Bob Peterson, who played a starring role for the Ponies throughout the tournament, came up with a three-point play, scoring a field goal and being awarded a free throw, which he converted. Warren held a 38-34 lead at the end of the period.

Climax made a desperate bid to overtake the Ponies in the fourth period and on several occasions were within a point of Warren. In the final four minutes of the game, the Ponies made thirteen points on free throws.

To reach the championship finals Warren defeated Oslo, 63-55, in a first round game, and trounced Crookston, 66-48, in a semi-finals game. Climax defeated Thief River Falls, 57-55, in a first round game, and edged out the tournament favorites, East Grand Forks, 46-45, in the semi-finals.

In a game to determine third place, and which was played as a preliminary to the championship game, East Grand Forks defeated Crookston, 57-44.

Attempting to block the shot is Allan Peterson of the Vikings, an outstanding guard who picked up 25 points in the game, many of them crucial free throws in the fading minutes to provide a cushion against a Prowler comeback. Don Sparrow, whose nifty tip-ins spelled the difference in the game, races in at the right for a rebound.

Coach Gayle Halvorson's Washington Wildcats, the city grade school hockey champions, closed out their 1961-62 schedule on Saturday morning by eking out a 1-0 win over the Northrop Indians. The win gave the Wildcats an undefeated season, with the Washington club marking up twelve straight wins.

In Saturday morning's thriller, which found the Northrop club making a desperate effort to break the Washington win streak, and holding an advantage in the play in the opening period, Rich Holmes provided the game's only goal when he backhanded a shot past the Indians' goalie. During the season's play, Holmes has racked up a total of twenty-nine goals.

In the second game on Saturday's schedule-ending series, the St. Bernard's Broncos, with John Womack scoring a pair of goals and Kent LeMoine and Allen Gilbert adding singles, defeated the cellar-dwelling Knox Tigers, 4-1. Allen Mathieu tallied the lone goal for the losers.

Newfolden Triumphs In East Sub-Dist. 32

Newfolden Nordics won the East Sub-district 32 championship on Saturday by defeating the Greenbush Tigers 39 to 35 in the final round. The Nordics, rising up from their fourth place standing in the Border Conference, marched in succession over last year's District 32 champions, the Baudette Bears, 40 to 21 and then torpedoed the Middle River Skippers, 42 to 23 in the semi-finals on Friday.

This was a Cinderella finish accomplished by a superb defense, crisp passing, dogged rebounding by gaining position against taller foes and some neat outside shooting.

Six men saw the major part of the action, including three lettermen: seniors Richard Inman and Ronald Shern and junior James Dahl; and first year "A" squad men, senior Richard Ellingson and sophomores Jerry and Terry Strandquist.

In the game against the Skippers who had beaten the Nordics by over 30 points in their last meeting on the Nordics' home court, Coach Frank Kohoutek came up with a three-man zone defense and the other two men playing man-to-man near the basket to hold the Skippers from driving for jump shots around the keyhole and gaining position to out-rebound the taller Skippers.

Its effectiveness is shown by the fact that a team which scored over 60 points against the Nordics in their last outing were held to only 23 points. A pressing defense was also used from time to time which seemed to keep the Skippers off-balance. This was the Nordics first victory over the Skippers in three outings this season.

Quarter scores in this game were 5 to 2 and 14 to 8 at halftime. The Skippers had the lead only momentarily in the opening moments when they scored a free throw for a 1 - 0 lead which was overcome by a field goal and from here on the Nordics were never headed.

In the championship game, the Nordics employed a sagging 1-3-1 zone defense to hold a team which scored over 60 points against Roseau the night before to 35 points. Here again, the Nordics shot well from the outside to take the lead.

At one time they led by as much as 12 points but the Tigers always came back strong and gained the lead in the latter part of the fourth quarter. The Nordics never lost their poise and with 21 seconds left to play held a 6 point lead which was cut to two points with 9 seconds left. A break-away lay-up by Rick Inman cinched the game as the Nordic rooters burst upon the floor to swarm the team.

Richard Inman and James Dahl led the Nordics with 12 points each. P. Kruse of Greenbush led all scorers with 13 points. While all the Nordics played well, Ronald Shern was the defensive star of the games with his constant ragging the guards on the point of the defense, many times breaking up the passing before it had a chance to get going.

By the time this appears in print, the Nordics will have played the Karlstad Rabbits in the first round of the District 32 tourney. In their only other encounter of the season, the Nordics defeated the Rabbits on their own floor but everything goes by the boards when tournament play begins.

strong desire for continuance of the historical society. Several items of business in regard to possible projects were brought up for discussion but it was agreed that renewed public interest through opening of the museum and a membership campaign was of primary importance.

It is the hope of the society to completely catalog the many items which are now stored in the museum and arrange them for display in the best manner possible in the space provided. If present space permits after arrangement of items, or if larger space arrangements can be secured, additional items with local historical significance will be solicited.

Persons interested in taking part in historical society activities and not already members of the society are encouraged to contact Rosengren or Nelson.

Prowlers Eliminated By Climax in District

Coach Dick Halvorson and his Climax Vikings won a cherished victory on Monday afternoon when, in a first-round game of the 31st district tournament at Grand Forks the Viking defeated the defending champion Prowlers, 57-55.

The trend of the game can be judged by the fact that the score was deadlocked eleven times during the thirty-two minutes of play. In the first period, the score was tied at 2-all in the opening minutes, and at 8-all with less than a minute to go when George Hankerson hit on a field goal to give the Prowlers a 10-8 lead. Hankerson, incidentally, kept the Prowlers within reach of the Vikings throughout the game, with the senior forward scoring seven field goals and two free throws for his best scoring effort of the year.

In the second period, the score was knotted at 16-16, 22-22, and 24-24. In the final minute of the second period, Don Sparrow scored a pair of tip-in field goals to give Climax a 28-24 intermission lead. Rebound tip-in field goals proved vital to the Vikings, for in addition to Sparrow's two tip-ins, center Duane Palm tipped in three field goals, getting two of these field goals in the fourth period.

Opening the second half, Hankerson, Paul Klungness, and John Aune scored Prowler field goals, giving the locals a 30-28 lead. Climax, a field goal by Sparrow, tied the game at 30-all; and moments later with the score 34-33 for the Prowlers, Allen Peterson's free throw evened the score at 34-all. Hankerson and Klungness scored Prowlers field goals to break the tie, and after Palm had notched a field goal, Aune added a free throw and field goal, while Climax added three points on a field goal by Peterson and a free throw by Sparrow to pare the Prowler third period lead to 41-39.

Sparrow opened the final period's scoring with a field goal, evening the score at 41-41. Hankerson lofted in a Prowler field goal, only to have the Vikings' Al Peterson hit on a jumper, and the game was deadlocked for the last time, 43-43. Al Peterson scored two points on free throws, and then, with 4:50 to play, hit from the outside. Wayne Bjerken drove in for a lay-up, and when fouled on the play, added the point from the free throw line, and the Prowlers trailed 47-46. Palm tipped in a rebound; Sparrow, on Hankerson's fourth foul, added two points on a one-and-one; Peterson scored a point on a free throw; and Palm tipped in another field goal, giving Climax a 54-46 lead.

Bjerken scored a Prowler field goal with 2:20 to play. Al Peterson added a point from the free throw line with 1:15 to play. Gary Kelly, from off the right of lane, found the west basket for a two-pointer. Peterson, on Bjerken's fifth personal, scored a pair of points with 56 seconds to play. John Aune made a pair of Prowler free throws and with 18 seconds to play, Paul Klungness scored a field goal, paring the Climax lead to three points. With three seconds to play, Tom Lindberg was fouled while in the act of shooting. After a time-out to develop strategy, Lindberg scored on his first free throw try, and then attempted to bounce his second try off the rim in an effort to set up a Prowler field-goal try, but Climax recovered the ball and time ticked off to give the Vikings their deserved win.

Sportsmen Plan Aids To Reduce Deer Starvation

Reports of exceptionally deep snow in the woods and inability of deer to travel any great distances to secure food has caused concern by local area game officials and sportsmen about the starvation of deer this winter.

In an attempt to help the situation to some extent, a bulldozer has been secured to create trails to new feeding areas in the Mud Lake area where deer concentrations are heavy. A group of sportsmen is also being organized on Sunday to make an afternoon browse-cutting trek into that area.

Any persons interested in taking part in the cutting of browse are requested to bring their axes and meet in front of the city auditorium at 1 p. m. Sunday. Persons who would like to contribute toward use of the bulldozer may send contributions to the Times office, marking the outside of the envelope with a "deer fund" designation.

INTENSE driving gained this basket by Wayne Bjerken of the Prowlers in the closing seconds of opening round tournament action against Climax. Bjerken slipped the shot past defender Don Sparrow of the Vikings but Climax held its margin and won a two-point victory. Bjerken's floor play and some sharp-shooting by George Hankerson kept the Prowlers in the game.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

It's a Handicap

The three teams that entered the 31st district basketball tournament at Grand Forks this week by way of sub-district play last week — Plummer, Oslo, and Fisher — didn't survive the first round of play. Fisher lost to East Grand Forks; Oslo dropped a decision to Warren; and Plummer was beaten by Crookston.

These three teams, and they were impressive physically, belonged in the tournament. Perhaps the greatest handicap which they faced, and which proved to be the deciding factor in their defeats, was that they lacked experience on a big floor. The three teams played a number of their games on small floors, and a couple of the squads hold their practice sessions on floors that are smaller than the high school standard size 84 by 50 court. And when they move on to the ND fieldhouse court, which is college-size, they are faced with the problem of becoming oriented to the vast playing area.

During the season, playing on a smaller court, these teams rely pretty much on a zone defense. A zone defense, with the big men covering the boards, isn't very strenuous, and so when they move into district play on the UND court they are handicapped. East Grand Forks, not a particularly fast team, out-ran the Fisher club to score a solid win; and Warren, out-lasted the Oslo Bobcats, whose two big men—Jim Campbell and Roy Bushaw—showed the effects of the big floor by tiring in the late stages of the game. Of the three teams, Plummer perhaps adjusted the best to the large floor, and the Cardinals nearly caught the Crookston Pirates in the final minutes of the game.

The district tournament needs these smaller-school teams in the meet.

An Interesting Item

This item, which was culled from the Winnipeg Tribune and carries a Fort Frances dateline, will perhaps be of interest to state high school hockey fans.

The lead paragraph is as follows: "Five goals by newcomer—Keith (Huffer) Christiansen blazed the way for the Fort Frances Royals to subdue the Kenora Thistles, 16-2, here Sunday and gain the Thunder Bay junior hockey finals with three straight wins.

"As for coach Willy Toninato, president Joe Lambert, and manager Jim Witherspoon, they are beginning to consider their Royals unstoppable.

"Toninato introduced his nephew Christiansen, to around 800 fans on Sunday and they joined the Royals' management in believing that Fort Frances could have a Memorial Cup contender this spring after watching the stocky speedster move. Christiansen and Don Milette, a defenseman, were acquired from the International Falls Broncos who won the Minnesota high school hockey title a week ago."

The thought occurs that these two boys, Christinsen and Milette may have been signed to a Canadian Junior A hockey card before they joined the International Fall high school squad. Don't know that the Minnesota High School League Rules are with regard to such a contract signing, that is if the boys did sign such a card.

This isn't the first instance of International Falls using players who gained their hockey experience and training on Fort Frances rinks; for a couple of seasons ago Joe Bolzan finished out his high school career by crossing the river and entering International Falls. He was a star player for the Broncos.

Move Over, Red

As pickers of district high school basketball champions, Red Thyren and I are neither famous nor great. Red picked the Plummer Cardinals to win, and they were side-lined in a first-round game, losing to Crookston, 46-33; and I picked the East Grand Forks club and the Little Green Wave was upset in the semi-finals, losing to Climax, 46-45.

Red and I have "gone out on a limb" and picked the Bemidji Lumberjacks to win the Region Eight championship; and we both hope that we have made a bad choice.

Thieves Score 6 In Second Period, Down Crookston

Ft. Francis Powerhouse Here Sunday for Final Home Game of Season

Six goals in a fast second period gave the Thief River Falls Thieves a cushion to outlast the Crookston Pirates 7-5 in an exhibition hockey game at Crookston Tuesday evening. Gus Holmes pulled the hat trick for the Thieves, scoring once unassisted and twice on assists from Dale Wennberg.

Crookston opened the scoring in the first period with unassisted goals by Schmitz and Hendrickson as the Thieves scored once. Holmes hit the net on a Wennberg assist for a 2-1 score at the end of the period.

In a display of power play in the second stanza, Holmes scored unassisted, Del Offerdahl scored on an assist from Chip Strand, Offerdahl scored unassisted, Monty Markstrom scored on an assist from Joey Poole, Holmes scored on an assist from Wennberg and Duane Glass scored unassisted. The Thieves led 7-3 at the end of the period as Nelson scored for the pirates late in the frame.

It was 14:05 of the third period before Schmitz of the Pirates scored on an assist from Derosier and Hendrickson's goal on Derosier's assist came at 18:19 to complete the scoring.

In what is expected to be the last home game for the Thieves this season, Ft. Francis will play at the local arena on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Clarence Amiot, Thieves manager, states that Ft. Francis is by far the most powerful team the locals will play this year. They have defeated Hibbing 16-2 and Eveleth 9-0 and the Thieves will be forced to extend themselves to keep pace with the sturdy Canadians.

As an added point of interest, Amiot said, Keith Christensen of the state champion International Falls high school team will play with the visitors. A unanimous all-state selection as a junior this year but declared ineligible for next year's play, Christensen is considered to be one of the finest young hockey players in the state.

Self-employed Urged to Report Earnings for Social Security

Correct reporting of self-employed net earnings every year is all-important for social-security purposes, said Walter D. Kistler, district manager of the Grand Forks, North Dakota, social security office.

Mr. Kistler joins with Mr. Shanahan of the Internal Revenue Service in reminding people who work for themselves—alone or in a partnership—that Federal income tax returns (Form 1040) for 1961 must be filed on or before April 15, 1962. This must be done and the self-employment tax paid if net earning for the year were as much as $400, even if no income tax is payable.

The Social Security Administration, Mr. Kistler said, wants to remind self-employed persons that future old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits to them and their families will be based on their average earnings. If those earnings are not reported or are incorrectly reported, benefit amounts will be reduced—in some cases lost entirely—when the worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies.

He cited the case of a man he called Tom Shun. T. Shun was a young and prosperous farmer with a large and growing family. When self-employed farmers were brought under social security beginning with 1955, Tom didn't give much thought to it. He was a busy man; there was a new baby. Tom thought of social security as something for older people like his neighbor Jones who had qualified for old-age benefits because of his work in the city. Tom thought that he could just wait until his later years before looking into this social security business.

The following year Tom did look into this "business." A speaker at his local farm association meeting explained the survivors provisions of the law. Tom thought of his young wife and their small children. He filed and income tax return and paid the social security tax. It wasn't a good year, however, and profits were small. He filed again in 1957, 1958, and 1959, but profits were small. He always planned to get around to that big year of 1955 and file a delayed return. But Tom was no longer well; late in 1960 he died.

Mrs. Shun applied for survivors benefits for herself and the small children. Benefits, however, had to be based on Tom's average earnings after 1954. Because Tom had failed to report his income for 1955 and had never got around to filing a delayed return, those earnings could not be included in the average. His widow and children had to take a smaller benefit.

Six Area Men Join Navy in February

Two Members of Group Are from Thief River Falls

Six men from this area enlisted in the Navy during February, according to Chief Norman Caplstran, Navy recruiter in Thief River Falls. They are Mark J. Maldment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Maldment, and David C. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin J. Wilson, both of Thief River Falls; Dale C. Haugen, Greenbush; Errol W. Johnson, James D. McDonald, and Gale L. Olson, all of Roseau.

Mark Maldment and David Wilson enlisted in the Navy high school graduate training program selecting the administrative and electronics field respectively. The other four enlisted in the new three year program. Mark Maldment and David Wilson were graduates of Lincoln High School and were active wrestling team members. Maldment was captain of the 1959-1960 team and won the Region 8 championship that season. Wilson co-captained the Prowler team during his junior and senior years. Errol Johnson, James McDonald and Gale Olson were Roseau High graduates. The three were former members of the Roseau Cloverleafs hockey team. All six men chose San Diego, California for basic training.

'Mike' J. Hoffman, Former Highway Chief, Quits at 73

M. J. (Mike) Hoffman, state highway commissioner from 1939 to 1957 and a member of the department since 1914, retired on February 20, the anniversary of his seventy-third birthday. At the time of retirement he was a consultant engineer in the bridge section.

Hoffmann has been with the highway department through the entire development of the Minnesota trunk highway system as now organized. Beginning with his appointment as chief bridge engineer, he was a principal figure in the development of plans for the $20 million Minnesota-Wisconsin bridge between Duluth and Superior, Wisconsin which opened last December as a part of I. R. 535.

During his 14 years as bridge engineer, he supervised the design and construction of some 1,450 bridges on Minnesota trunk and state-aid roads. Hoffmann will continue to serve as a bridge consultant on a part-time basis during retirement.

$145 Million Highway Work Slated in '62-63

Expenditure of $145,260,000 on Minnesota's highways during fiscal years 1962 and 1963 is proposed in a "Progress Report" published this week by the Minnesota Highway department. This includes construction work on both regular trunk highways and interstate highways. Copies of the report are being sent to members of the State Legislature, road construction firms, major suppliers and to news media.

A total of $15,583,125 in regular trunk highway projects and $19,277,480 in interstate work, included in the 1962 program, has already been put under contract, leaving $15,148,875 remaining to be let on regular trunk highway projects and $17,274,520 in interstate projects. The 1963 program calls for $30,664,000 in work on the regular trunk highways and $47,312,000 on the 898-mile Interstate System in the state.

These estimates are based on presently available finances and anticipated revenues accruing to the Highway department. However, heavy drains on the department's finances because of greatly increased costs for snow and ice removal this winter may force postponement of some projects. On the other hand, if the department's financial picture improves, projects scheduled for the future may be undertaken earlier.

The department plans to issue another progress report as soon as the 1964 fiscal year construction programs have been determined.

"In the fight to preserve our Republic, it is not enough merely to be against crime, against subversion or against any of the other enemies which weaken the Nation's strength from within. To stand for the American ideal, to work for the cause of liberty and justice—these give true meaning to life in this great Republic."

The Settlement of Scots

Manitoba is making plans for the observance this year of the 150th anniversary of the arrival of a small group of improverished families from the lowlands of Scotland. Their leader was Thomas Douglas, Earl of Selkirk, and they established their settlement at the junction of the Red and Assiniboine rivers, where the city of Winnipeg now is located.

Lord Selkirk controlled the Hudson's Bay Company and through that company he acquired a lease of 116,000 square miles of land, which included most of what is now Manitoba and extended down into what now is Minnesota and North Dakota. Boundaries were not clearly defined at that time and our area probably was a part of Rupert's Land, a British crown colony.

Canadian history does not receive the attention it deserves in our American schools. Here in our border communities, where we have occasion to visit our Canadian neighbors quite often, we should have more knowledge of their past.

We have much in common with them, but there are some marked differences too that we should understand. Fortunately one of the important things that we do have in common with them is a common language, which greatly simplifies the problem of learning more about them.

Tax Inequality

Peter Vanderpoel, reporting in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, tells us that a $20,000 home in St. Paul probably is being taxed at a "full and true" value of $6,000. The same home in New Brighton would have a "full and true" value of $7,340, and in North Oaks the "full and true" would be only $5,300. All are in Ramsey county.

This apparently is a typical example of the tax inequalities thruout the state, and Pennington county is not an exception. The system of county assessors was established to secure equality within counties, and equality among counties is supposed to be maintained at state level. The machinery that has been set up appears to be adequate. It would seem that those who are responsible for the operation of the machinery are neglecting their responsibility.

State officials are being brought in to straighten out the mess in Thief River Falls. Some communities hire assessment specialists to check on the work of local assessors. Certainly in fairness to all taxpayers every effort should be made to maintain equality in the tax base. From our observation neither our city council nor our county board give this problem the attention it deserves.

Diplomatic Blunder?

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch thinks the ouster of Cuba from the Organization of American States was a diplomatic blunder because it split a conference called to provide for collective action. It points out that while the United States did get the required two-thirds vote on a watered-down resolution, the six nations that abstained, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia and Ecuador, contain 70 per cent of the population of Latin America. It states:

> "If our delegates at Punta de Este had heeded the larger sister republics, the OAS meeting would have ended in solidarity rather than division. The republics voted unanimously for a stinging denunciation of Communist intrusion in the Western World. Even the nations that dissented on the Cuban ouster have no fondness for Communism. But their objections to the ouster resolution were not heeded.
> "They objected that the OAS Charter contains no provision for ousting a member state; they wanted to adopt such provisions before considering ouster. They objected that the United States had never before demanded ouster of dictatorship. They objected that ouster would only solidify Cuba's commitment to the Communist bloc, without deterring Castroism in the least."

United Space Effort?

When Premier Khrushchev congratulated President Kennedy on the successful flight of Col. John Glenn, he expressed the hope that the two nations might properly join hands in their space-exploration efforts. President Kennedy thanked him for his kind words and stated that he shared Khrushchev's belief that working together in this field might be a good idea.

Well, so far so good. Certainly the idea should be encouraged, although until we have established friendly relations with the Russian government and have confidence in its integrity, there is little likelihood that we will start exchanging secrets with them in the field of rockets.

The Financial Post of Toronto, looks upon the idea rather hopefully, commenting:

> "The idea that the U. S. and Russia should together explore space will horrify a lot of people. "Smart diplomacy," a phrase used cynically, was the common reaction to Khrushchev's proposal for collaboration after John H. Glenn's rapid journeys round the world.
> "It was a smart move all right, calculated to exhibit Mr. K. as the great advocate of friendly relations; but it would be idiotic to write off this Moscow overture as mere propaganda. President Kennedy's affirmative reply showed that he took it seriously.
> "There is a precedent for Soviet-American co-operation in science. During the International Geophysical Year, 1958-59, scientists of all countries worked together to compile an elaborate dossier of facts about our planet Earth, its structure, climate, probable future and so on.
> "Prof. J. Tuzo Wilson of Toronto, who was president of IGY, wrote in his book about that scientific effort: 'Perhaps the greatest achievement of IGY was this demonstration that the people of the earth can work openly and harmoniously together in a world-wide enterprise.' True, it was a simple, basic project, easily divorced alike from politics and emotion; but within its own scope it provided brilliant evidence that men of all nations can work in harmony.'
> "So far as the average non-scientific layman knows, it is difficult if not impossible to divorce space exploration "from politics and emotion". There is a general assumption that the strong powers are interested in outer space because it might supply convenient pads for launching H-bombs and other mass-annihilating weapons against one another.
> "If this is not so, if the investigation of outer space is or can be as innocent and innocuous as the study of butterflies and bees, this is good news. Khrushchev's message looks like interesting evidence that the Soviet Union wants to eliminate competition with the U. S. in this field and avoid making the international situation more horrific than it is."

What Standards?

(John Weber in Murray County Herald)

"Headlines in the daily press recently reminded the American people that this country is still more than 127,000 classrooms short of providing adequate education in spite of the fact that 1961 was a year of record expansion. Perhaps it would do those of us who are interested in better than adequate education some good to investigate the factors that in part at least result in these shortages.

"We note that a breakdown of the needs shows that only 60,000 classrooms are needed to relieve overcrowded conditions while 67,000 are needed as replacements for those deemed 'unsatisfactory' for various reasons. These figures were compiled by the federal government from the various state departments of education.

"We frankly doubt the authenticity of the figures. For example, is a classroom deemed "unsatisfactory" in Minnesota also unsatisfactory in Alabama? Or reverse it. Are all the satisfactory classrooms in Alabama equally satisfactory by northern standards?

"Standards," as adopted by these various state departments are probably one of the biggest reasons why classrooms are not being added at an even faster pace. Taxpayers in this area, as in many others, are tired of being told that various plans for solving classroom shortages cannot be enacted because they would not receive state approval if they don't comply with the standards.

In all too many areas educators have developed standards of approval that are somewhat out of reach of the taxpayer. The result is that he votes no and nothing is built. Furthermore, it is not possible to adopt rules of construction that are applicable to all areas of every state.

We have yet to find any responsible citizen who is reluctant to pay his share of the cost of a good education for the nation's youngsters. We do, however, find a variety of different definitions of a good education. The solution is rather simple. Powers usurped by state and federal agencies should be returned to local boards of education.

Price, spice and everything nice!
Who ever thought a car that saves like this could have so much sizzle? Chevrolet engineers, that's who! Liveliness and luxury for a low, low price were exactly what they had in mind to begin with. And they began from scratch with a whole carload of ingenious new ideas designed to give you more car for your money. That spunky 6 with gas-sipping stinginess is just one example. Another: a new unitized Body by Fisher that's fit for a full-size family inside, easy to park outside. Still another: tough but gentle one-piece Mono-Plate rear springs that outdo many a bigger car for quiet comfort. And along with the dollar-saving dependability you just naturally expect in a Chevrolet-built car, Chevy II has a flock of features that cut upkeep costs to the bone. For example, the various front-end components—fenders, engine compartment, the works—bolt on and off to make repairing easy. Any wonder Chevy II won Car Life magazine's 1962 Engineering Excellence award hands down? (The only wonder would be if you settled for anything less—once you get your hands on one at your Chevrolet dealer's!)

Back to Africa

Dr. Norquist Thanks Area People for Hospital Gifts

Dr. Joseph Norquist, medical missionary to Tanganyika, Africa, will return to that country to resume work at the Kiomboi hospital on April 1. A doctor in Thief River Falls for two years, Dr. Norquist will take back with him equipment he has obtained while in the United States on furlough—much of it through gifts received from friends in the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire area.

Featured in a recent issue of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, Dr. Norquist noted that many persons had been eager to help when they hear about the needs of Africa. "St. Paul physicians on the staffs of Bethesda, Ancker and Children's hospitals have been helpful in introducing me to some of the most up-to-date techniques and giving me the benefit of advanced skills in the profession," he said.

In a letter to the Times, Dr. Norquist comments on the gifts and the picture which is being published in today's issue of the Times as follows:

"I am sending to you the mat of a picture that appeared in the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press showing the operating table which was bought with money received from Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Besides the operating table we were able to get a lamp for surgery, some instruments and a baby incubator. These things were all from the Faribault hospital which has recently been converted into a convalescent hospital.

"You can imagine how grateful we feel toward our many friends around Thief River Falls and we'll think often of you all as we use this equipment at Kiomboi hospital.

"We shall fly from Minnesota to Tanganyika the end of this month, arriving at Kiomboi on April 1. Our latest little son, Douglas Paul, was born on February 10 and should be a good little traveler. I hope we can hear from you from time to time and we shall attempt to write also."

In addition to the items mentioned, Dr. Norquist will take back with him about 100,000 vitamin pills for the patients. The pills and other dietary supplements are the gift of a wholesale drug company. Dr. Norquist has been referred to as the Albert Schweitzer of the Augustana Lutheran church. He and his family are completing an eightmonth furlough in the United States.

Severe Penalties Cited for Excess Wheat Acreages

Marshall County ASC Committee Reminds of Stiffer Regulations

Farmers who have excess wheat acreage were reminded today that failure to dispose of the excess in accordance with program provisions could have a number of adverse effects on the farmer's pocketbook and on his farm's acreage histroy.

Edward A. Johnson, chairman of the Marshall county agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, said that such a wheat grower not only would be ineligible for price support and any payments he might otherwise have earned under the 1962 wheat stabilization program, but he also would be subject to marketing quota penalties which are much higher for 1962 than in former years, and his farm's future wheat allotments might be reduced.

Regarding marketing quota penalties on "excess" wheat, the chairman pointed out that legislation enacted last year made material changes regarding excess wheat of the 1962 crop. The penalty has been raised to 65 percent of parity as of May 1, 1962 (instead of the previous 45 percent), and the amount of wheat subject to penalty will be twice the farm normal yield on all of the acres in excess of the allotment. If the proved 1962 actual yield is less than this amount, a reduction in the amount of the excess, based on actual production, will be made if a request is filed before a set deadline.

Mr. Johnson explained that "excess" wheat results when the grower does not comply with the farm wheat allotment (or the marketing quota exemption acreage, if this is larger). The marketing quota exemption acreage is the smaller of (a) 13.5 acres or (b) the highest acreage of wheat on the farm in any of the crop years 1959, 1960, or 1961.

Keep Your Eye on the Other Guy, Chief E. Cummings Suggests

"Keep your eye on the other guy . . . he's the big question mark in traffic."

So said Chief of Police Elton Cummings today as he warned motorists to be on their guard against the unpredictable behavior of other drivers, and pedestrians.

Chief Cummings asked local motorists to support the defensive driving program outlined in Minnesota's BLUEPRINT FOR SAFETY, a year-round traffic safety promotion project. Defensive driving is the safety theme for March.

"It isn't enough to obey the law and mind your own business," he said. "You have a moral responsibility to prevent an accident if you can. . .even if the other fellow is to blame. Be your brother's keeper and you as well as others will benefit."

"If you expect others to make up for your errors, you can expect to run slam-bang into trouble. They may be expecting you to allow for their recklessness. A fool always meets another sooner or later, and unfortunately, when that happens in traffic someone pays in grief, pain or money.

"Keep control of your car and your senses if you want to survive in March traffic. Drive at speeds that are sensible, and stay mentally and physically sharp. Obey the traffic controls that are designed by experts to make traffic run smoothly and safely. Those who ignore these factors usually end up in a hospital, or a morgue," Cummings said.

He also warned motorists to watch out for pedestrians crossing in mid-block or against traffic lights, and especially those who insist on alighting from a vehicle on the street side.

In 1921, when the American Foundation for the Blind was founded, there were estimated to be 70,500 blind people in the United States. In its recently published fortieth anniversary report, the AFB stated that there are over 355,000 blind men, women and children in the U. S.

Seminar for Retail Managers Scheduled in St. Paul Apr. 1 & 2

The Minnesota department of business development will sponsor a management seminar for Minnesota retailers in St. Paul April 1 and 2, Commissioner Tom Swain reported today.

The seminar will be presented in the State Office Building auditorium from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Sunday, April 1, and repeated at the same place at the same hours the following day.

The program, titled "Today's Revolution in Retailing," will be conducted by Ira M. Hayes, Dayton, Ohio, manager of retail methods, National Cash Register company.

With the aid of slides and other illustrations, he will discuss such subjects as: population trends, buying potential, retailing impact, mass production, mass retailing, new systems in retailing, new opportunities in retailing, the gross national product, supply and demand, free enterprise and the history of retailing.

Swain said the program has received enthusiastic praise from audiences in several parts of the country. To date it has been presented to more than 10,000 retailers, including delegates to the 1962 annual convention of the National Retail Merchants association in New York in January.

Attendance on each day of the seminar here will be limited to 250 persons.

Cooperating with the department of business development in sponsorship of the seminar are Chambers of Commerce and retail trade associations throughout the state and the Minnesota department of education.

In charge of arrangments are Paul Dove, director of the business development's division of trade law enforcement, and Wendall Maltby, industrial development manager, St. Paul Chamber of Commerce.

Dove said reservations will be handled by Maltby or through local chambers or retail associations.

ABIDING FAITH

In the quiet safety of her own home she is learning to pray, to trust in God. As she grows older she will learn that other people pray too; that other people have faith.

Sunday School will thrill her from the very first day, and her faith will grow as she learns more of the Heavenly Father's love. The Church, with its beautiful sanctuary, its inspiring music, its worshipful atmosphere, will give her a sense of reverence, of nearness to God.

As she grows, her love for the Church and for God will grow too. All through life the faith she learned when she was a tiny girl will provide a sanctuary and protect her during the many trials of life.

Are YOU helping YOUR child acquire this abiding faith?

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

IF THERE'S A NEW BABY IN YOUR FAMILY YOU SHOULD KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT ORDINARY LIFE INSURANCE

There has been such a vast increase in the number of apparently different kinds of life insurance protection that some people are understandably confused. The truth of the matter is that Equitable Reserve ordinary life insurance continues as a basic and most important form and if there's a newcomer in your family you should know the facts about it. I'll be happy to relate these to you and answer your other Planned Security questions if you are selected for an interview. In addition, at the end of the interview, I'll make a present to you of an attractive baby photo album. Just fill in the following coupon and I'll telephone you promptly if you're chosen for a visit:

DOWN IT CAME with a heavy thud when weight of ice and snow caused the collapse of a heavy awning on the front of Bjorkman's store in Thief River Falls early Friday evening. Impact of the falling brick, snow, ice and metal shook buildings across the street. The falling marquee narrowly missed two small girls who were walking toward it when it fell. Clifford Bjorkman, owner of the store who has been vacationing in California at the home of his daughter, is expected home this week.

Preliminary Plans for School Viewed by Education Board

Salary Schedule for Teachers Discussed; Two Buses Purchased

Preliminary plans for proposed construction of a new elementary and junior high school in Thief River Falls were presented for review by the board of education at the regular meeting held Thursday evening. Richard Hammel and George Klein, representing the architectural firm of Hammel and Green, were present to discuss the plans with school board members.

Two types of building construction for the junior high school building were presented for consideration—one of single-story and one of two-story construction. A large number of changes and alterations were suggested to meet the needs of the local school system and the firm was requested to make the revisions and present plans again at an adjourned meeting of the board Thursday evening, March 15.

The elementary building is being planned of single-story construction with both units -elementary and junior high school to be located on school property in the south east portion of the city. Preliminary plans presented by the architects included areas for possible future expansion, outside recreation areas and a future site for possible new high school whenever it shall become necessary.

Discuss Salary Schedule

Considerable discussion was also devoted to a salary schedule for teachers upon receipt of a proposal from the salary committee of the Thief River Falls Education association. Further discussion will be held and action taken at a Thursday afternoon adjourned meeting which will be devoted entirely to discussion of the salary schedule.

Proposed by the education association was an "index schedule" type of proposal designed to establish salary relationships which remain constant even though dollar amounts may change. Any change in base salary under the program would assure proportionate increases at all levels. Requested was a base salary of $4,850 for a beginning teacher having four years of training. Maximum salary under the plan would be $8,060 for teachers with 12 years or more of teaching experience.

The schedule calls for using the $4,350 base salary as a base figure of 1.00. Annual salary increase would be .05 or five per cent of the base amount. Serving on the association's salary committe were Fred Sorensen, Gerald Wigness and Clayton Rested.

Bus Bids Awarded

Four bids were received for two new 48-passenger school buses to be purchased by the district. One 42-passenger bus was offered as a trade-in. Tunberg Motor company was awarded the contract with a

More Than 400 Members Observe National 4-H Week

Pennington Youngsters Joined by 51 Leaders in Nation-Wide Observance

More than 400 4-H members in Pennington county observed national 4-H Club Week, March 3-10. Joining them in this observance were 51 men and women who volunteered their services as 4-H leaders, according to Paul Stelmaschuk, county agricultural agent.

Activities in Pennington county during the 4-H Week included window displays by Silverton and Steiner emphasizing safety, Mavie and Smiley emphasizing leadership and Deer Park and St. Hilaire on citizenship. In each of the local banks, posters were displayed with the theme "Learn, Live, Serve through 4-H".

The kick-off for the week began March 3 with the state radio speaking contest held on the University of Minnesota campus. From this contest, Kathleen Torgerson, Pennington county contestant, received first place. Because of this honor she presented her talk, "How Would I Present the nited States to the 'world'", to the local people over radio shortly after returning from the contest as well as to the 4-H council meeting.

Three junior leaders were interviewed over the radio concerning their roles as 4-H'ers. Gloria Philipp, Nancy Newton and Deanna Burtness discussed the aims and purpose of a 4-H organization.

Several news releases were published and the county agent's radio program was devoted to 4-H Club Week.

Pennington Co GOP Conducts '62 Convention

40 Persons Attend Lively Session and Adopt Resolutions

A lively interest in the coming political campaign was evinced by more than 40 persons who attended the biennial Pennington county Republican convention in the Rex Cafe Friday evening.

Stanley Mortenson served as convention chairman, while Mrs. Yvonne Bredeson was named chairman of the credentials committee; Jarvis Prichard and Dr. David M. Brown of Goodridge, resolutions committee; and A. F. Berge, rules committee.

Five delegates were appointed to attend the district convention at Detroit Lakes April 6 and 7, and the state convention in Minneapolis April 7, 8 and 9. Included are Mortenson, Mrs. Bredeson, A. F. Berge, Dr. Brown and Peter Probasco.

David Stenseth, district GOP field man, introduced Ed Bayuk of White Bear Lake, prospective candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of secretary of state. Bayuk urged the election of a full slate of Republican state officers to support Governor Elmer L. Andersen.

Greetings to the county organization were read from the governor and from Robert Forsythe, state GOP chairman.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing three amendments to the Minnesota constitution to be voted on in the November election. No. 1 would give more latitude in the investment of state trust funds; No. 2 would authorize an increase in the state debt limit from the present figure of $250,000; and No. 3 provides for increasing the length of the legislature's sessions from 90 days to 120 days.

Other resolutions opposed the farm program advocated by the department of agriculture on the ground that it provides for too much regimentation and would tend to destroy the family-size farm; endorsed the work of Governor Andersen, State Auditor Stafford King and State Treasurer Val Bjornson; and commended the governor for seeking tax reform and for setting up a study commission.

Mauritson of Shelly, president the past nine years, who was defeated by Dan Holtz of Hawick, Minnesota, director from the First district.

"Old Washington" Declared Sub-Standard by Engineer

LHS Students Register for 1962-63 Schedule

Registration for the coming school year will be held this week at Lincoln high school, according to Richard Edlund, senior high school principal. All students in grades seven through 11 this year will be required to select the subjects which they will be taking during the 1962-63 school term.

"We encourage all students, and their parents, to carefully consider what courses will be taken," Edlund said. "Because of the stringent schedule made necessary by full use of all available classroom space, students will not be permitted to change their courses after school begins next year.

"It must be remembered that the number of teachers we hire is largely dependent upon this advance registration. Any class change requested at a later date will necessarily have to be contingent upon class size, teacher schedules and space limitations."

Students in grades 7 and 8 this year will register for 8th and 9th grade subjects on Wednesday and Thursday respectively. Students in grade 11 will register for senior subjects on Wednesday; those in grade 10 will register for junior subjects on Thursday and youngsters in grade 9 will register for sophomore subjects on Friday. Each student who graduates must have one senior high school science and one mathematics course in the 10th, 11th and 12th grades.

Sophomore students are required to take English, American history and physical education. Electives are biology, algebra, advanced algebra, plane geometry, senior high math, Latin II, Spanish II, typing, agriculture II, machine metals, chemistry and plane-solid geometry.

Junior students are required to take English and American history. Electives are world history, senior high math, algebra, advanced algebra, plane geometry, plane-solid geometry, analytic trigonometry, biology, chemistry, physics, electronics, woodworking, drawing, typing, bookkeeping, shorthand I, retailing, agriculture III, home economics, Spanish I, Spanish II, French I, Latin I, German I, art, speech and music theory.

Seniors are required to take English and social studies. Electives are basically the same as junior classes with the addition of probability, advanced senior science, advanced woodworking, auto mechanics, shorthand II, office practices, distributive education, Latin II, Spanish III and agriculture IV.

Mrs. Lenora Silk of Fosston is visiting a few days here with her sister, Mrs. Sophie Storholm.

Load Limits on Roads in County Begin March 20

Road restrictions will go into effect March 20 and all roads in Pennington county will be posted with load limits, according to Joseph Seidel, Pennington county highway engineer. He urged farmers to attempt completion of grain and other hauling before that date since special permits can not be issued.

General load limit on unsurfaced roads will be four tons per axle, the engineer said, with blacktop surfaces generally limited to five-ton capacities. If severe break-up conditions appear on unsurfaced roads, the restrictions will be dropped to two tons per axle, he said.

Limits will remain in effect until road conditions warrant lifting of the restrictions—generally on or about May 15.

Grygla Shipping Ass'n. Shows Net Gain During 1961

Grygla Cooperative Shipping association marketed a total of 7,981 head of livestock with a net value of $198,406 during 1961, it was reported at the annual meeting held recently in the Mar-Bel Hall at Grygla. The net value represented an increase of $28,679 from the previous year and the number of head shipped increased by 3,132.

Roy Anderson of Goodridge and Alton Anderson of Grygla were reelected to the board of directors for three-year terms. Other directors of the association include Arnold Stanley, Clarence Peterson and Thomas Smith. Discussion at the meeting was held concerning construction of a loading barn with a view toward construction of such a facility in the near future.

Main increase in the number of livestock shipped was noted in the sheep division which nearly doubled during 1961 to a total of 6,357. During 1961 cattle shipped increased from 795 to 922, calves increased from 312 to 346 and hogs dropped slightly from 387 to 356.

Trucking expense for the year totaled $10,676 with 806 consignments for 72 truck loads. Total disbursements other than trucking for the year were $1,044. The association has total assets of $2,151.

Inspection Report Received by School Board Lists Many Hazards

"On the basis of the above (report on inspection), it would be inadvisable to continue use of the Washington building in its present condition. To attempt to remedy all of the known defects appears to be uneconomical." This was the recommendation made by Milan A. Johnston of the engineering firm of Johnston-Sahlman company of Minneapolis received in the form of a letter and reviewed by the Thief River Falls board on education on Thursday.

At a previous meeting of the board, an inspection of the building by a qualified, impartial consulting engineer was ordered. The Johnson-Sahlman firm was engaged to conduct the inspection and make a report to the board. Survey work was begun on February 27 and completed last week. Old Washington was built in 1901, contains eight classrooms, janitorial headquarters and storage as well as lockers for junior high school girls.

Johnston, in his report to the board, stated, "The structural and other defects listed could be remedied by the expenditure of approximately $83,500, thus keeping in service 6,000 net square feet of academic classroom space, 750 square feet in each of eight classrooms. (Modern classrooms are recommended today to be 900 square feet net for junior high school and 800 for senior high.)"

New Construction Feasible

Cost of 6,000 square feet net or 9,000 square feet gross, including walls, corridors and stairs, would be approximately $125,000 if new construction, the engineer added. "New construction, compared to renovated old construction, can naturally be expected to perform with far less on-going maintenance," he said.

Added to the repair cost noted by the engineer if Old Washington was to be renovated would be approximately $16,000 for a sprinkler fire control system, it was noted by M. R. Hankerson, superintendent of schools. This would bring the renovation cost to approximately $100,000.

"The Old Washington building falls well below the minimum standards of the state department of education for new school house construction, as is to be expected of a building now 60 years old," the engineer reported. "Mechanical and electrical systems which have not been inspected may be assumed to be sub-standard. The cost of their improvement or replacement has not been accurately estimated."

Among structural defects listed by Johnson were the following:

Holt Telephone Co. Ends Era

by Marvin Lundin
City Editor

It was 29 years ago when Hartley Peterson agreed to serve as operator for the Farmers and Village Switchboard company at Holt for a week or so until someone else could be secured. About three weeks from now he will see the company he has managed for 23 years be converted to dial service through the Wikstrom Telephone company which has purchased the exchange.

Everything started back around 1910 when farmers who had built their own rural lines decided they should purchase a switchboard and expand the communication network. The small unit was first placed in the Evergreen Hotel, a building since torn down, with a man by the name of Riesberg as the first operator. John Sorum was first president of the company.

In 1911 a new switchboard was purchased, and with the exception of replaced fuses and a fairly regular change of batteries, it has been in operation ever since. The present office, actually a front room of the Peterson resi-

NEW BUILDING which will house equipment for dial service on the Holt telephone exchange is pictured here. Equipment will be of 100-line capacity with 60 lines operational when dial service is initiated. This modern equipment is a far cry from the faithful battery-operated switchboard which has served the Holt exchange for 51 years. The exchange has been purchased by Wikstrom Telephone company with headquarters in Karlstad.

OLD OFFICE of the Farmers and Village Switchboard Company, better known as the Holt telephone exchange, has been used for 40 years. Another portion of the building was previously used by the Holt Weekly News, a weekly newspaper which has long since ceased to exist. The heavy cable running from the pole into the building at the center of the photo was built by Hartley Peterson, company manager, and his wife more than 20 years ago when commercial cable was not available. It has functioned flawlessly ever since.

Trinity Mother's Circle Adopts Korean Child

Park Yung Nok, a thirteen year old from Korea, who lives at the Ho Sung Home near Chunju is the adopted son of the Trinity Mother's Circle. Yung Nok, whose name means "ever famous", has been living at the Home ever since the end of the Korean War when his mother became missing and his father contracted leprosy, making it necessary for him to enter a colony for treatment. There were then no relatives or friends who could keep Yung Nok and he joined his father.

The Ho Sung Home learned of the boy's plight and accepted him for care. Yung Nok, just like many American boys, is in the fifth grade at school and says social studies is his favorite subject. His daily chores consist of tidying the school grounds and his favorite sport is football. As to a vocational choice he is undecided.

Ho Sung Bo Yook Won, the Home where Yung Nok lives, was established in July of 1953 through the work and concern of Mr. Yoo Pan Jin. A former leper, but now completely cured, he was greatly distressed to find that non-leprous children were continuing to live with their diseased parents. With the approval of the government, this Christian layman gathered thirty such non-diseased youngsters into deserted buildings on the Chunju River. Realizing this was only a "drop in the bucket" in meeting the needs of the families of Korea's 200,000 lepers, he appealed to the churches for much-needed assistance.

Slowely the work grew and he was able to receive more children. The land and buildings were purchased and more structures were erected to house the growing "family". Elementary and junior high schooling were soon provided and the children are now also being trained for such specific vocations as farming, weaving, dressmaking and others. Careful teaching is also given in the Bible and daily prayer marks the routine of the youngsters.

It is truly a happy Home where the boys and girls learn to play, study and work together in Christian love. On any day you might see the older children in the recreation area, joining in football, volley-ball, or ping pong, while the younger ones jump rope, play tag and other simple games. Chores, too, are faithfully performed and the motto of the Home is "Endeavor, Faith and Endurance!"

Rising every day at 6 a. m., the children join in morning prayer, after which each shares in the chores of tidying the home. After breakfast at 8, they attend school until 4 with a luncheon intermission at noon. A few chores and robust play until dinner at 6 are followed by recreation or studies until 9. The children are again reminded to "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow" in the evening vesper-hour and peace descends upon the household as they retire for the night.

Cheesecake is a dessert most people have heard of but few have ever tried. Contrary to what one might believe, it does not taste like cheese at all but has a different and pleasing flavor all its own.

CHESECAKE

Crust:

1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup powdered sugar
1 tsp. allspice
¼ cup melted butter

Spread in the bottom of a 9-inch pan, pressing some up around the sides.

2 8-oz. pkgs. cream cheese at room temp.
2-3 cup sugar
2 eggs beaten slightly
2 tsp. vanilla extract

Stir cheese until soft and creamy. Add eggs, sugar, and vanilla. Beat until thoroughly creamed and smooth. Pour into crust. Bake in a 350 degree oven 25 minutes. Top with a mixture of:

1½ cups commercial sour cream
4 tsp. sugar
2 tsp. vanilla extract

Return to oven, increase temperature to 450 degrees F. and bake seven minutes. Cool. This is a very rich dessert, so serve in small pieces.

HAPPY HOMEMAKING

PENNINGTON COUNTY HOME AGENT

This past week has been another week of sewing workshops. This week also a bit of information passed across my desk and I wish to pass it on to you. Well organized storage of sewing equipment and supplies is both a time and motion saver.

Probably most effective is a well-lighted closet especially designed to hold the sewing supplies. Some of the special storage you may wish to include are an open shelf for baskets, magazines and boxes, shallow drawers for trimmings, facings and yard good and deeper drawers for patterns, mending and larger articles.

Homemakers will find it useful to have one section in the closet with a rod to hang garments which are being constructed or mended, with space left free for a dress form, ironing board and possibly a waste basket.

The doors are also a useful place for storage. Here you can fasten a rack for the pattern in use, one for thread, another for containers holding small supplies plus hooks for scissors. A full lenth mirror hung on the other door may be helpful.

For the homemaker doing less sewing, a well-arranged chest located near the sewing machine, where the light is good, will often care for family's sewing needs. Sometimes hassocks are made to hold the mending supplies. Dividers and trays help to make both the chest and the hassock storage easier to organize.

Many 4-H'ers who enrolled in Farm and Home Shop make desks for the home. Here are some measurements that could come in handy when planning a desk. If the space available is only 12 inches deep, it will give you shelf storage. The 16-inch minimum work surface can be supplied by a pullout shelf or a drop-down door.

Here are other measurements to consider in planning for your built-in desk unit: the secion enclosed by a drop lid needs to be at least 12 inches high to hold business papers, but 14 is preferable to provide a more usable working surface. The minimum width, based on maximum elbow spread, is 32 inches; however, 36 inches permits greater freedom of movement. A height of 28 inches rather than the customary 30 inches is more comfortable as a writing surface for students and many adults.

The Library Corner

by Eleanor Olson

Certainly the major effort of "fasting" during Lent falls not upon the individual members of a family as much as it does upon mother as cook. There is a constant challenge in trying to provide interesting, enticing menus day in and day out with a major emphasis on fish, eggs, and cheese.

But how much more difficult it must have been for the people of the Middle Ages who were forbidden the use of all dairy products during the Lenten season. Households which could afford them used almonds imported from Spain as a source of milk for cooking. What a major undertaking crushing almonds for milk would have been.

In an effort to gain a few new ideas for my own menus, I have from time to time brought home an assortment of cookbooks from the technical shelves at the library. One of my Friday standbys as a result has become Cheese Blintzs, a thin egg roll filled with cottage cheese, browned in butter and served with either sour cream or cinnamon-sugar.

When I had eaten these in restaurants I had considered them a true delicacy and I was so glad to find a recipe that I could make successfully. I use the International Egg Roll recipe in Leah Leonard's "Jewish Cookery," but I thin out the batter still more and bake them in my electric fry pan.

Other good meat substitutes can be found among Italian recipes now so popular. Lasagna with a mushroom sauce is a spicy treat. "The New Settlement Cookbook" has other macaroni and spaghetti recipes that sound good. Macaroni with oysters struck my fancy.

It would be wonderful to live near the ocean so we could have access to fresh sea food, but since we don't I am always on the lookout for recipes and used for canned fish products. "The New Settlement Cookbook" has several of these as well as several recipes for pickling herring. Many people here may have family recipes for this but I didn't know it could be done at home until my energetic elderly neighbor brought us a jar for Christmas.

Rice dishes are another good Lenten meat substitute. The "Fannie Farmer" cookbook suggests rice baked with cheese and rice croquettes, both of which sound easy. And have you remembered old fashioned fried mush or hominey grits served with creamy scrambled eggs as a complement. And soon I must make "English Monkey", a variation of Welsh Rabbit, using bread crumbs.

Of all the cook books I brought home I found Gladys Tabor's "What Cooks at Stillmeadow" the most enjoyable. A woman after my own heart, she has organized a cookbook which utilizes simple ingredients that one is likely to have on hand without making a special shopping trip.

As a busy writer who washes her own dishes, she likes to produce meals with as few pains and as little fuss as possible. Her book includes many hurry-up recipes which one might serve unexpected company without relying heavily on instant foods or expensive mixes. In these days when every magazine features recipes using instant products, this cookbook offers many ideas to the hurr-up cook.

Cooking, to be fun, must after all appeal not only to the imagination, but satisfy a creative urge as well. Both are very improtant if producing those essential three meals a day that families demand is going to be anythin gbut drudgery.

Predicts End to Farm Commodities Surplus

It seems certain that the era of continuous buildup of government stocks of surplus agricultural products and increasing expenditures on farm programs will end during the sixties, said Elmer Learn in Minneapolis March 12.

Learn, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Minnesota, spoke at the opening session of the Farm Forum in the Leamington Hotel.

He stated that "The day is close at hand when the American public will no longer support farm policies that fail to deal with the basic imbalance that exists. That day may come in 1962, or it may not come until 1965 or 1966, but it seems certain that the era of continuous buildup in government stocks and-or government expenditures for agriculture will end during the sixties.

"In less sophisticated terminology, farmers and farm-related industries cannot continue for long to have their cake and eat it too."

In citing alternatives to the present U. S. farm policy, Learn said that "First of all, we must recognize clearly that there is no such thing as a solution to the kind of problem we have in agriculture. Because of the widely varying interests and differing goals and values of the people involved, no action is going to be satisfactory to everyone concerned.

"Furthermore, we live in a dynamic world -conditions are constantly changing. A program considered reasonable satisfactory for 1962 may be wholly unsatisfactory in 1965 or 1970. Thus, what we are really striving for is to alter conditions so that the situation can be made somewhat better than it otherwise would be.

"In other words, we merely alleviate the effects of economic and social problems. We never really solve them. This alleviation of the farm headache will not result from a massive attack by any one approach, said Learn. "It will come about in the future as it has in the past by employing a variety of approaches."

Learn warned that "If agricultural incomes are to be maintained at their recent level, our approaches are going to have to include programs that provide more effective regulation of supply than we have had in the past. If we are going to maintain farm incomes, we are going to have to find means of bringing production into balance with needs even when those needs are supplemented by domestic and foreign demand programs. Let me emphasize that in the longer-run, this means enabling production to grow at a rate consistent with the rate of growth in demand."

Old Washington School Explained as Sub-Standard

The 2x12 joists under the second floor classroom, southeast corner of the building, are substandard. "These joists are so springy that it is possible for one man to shake the walls and rattle the windows by jumping on the floor in the center of the room."

The north wall from the second floor to the roof in the northeast classroom is separating from the load-bearing partition of the corridor. Second floor joists run parallel to the wall and a tie to the corridor is needed to brace it. When the tie is broken, as evidenced by the crack, the situation continues to widen.

Because of wood shrinkage and the deflection of the joists, a large percentage of the finished floor planks are loose, wavy and squeaky. Some plank ends are broken, leaving holes in the floor.

"The above structural defects make this building sub-standard," the report says. "These conditions coupled with the age of the building reduce the safety factor below that required by accepted building codes, and definitely should be corrected if further use of this building is intended."

Fire Hazard Considered

Of primary concern to the board was the statement in the report which noted, "The non fire-resistant construction of this building is in itself hazardous, but the lack of adequate exits from the second floor is not tolerable by any fire code. If it were not for the steel fire escape from the second floor northwest classroom, the second floor should not be occupied for another day. A satisfactory inside stairway should be constructed."

Other defects listed were windows in bad condition, cracks in the masonry walls above second floor level which should be caulked to preserve the watertightness of the wall, roof membrane worn out and a new roof badly needed, wooden facia and soffit rotted, gutters and downspouts in bad repair with facia best removed and rebuilt and a new roof drainage system of gutters and downspouts necessary.

Recommended improvements estimated in the $83,500 repair figure—include post supports, $3,000; wall bracing, $2,000; fireproof stair from second floor, $16,000; new roof membrane, $2,000; new roof facias, $2,000; gutters and downspouts, $1,500; replace windows, $10,000; tuckpoint and caulk, $2,000; mechanical, $12,000; electrical, $10,000; new ceiling surface, $5,000; and rebuild floors and resurface, $18,000.

Preliminary Plans for New School Viewed by Board

low bid for the two buses of $11,532. They will have a Ford chassis and Wayne body. The other three bidders were all local auto dealers.

Granted by the board was a perpetual easement on a portion of the school's athletic field property to the Valley Home Society to permit the society to have access to the rear of the proposed new building on the south edge of the city. The area leased is entirely outside the fenced athletic field and has not been used by the school in previous years.

John Burtness reported on the meeting of the fact-finding committee concerning salary of bus drivers. No recommendation was made in the report and it was ordered filed by the board without any formal action being taken. The meeting was held March 3 following a union request for salary increases for school bus drivers.

Four teachers who have reached the retirement age of 65 were granted one-year extensions to continue teaching provided they pass physical examinations. They include Miss Thora Skomedal, high school English; Miss Olga Bloomsness, elementary principal at Knox school; Miss Susan Anderson, cosmetology instructor at the area vocational school; and C. W. Pope, carpentry instructor at the vocational school.

Receipt of a report from the consulting engineer in regard to an inspection of the old Washington building is covered elsewhere in today's Times.

100 Attend North Minn. Shipping Ass'n. Meeting

State FU President Is Guest Speaker at Roseau; Wilson Renamed Chairman

Approximately 100 patrons attended the annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Farmers Union Shipping Association held March 9 at Roseau. Edwin Christianson, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union, was guest speaker at the meeting, stating that the outlook for the livestock economy is much better than could have have been hoped for 15 months ago.

"At that time, the agricultural economists, looking at the buildup of livestock numbers, warned of a price collapse on livestock in 1962 if another huge addition was added to the caryy-over of feed surpluses as a result of 1961 production," Christianson said. "The continued increase in livestock numbers still is serious but price disaster was averted because of the 1961 feed grains program."

Reelected directors of the association were J. S. Eatling, Warroad; George Helmstetter, Roosevelt; and Oliver Venaas, Roseau. Reelected officers were Archie Wilson, Goodridge, president; Bernard Myers, Thief River Falls, vice president; and Lloyd Nelson, Thief River Falls, secretary-treasurer. Other directors are Charles Egestad, Edgar Naplin of Red Lake Falls and Arne Samuelson of Viking.

Christianson added that while improvement is still needed in hog, beef and sheep prices, the situation is reasonably stable and carries some hope of further improvement.

He stressed the need for government control of feed grain production by stating, "The biggest mistake which could be made is for livestock producers to imagine that there would be an improvement if the farm programs were eliminated and the entire livestock-feed grains economy were to operate on the free market."

Scholarships for Practical Nursing Are Available

Several State and Local Scholarships Available for Potential Students

Scholarships available for practical nursing students make it possible for many women to go into nursing who might otherwise be unable to finance such an education. No person who really wants to be a practical nurse need be deprived of the opportunity because of its cost.

Through several local and state scholarships, those students who wish to enroll in a practical nursing program will be able to secure funds to cover the cost of the program, it was announced today by Miss Adeline Iverson, director of the practical nursing program at the local area vocational school.

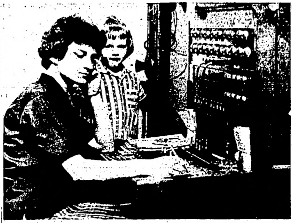
To be eligible for a scholarship, the student must first be accepted by an accredited school of nursing. Therefore, early application to the school will facilitate securing a scholarship. The scholarships most frequently granted are given on a basis of financial need.

Northwestern Hospital Employees' Baby Scholarship Loan Fund is granted by the Northwestern Hospital Scholarship Committee. The scholarship is repaid on completion of the course at a minimum rate of interest. Mrs. John Wold, chairman of the committee, may be contacted for further information.

The scholarship granted by the Thief River Falls Foundation may be granted on a loan basis or may be repaid by working at Northwestern Hospital for a designated period of time following graduation. For further information concerning this scholarship, contact Robert Lund or Norman Peterson, administrator of Northwestern Hospital.

Scholarships granted by the Minnesota Board of Nursing require that the graduate practice nursing in Minnesota for a period of 1 year following completion of the course.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Ellingson motored to Binford N D Saturday, taking her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Barcley home after they had spent the winter months with the Ellingsons.



SWITCHBOARD operations have been the same at the Holt telephone exchange since 1911 when this Western Electric switchboard was installed. The board is battery-operated with three 1½-volt dry cell batteries for talking and four 1½-volt batteries for ringing. The batteries for talking last about three months and the others about a year. Current operator is Mrs. Bonnie Larson, shown here with her three-year-old daughter Shawn. Mrs. Larson's husband was killed in an auto accident and Shawn spends each working day with her mother at the telephone office. In 1960 the office handled 2,641 out-going long distance calls. Ringing from the board is magneto-operated by the crank shown at the lower center of the picture.

29 YEARS as operator or manager of the Farmers and Village Switchboard company of Holt will come to an end this month for Hartley Peterson. April 1 has been set as the target date for conversion to dial service under the Wikstrom Telephone company which has purchased the exchange. In addition to managing the company, a job termed "very confining," Peterson has served on many community organizations and committees and is active in Boy Scout work. Some of the many books he collects and reads as a hobby are shown in the background.

Holt Telephone Exchange Ends 52-Year History

dence, has been in use for 40 years. It is the only place Peterson has called home since he came to this area from Crookston about 30 years ago.

Those were the days when a dollar meant something. "I can remember that I worked for a salary of $20 per month," Peterson told me as we sat in the office one afternoon last week. "I had free fuel and lights in addition to the salary."

Now slightly gray at the temples and much wiser for his years of duty, Hartley remembers when T. B. Fokken retired as original secretary of the company about 27 years ago. None of the other board members wanted to do the book work.

Board Votes a Raise

"The board met in here all afternoon, trying to figure out how they were going to keep the books straight. They asked me if I would do it and I told them I could. Then they started to talk about additional salary and I got a generous raise. If I kept the books, they decided, they would pay me $20.50 per month instead of the $20 I had been receiving. They hired a cheap bookkeeper."

About 23 years ago Hartley decided to call it quits. The board didn't want him to leave, so they offered to sell it for a "reasonable" amount. The end result was a lease agreement for the village portion of the exchange with the farmers still maintaining their own lines.

Married in 1936 to Margaret Sagstuen, Hartley had a natural for his business. His wife served as operator until her death in 1950 and the exchange showed a profit. Twenty years ago Hartley took on the Standard Oil bulk agency in Holt and two years ago added the plant in Middle River to his business. In 1947 he rebuilt the entire outside telephone plant, renovating lines and phones within the village. He gained his knowledge of phones at the school of hard knocks, learning by trial and error.

Holt may or may not know it, but they have a valued citizen in Hartley Peterson. Since his wife died he has hired operators to run the office and, assisted by his son Donovan who operated the switchboard since he was seven years old, it has functioned every weekday from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m. and 7 a. m. to noon and 6 to 8 p. m. on Sundays and holidays.

Delivers Messages

"I've delivered a lot of messages in these 29 years to people who didn't have phones of their own. There have been many messages of death in the family—several of sons killed in action during the war. It got so that when people saw me coming when I wasn't expected they would immediately ask, 'What's the matter?' "

In spite of his oil business, operating the exchange and rearing a family, Hartley has found time to "serve on just about every committee and organization there is around here". Much of his time is devoted to work in the Boy Scout organization, since he serves as scoutmaster at Holt and serves on the board of the Lake Agassiz Council.

Mrs. Bonnie Larson of Holt, who lost her husband in an auto accident, is the last of more than a dozen operators who have worked at the Holt office. Perhaps the most devoted to duty was Mrs. Cel Erickson who was operator for seven years after Mrs. Peterson's death, working until the fall of 1961 when Mrs. Larson succeeded her.

"I never asked an operator to come before 9 o'clock," Hartley said, but Cel was nearly always here at eight. She ate her meals here and frequently stayed until the exchange closed that night."

No More General Ring

Services of the rural exchange operator will disappear with the advance of progress. Holt is without organized fire fighting forces, and a general ring has long been used to summon aid in an emergency. The last such emergency was when Olaf Ness' typha plant burned on Nov. 23, 1947.

"I can remember that," Bonnie said. "I was in the eighth grade at school and I can still see Walter Larson on the roof of his Cities Service station next door to the typha plant, throwing buckets of water on the fire." Larson was holding the grand opening of his station that day.

Other service expected of the operator will be missing when dial service arrives. No longer can subscribers call by name alone; no more can they call "central" for information on church services, funerals and school events. For many the black talking machine with the perforated dial will be a cold public servant.

At one time the exchange area covered about 60 square miles. Today the area has shrunk to about 20 square miles due to lines which have gone down and not been repaired. The area immediately northwest of the village has had no phones for about 10 years. The Ringbo area northeast of Holt has had no phones for more than 30 years.

Wikstrom Comments

Dial service must be attractive, however, since George Wikstrom, president of the Wikstrom Telephone company, told the Times that only three people contacted in the area did not install phones. He expects approximately 140 initial subscribers. New lines consist entirely of buried cable with approximately 90 miles of cable used in the exchange.

Odds are that rates will never be the same—and that is to be expected. Synonymous with the changeover will come extended area service, permitting Holt subscribers to call Thief River Falls, Viking and Newfolden without toll charge. Target date for the dial conversion has been set as April 1, dependent upon receipt and installation of needed equipment. Current annual rates are $8 rural, $10 village party line, $12 village private line and $16 business rate.

Only five business phones remain in the city—the post office, Cities Service station, school, creamery and Peterson's own Standard bulk station. With the end of Peterson's phone exchange will come the end of the only telephone number he has ever had—lucky No. 7.

Although he estimates he lost $3,000 in the last 10 years by operating the exchange, Peterson says he will "kind of miss it". "I've never paid a telephone bill in my life," he noted, then hastily added, "except for long distance. I think I call more than any person in this area. I never write when I can use the phone."

Hartley is the first to admit the exchange isn't real busy. None-the-less, a total of 2,641 out-going long distance calls were handled in 1960, the latest year for which he could find total records. The changeover to dial will be both the beginning and end of an era in Holt. For Hartley, who hopes to make the last call on the exchange to his son in California, it will certainly be a memorable occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Peder Moe and Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hanson of Argyle were Monday dinner guests at the Sheldon Mortrud home.

C of C Government Committee Hears Glenn Scott Talk

National Fieldman Urges Congressional Action Committee Formation Here

Purpose of the United States Chamber of Commerce is preservation of free enterprise through voluntary action, stated Glenn Scott, Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. Chamber of Commerce fieldman, in addressing the government committee of the local Chamber of Commerce Thursday noon in the Rex Cafe. Scott also appeared Friday in Crookston and East Grand Forks.

Scott urged organization of a congressional action committee within the local Chamber, and noted that the national organization provides a newsletter and reports on pending legislation to assist such a committee. Purpose of the committee would be to study legislation, educate the public and encourage individual expressions of opinion by residents of the community.

The fieldman also mentioned action courses in practical politics, calling attention to the current "Freedom versus Communism" campaign. This eight-session course compares the economics of free enterprise in relation to the Communist doctrine of government ownership.

Introduced by Les Ihle, chairman of the government committee, Scott called attention to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Aircade for Citizenship Action to be held in St. Paul Friday, March 16. He showed slides of previous aircades and noted that between 2,000 and 3,000 persons were expected to attend. He also urged the local Chamber of Commerce to be represented at the event.

Speakers at the meeting will include Richard Wagner and Arch N. Booth, respective president and executive vice president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. The aircade will start at 9:25 a. m. in the theatre section of the St. Paul municipal auditorium and a person need not be a member of the Chamber of Commerce in order to attend.

Panels of experts at the aircade will discuss such issues as trade legislation, education, labor, compulsory health care, tax reform, agriculture and how to develop effective citizenship programs on national issues. Robert Griffith of the R. B. Griffith company in Grand Forks will be one of the panelists.

Finishing the year with a cash balance of $2,712, the association paid a dividend of 4½ per cent for the year with $970 returned in dividend. Shares totaled $29,536 with 146 members in the association at the end of the year. A total of 101 loans were made in 1961 with loans outstanding at the end of 1961 totaling $27,848.

James Thompson of the Agassiz National Wildlife refuge showed the slide series on marshland which he has prepared with narration written by Marvin Lundin of the Times. The association board will reorganize Wednesday, March 21.

Tranquillity Lacking in Many People Today

Today many of our ministers, popular writers, psychologists and teachers are urging tranquillity. The medical profession, with the help of the laboratory scientists, is using tranquilizing drugs to help achieve "peace of mind."

Why is this need so great today? Physicians in general practice often estimate that over 80 per cent of their patients do not have organic disease. Their troubles are physical disturbances based on emotional upset. Doctors also realize that many mental disturbances also are based on emotional upheaval.

The human body reacts as a whole to external or environmental happenings. If a person is worried, his appetite fails, his digestion becomes poor and he doesn't think well. Together these develop an abnormal upset of the nervous system. Sudden fright will cause you to feel this way. These same symptoms will occur, though more insidiously, with mental and emotional unease.

The part of the human nervous system that controls this type of behavior is known as the sympathetic or autonomic nervous system. It is an automatic system over which we have no control. It is responsible for most of our reflex activity and is sensitive to stimulations of which we are not aware.

Pills will not achieve tranquillity or peace of mind. The only way to achieve this is to order our lives and our behavior so that irresponsible impulses will not affect our nervous system. This is not an easy task in these times of many stresses and strains. It must be expected that there will be a certain amount of emotional upheaval with resultant troubles in our physical and mental behavior patterns. And, if these stresses become greater than a person can bear, it becomes imperative that he seek help.

A minister can be of great help. The well educated man of God today is well trained in counselling and understands many of the problems that are found in everyday living. He is able to help sift out the essentials and point the way to better acceptance of the elements that are important to everyday living. There are also trained psychologists and counsellors whose profession is to help people achieve peace of mind, says the Minnesota State Medical Association.

The family physician can be of inestimable help. If he cannot lessen problems, he can at least point out how they affect your physical and mental well being. In this way he can "short circuit" the vicious cycle that prevents you from having peace of mind.

Keep Windshields Clean for Safety

Highway Department Gives Tips to Motorists

Keeping windshields and windows free of frost and ice is a "breeze" if you know the tricks of smart driving, says the Minnesota highway department.

Many motorists do not realize that the use of the heater fan will speed-up defrosting operations during cold and blustery weather of late spring. This is especially true when cars are parked or being driven at slower speeds in city driving.

Often a slight opening of a car window or air vent will also help speed up defrosting by allowing outside air to mix with the virtual "vacuum" that has built up inside the vehicle parked with windows closed for a long period of time.

It is also wise to leave a window opened slightly while driving during cold weather to offset the carbon monoxide fumes that might build up inside a car. It takes less than one per cent by volume of these fumes to be deadly; and this point can be easily reached inside a closed car which may have a defective exhaust system.

In many ways, fresh air can kill driving hazards before they kill motorists. It is wise to keep it around in abundance.

You must have a clear picture of the road ahead to spot dangers if you want to avoid them, and you must have a clear head if you are to stay alert and ready to maneuver quickly, according to the Highway Department. So keep wits and windshield clear if you want to keep on driving.

Mrs. Freeman to Speak at Dinner in Minneapolis

Mrs. Orville L. Freeman will give Minnesota DFL women an inside look at life in the nation's capitol at a luncheon scheduled in her honor, Saturday, March 17, 1 p. m. at Schiek's Cafe in Minneapolis.

This will be the first official visit back to the state for Minnesota's former first lady since her husband was appointed Secretary of Agriculture by President Kennedy in 1960.

Washington, D. C. society and politics as a cabinet official's wife will be discussed by Mrs. Freeman, who has been very active in both circles since her residence in the capital city.

The luncheon for Mrs. Freeman is being sponsored by Fifth District DFL women.

Pennington Second In Region Sale of Christmas Seals

Mahnomen County Leads With 104 Per Cent of 1960 Total Now Attained

Pennington and Roseau counties are among 23 listed in the state for having 1961 Christmas Seal sales which exceeded 1960 receipts to date, according to the monthly publication of the Minnesota Tuberculosis and Health association.

Pennington is second only to Mahnomen county in the Northwest Region in percentage of 1960 total attained, the report reveals. Mahnomen had collections of $761 in 1961 to exceed the 1960 total of $722 and gain a rating of 104 per cent. Pennington had 1961 sales of $2,739 as compared with $2,639 the previous year for 102 per cent.

Other counties in the region, amounts collected in 1961 and percentage of 1960 totals are as follows: Becker, $2,930 and 96 per cent; Beltrami, $2,724 and 91 per cent; Cass, $2,282 and 98 per cent; Clearwater, $1,500 and 98 per cent; Hubbard, $1,320 and 96 per cent; Itasca, $6,441 and 95 per cent;

Also Kittson, $1,990 and 96 per cent; Koochiching, $3,095 and 87 per cent; Lake of the Woods, $626 and 95 per cent; Marshall, $3,127 and 96 per cent; Polk, $8,047 and 91 per cent; Red Lake, $932 and 94 per cent; and Roseau, $2,140 and 100 per cent.

Minnesota's grand total to date is $720,757 for the 1961 sale as compared with $719,135 for 1960. The 1960 total was $735,485, making the 1961 collections 98 per cent of the 1960 total.

Some Veterans May Forfeit Payments

Many Have Failed to Report 1961 Incomes

Possible loss of current pension payments plus retroactive repayment of pension money received during 1961 confront many hundreds of veterans and widows of deceased veterans who have failed to return their annual income questionnaires, John R. Parrish, Fargo VA Center director, said today.

The law makes it mandatory that completed questionnaires be received from each pension recipient to determine whether annual income from all other sources exceeds the legal ceilings, he explained.

In issuing the warning, Mr. Parrish expressed the fear that more than 410 North Dakota veterans, or veteran's widows, may face loss of current pension and be forced to pay back all pension payments received during 1961.

Even though the announced deadline for returning the questionnaires has passed (January 31, 1962), the Veterans Administration will still accept questionnaires sent in now to avoid hardship upon eligible pension recipients. Prompt action will be necessary to avoid the demand for repayment of all pension payments received during 1961 Mr. Parrish said.

Lawrence Lubitz Honored for Sales Friday, Saturday

Lawrence Lubitz of Tunberg Motor Co., Thief River Falls, will be presented Ford Motor Company's 300-500 Club award at a banquet in Moorhead at the Frederick-Martin Hotel this evening, Monday, honoring high-ranking Ford dealership car and truck salesmen of 1961 in the Fargo Ford sales district.

O. G. Lundstrom, Fargo district sales manager, said 300-500 Club membership awards are presented for excellent retail sales performance.

Lundstrom added that the average 300-500 Club member sold nearly $400,000 worth of automotive merchandise in qualifying for the national honors.

Viking Student Aids in UND Play

Ah! 'Tis a kiss of Spring in the air to be sure. This week will be climaxed by St. Patrick's Day when the Irishmen gather to reminisce a bit. St. Pat's also indicates that we're getting along well into the favorable season. And we're into the Lenten Season now, too, which means Easter is not too far away. Can one help but be optimistic and cheerful?

This is the year and the season, too, when the aspiring and energetic politicians begin to make their bids for the various elective posts. You cannot help but admire the spirit with which they must live their lives as they plan ahead in attempt to be elected to public office.

Political participation is not merely for office-seekers, however, and that is what I should like to discuss today. No candidate would ever be elected if he didn't have the following of participating citizens that he needed. As I observe the organizational efforts of both political parties here on a local level, I feel that we are definitely lacking something. There are a few devoted souls within the workings of both parties but so comparatively few that one wonders if the large share of us really care what goes on. I feel that it safe to say that we care what goes on but we are too apathetic and politically timid or lazy to really do anything about it.

Before too long I expect that most of us will know precisely who will be running for what on the tickets of both parties. At this point it is the obligation of each one of us to inform ourselves on the merits of each and every candidate—on both tickets, and then to decide who will receive our individual support. Furthermore, if at that time we feel strongly enough about it, and we should, then we should each take an active part in the support and promotion of these candidates.

At this point the party really becomes an instrument of the individuals in order that their favorites might be sponsored through joint effort with some eventual success. This is the two-party system that we all praise. It is up to each of us to use this privilege if we want things to be as we would like to see them.

These comments may not be arranged perfectly, but I think you can see my point and I'm sincere in emphasizing it. We all owe it to ourselves to do a better job of operating our political parties in support of our candidates.

We owe it to ourselves to main- so let's all Shop and Trade Where so let's all hop and Trade Where Bargains Are Made—Here In the Heart of Northwest Minnesota, Thief River Falls.

WILDLIFE in Minnesota
by JIM KIMBALL

Everyone is setting new records these days, and not to be outdone, our fish management section has established a new one of which they can be truly proud. So far this winter they have rescued more fish than ever before in our history.

Up to the end of February, over 375,000 fish have been rescued from oxygen-depleted lakes and transferred to other lakes where they can survive. Of these 375,000, over 225,000 are northern pike weighing a total of 190,000 pounds. The value of these 95 tons of live, growing northern pike can only be estimated. We know that the percentage which survive is extremely high, and the rate of growth is very rapid. We also know that on the average, Minnesota fishermen — resident and non-resident — spend about four dollars for every pound of fish they catch.

There is no way to estimate how much it would cost to produce this quantity of fish in the hatchery because we could not do it even if we could afford it. It would seem that a reasonable if not a conservative estimate of the value of these rescued fish would be a half-million dollars.

Now, the interesting part of this whole operation is that this half-million dollars worth of fish have been rescued and transferred into lakes at a cost of approximately $50,000. Where else can you get a ten-fold return on a short term investment? Obviously this is something to be proud of, but as usual we are not satisfied. Our fish managers throughout the state assure us that with another $50,000 to spend and the necessary equipment, we could have rescued twice as many. In other words, it's like buying 50 shares of stock at one dollar and having it go up $10 a share - you are happy about the 50 shares you bought, but wish you had purchased a hundred shares.

There was a time when fish rescue operations were little more than a humanitarian measure to rescue a few suffocating fish here and there. Through the development of our new traps and pumping techniques, this program promises to be one of the major fish management techniques in Minnesota - and speaking of techniques, we need some better ones. If we can develop methods of rescuing these northern pike at a much younger age, we may be able to take a million as easily as we now take 100,000 which weigh between one and two pounds apiece.

Throughout the state there are many spawning areas which produce tremendous numbers of northerns. Under these crowded conditions, we really need a method of catching them before they start eating each other up. There is another advantage to catching them at a smaller size — many of our lakes are in need of small northern to maintain balanced fish populations.

This is the type of program about which I can get most enthused, because it is a positive approach. Devising means whereby people may have more recreation is far more interesting than imposing additional restrictions to limit the harvest.

To sum it up, my hat is off to our capable, hard-working fish managers who set the new record, but I also feel like the fisherman who just had a big one get away—too bad we couldn't afford to save the second 225,000 northerns.

INCOME TAX ADVICE

By Minnesota State Bar Assn.

Deductions For Losses and Bad Debts

(This is the fourteenth in a series of articles on income taxes made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar Association, Public Relations Committee.

Losses arising from bad debts and casualties can be used to reduce your taxable net income, both on your Federal and Minnesota returns. The two types of losses, however, are treated differently on your tax return.

You are entitled to a deduction on your tax return when a debt owing to you becomes worthless. Such bad debts normally arise from loans where the person to whom you have loaned the money is clearly unable to repay the loan. The difficult problem is proving that the debt is worthless and became worthless in the year for which you desire to take the deduction. A typical debt which is not worthless is a loan to a relative who, although perhaps able, does not find it convenient to repay the debt.

Where you can show that no reasonable possibility exists that a debt can be collected and also that this situation developed finally in the taxable year, the amount of the non-business bad debt is treated on your tax return as a short-term capital loss. This means that, rather than taking the amount of the debt as an itemized personal deduction, you must offset it against other capital gain income appearing on your return and, following the rules discussed with regard to other capital gains, the debt can be deducted in the taxable year only to the extent that it does not exceed your capital gains received during the year and an additional amount of $1,000. Where the debt does exceed this amount, you are entitled to carry the excess forward for a five-year period against other capital gains, as discussed previously.

Individual taxpayers are also entitled to show as capital losses amounts lost which arise out of sales of property held for the production of income. Losses on worthless securities such as stocks or bonds owned by you which become worthless during the taxable year are capital losses. While it is difficult to prove that securities have become worthless, you can often rely on such events as liquidation or bankruptcy to show the worthlessness of stocks and bonds. In computing your "holding period" with respect to such worthless securities in determining whether the capital loss is short-term or long-term, such securities are deemed to have been "sold" on the last day of the taxable year. Thus, for example, if you purchased securities on or before June 29, 1961, and the securities became worthless during the taxable year, such securities would be deemed to have been sold on December 31, 1961, and you would be considered to have sustained a long-term capital loss. On the other hand, if such securities were purchased on or after June 30, 1961, your holding period for such securities would be considered to be six months or less, and the loss on such securities would be deductible as a short-term capital loss. In either event, the deductibility of such losses is subject to the rules governing the deductibility of all capital losses discussed in a previous article. However, you are allowed to deduct as an ordinary loss (which, therefore, can be deducted from any kind of income) the amount lost on the sale of depreciable property such as a house or apartment building which you held for rental to others. You are not entitled to deduct losses resulting from the sale of your personal residence.

For the deductions discussed herein, the amount of your deduction will be the cost to you of the asset reduced, where applicable, by any reduction in your basis by such factors as depreciation taken on the asset in prior years.

Casualty and theft losses are also deductible items, but are shown on the return as itemized personal deductions. Losses arising out of damage to property due to sudden causes, such as automobile accidents, fire, lightning, flood, storm and explosion are casualty losses. Mislaid or lost property does not give rise to a deduction for a theft or casualty loss.

As you can see, loss from casualty or theft are often difficult to prove, and you have the burden of proving that you are entitled to any such deduction. Where you can show that a deductible loss has occurred, the amount of your loss will be based upon the value of the property lost or the difference in the value of the property both before and after a casualty, and in such cases the taxing officials frequently will accept repair expenses as a reasonable guide in determining the amount of your loss. In any event, any insurance proceeds received will reduce the amount of your loss which will be deducted.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Steiner 4-H

Safety from four different projects was the theme of our window display in Bjorkman's window which was set up for National 4-H Club Week. Safety is the club project so we try to emphasize it in all our projects. In the display we had a tool box for the shop project which had many sharp tools in it. Without this box many people could be injured. A sewing kit in which to keep scissors, needles and other sharp equipment away from children was included as well as a toaster for the electric project with a frayed cord which is very dangerous. For food preparation we emphasised a pan handle over the stove which has caused many burns. On this committee was David Halverson, John Lubitz, Judy Kaushagen and Linda Jorde.

We want to urge you all to go to Bjorkman's and see our display.

Firemen Respond to Three Alarms During Week-end

The local fire department was called out three times last weekend. The first call Friday evening proved to be a false alarm, when firemen were unable to discover a chimney blaze at LaBree av. and Eighth st. reported by two boys.

The second call came Saturday evening at 6:40 from the Lambert Rinowski home on Gleason av. North of the fair grounds, where an oilburner became overheated, causing some smoke damage.

The third alarm was occasioned by a blaze that damaged the car of Fred Jenson at 501 Horace av. on the east side of the river.

It isn't to be expected that everybody will think you are perfect. Just be satisfied if you are able to fool one or two human beings.

Thieves Six Defeats Fort Frances 8 to 5

Scoring five goals in the third period, the tallying three of the goals in the space of forty-four seconds, the senior hockey Thieves overcame a 5-3 deficit and went on to defeat coach Willie Tonina-to's Fort Frances Royals, 8-5.

The Royals, a highly-regarded junior club and who are competing for Canada's Memorial Cup, had Keith Christiansen and Don Miletta in the lineup. The two players were all-state tournament selections in the recent Minnesota state high school hockey tournament, being members of coach Larry Ross' state champion International Falls club.

With soft ice conditions prevailing, the two teams were handicapped considerably in setting up their passing plays, and much body-contact play became the rule. Tempers, as a result of the "heavy" play, became short, and a couple of impromptu bouts resulted. In the first period, the Thieves' Dale Wennberg and the Royals' Roger Armstrong were given major penalties; and in the third period, Jack Houfek of the Thieves and Jim Rognerud of the Royals picked up majors.

In the first period, the Royals moved into a 2-0 lead on goals by John Mosley and Keith Christiansen.

The Thieves, in the second period, on George Schlieff's rink-length solo rush at the 3:46 mark, and DelRay Offerdahl's hard shot from close in at the 5:42 mark, evened the score at 2-all. Keith Christiansen's backhand shot, from 15-feet out, gave the Royals a short-lived lead at the 7:02 mark. Joey Poole, who garnered four goals during the game, hit the mesh at the 8:16 mark, to knot the game at 3-all. But the visitors, on goals by Ken Christiansen, at the 12:08 mark, and Ed Vien's slow dribbler that eluded goalie Rod Collins at the 12:40 mark, took a 5-3 lead to the dressing room at the end of the period.

Joey Poole whipped a sharply-angled shot past goalie Dennis Huntley at the 1:20 mark of the third period. Del Offerdahl, with Monty Markstrom setting up the play, flipped a shot into the north net at the 1:58 mark; and at the 2:04 mark, Joey Poole, on Tony Dorn's assist, drove a hard shot past Huntley, giving the Thieves a 6-5 lead. Goals by Joey Poole and Del Offerdahl, at the 11:03 and 16:02 marks, provided the Thieves with some "game insurance".

Only one traffic accident was reported in the city during the past week with one car involved in a two-car crash being damaged. There were no injuries. Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

A Couple of Season's Record

The high-scoring Elaine's team of the Tuesday night Business league established a pair of season's bowling records the past couple of weeks.

On Tuesday night, in a three-game match against the Elks Club team, the Elaine's racked the pins for a 1036-pin single game score. In this game, which was the second in the three-game series, pilot Larry Perkins hit for a 246; second Gary Vettelson had a 146; third, Stan Cockrell had a 229; fourth Wally DuChamp had a 174; and anchor Jesse DuChamp scored a 201. The Elaine's, with games of 892, 1036, and 931, swept the series from the Elks Club, who were carrying a 32-pins per game handicap. In the final game of the series, the Elaine's 931-pin edged out the Elks by one pin, with the Elks having an 898-pin actual, and with their handicap, an aggregate of 930.

That 2859-pin three-game total was one of the best of the season, but it was a bit shy of the mark that the Elaine's set a week ago when, in beating the Len's Tire Service team, they scored a 2884.

National Curling Champions

Fulfilling the prediction of Jon Larson, who went on record as picking the Fran Kleffman rink of Hibbing to win the United States curling championship, the Hibbing foursome, with a mark of five wins and no losses, in the final round, won the national title in the bonspiel held in Detroit, Mich.

The Kleffman rink, skipped by veteran Fran Kleffman, won the Minnesota championship ten days ago (it was the sixth straight state title for the Hibbing rink), to gain a berth in the national competition.

The victory was the second title, that is the national title, for the Kleffman rink, as the Hibbing quartet won the United States championship in 1959.

As a result of their triumph, the Kleffman rink will join the Ernie Richardson rink of Regina, Sask., the Canadian champion, in the world's tournament to be held in Sotland this week. Joining the Kleffman and Richardson rinks will be a rink from Scotland and another from Sweden.

In last year's competition, the Hec Gervais rink of Edmonton, Alberta, won the world's title.

It Seems Strange

Some of the games in district tournament play in Region Eight produced eye-popping results. And it seems strange that the Minnesota State High School League doesn't provide a uniform method of conducting district and sub-district playdowns. Apparently the League permits each district committee to arrange its own district tournament competition.

There does seem to be some injustice when teams like Hendrum in District 30 and Lake Bronson in District 32, are beaten in their respectively district tournament finals by teams that they had beaten the week previous in sub-district play.

In the sub-district finals at Ada last week, the Hendrum Huskies defeated the Ada Vikings, 63-61, for the championship. But in the District 30 finals at Crookston on Friday night, Ada scored a 58 to 53, win over Hendrum, and will represent the district in Region Eight play this week.

And in the sub-district finals at Hallock last week, Lake Bronson defeated the Kennedy Rockets, 50-44, for the title. And on Saturday night, in the District 32 finals at Kennedy, Kennedy defeated Lake Bronson, 53-49.

The winning of a sub-district title can be pretty much of an empty honor, and in fact it can be somewhat of a handicap if last week's results on District 30 and 32 can be cited as a criterion.

Crookston Man Is Victim of Crash on Reservation

Wilbur G. Erickson, 41, of Crookston, died of injuries received Friday evening in a headon collision four miles west of Redlake on the Red Lake reservation.

The driver of the other car was Manley Parkhurst of Redlake who was being held in the Redlake jail on an unspecified charge. He was not injured. Both cars were demolished. The F. B. I. is investigating the accident.

Mr. Erickson was en route home when the accident ocurred. He was taken to a Redlake hospital where he died.

Mr. Erickson was born May 14, 1920 at Bertrum, Minn. He was married Jan. 1, 1944 to Emma Mielke at Swanville. The family has lived in Crookston since 1953. He was employed by Lindsy Brothers Company of Minneapolis, which deals in farm equipment.

Langen Calls for Tax Exemptions for College Costs

Urges Committee Action on Bill Introduced at Last Session of Congress

Congressman Odin Langen Friday asked the committee on ways and means for a report on the status of his bill to allow taxpayers to deduct college and university expenses incurred by themselves or their dependents. Langen urged a favorable report on the measure, introduced in the last session, which would allow deductions for tuition, fees and books at all accredited institutions of higher education.

The Minnesota congressman cited a real need for this type of legislation; noted that tax relief for parents and others would not only aid the individual taxpayer in meeting the ever-rising costs of higher education but would also encourage a greater number of students to attend colleges.

"It would be an investment in our country's future," said Langen, "an investment that would enrich the individual and increase his earning power in the years to come."

Langen noted that his bill would in no way affect established loan programs for needy students.

Paul Klungness High Scorer for Prowlers

Paul Klungness, a junior, gained the high-point honors for the Prowler cagers during the 1961-62 season, scoring 88 field goals and 48 free throws for an aggregate of 224 points.

The Prowlers, as a team, in nineteen games, scored a total of 955 points.

These seasonal marks, by Klungness and the team, are far off the school records. Dave Hanson, during the 1956-57 season, set the individual scoring record with a total of 577 points. While the Prowlers of 1960-61, playing a 24-game schedule, rolled up a total of 1353 points.

The individual scoring:

Agassiz Refuge Survey Shows Deer In Good Shape

Hungry Deer Herd Uses Bulldozed Trails Seeking Much Needed Food Supply

Despite heavy snow more than 30 inches deep in the woods, deer at the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge east of Holt are reported to be in generally good condition. A recent survey was made by refuge personnel to study the plight of deer struggling to survive in the deep snow.

"We were surprised to find all animals observed in fairly good shape and very active," stated Herb Dill, refuge manager. The survey was made with use of a "weasel", an amphibious vehicle acquired by the Armed Forces which travels in deep snow or over rough terrain.

Dill added that deer were making good use of refuge trails, opened with the use of a bulldozer, to find browse for winter feeding. In returning from a day of trail opening last week, refuge personnel noted nine deer in the trail, Dill reported to the Times Friday.

A bulldozer from Agassiz refuge is currently being loaned to the state conservation department. Robert Farmes, area game manager stationed in Thief River Falls, reports that it is being used to open trails in the Randeen Ridge area to permit travel by deer to other feeding areas.

Members of the Pennington County Sportsman's club, together with several other interested persons, traveled to the Randeen Ridge area yesterday to cut dogwood and other choice browse along the bulldozed trails so that deer can avail themselves of this food.

Weather the next several weeks will tell the story for the area deer herd this winter, Dill noted Friday. If additional browsecutting is to be done in the near future, notification will be given in the Times.

Chapter Two of Series

Hospitality of Alaska Is Welcome to Hetteen Group

CHAPTER TWO

March 5, 1960

We arose at dawn, packed up our tents and had a hearty breakfast before resuming the run up the Kuskokwim.

Everyone had a good night's rest, but having our breakfast outdoors in the half-light was a rugged experience because we did not take the time to build a camp fire.

The engines started at once without pre-heating and they gave good, steady service all through the day. Rough, ice-covered snow made travel rather slow, and yet we completed 70 miles before pulling up at Kalskag at the end of the day.

When the children of Kalskag first sighted our party coming up the river they ran to their teachers and excitedly told them that "two sleds without dogs" were coming up the river.

A few minutes later, when Bessie and Rudy were walking toward Kalskag's school house, they heard two children call to their teacher: "Two gussocks are coming to see you."

The term "gussock" is a colloquialism hereabouts that means "white man." We are told it is of Russian origin.

The two Kalskag school teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Smith, invited us in for the night and they served us with a wonderful home-cooked dinner that was a treat. It was a big relief to get in out of the wind and the cold after the long trip we had today.

After finishing the evening meal, we sat and talked with Mr. and Mrs. Smith and they told of some of their experiences since they arrived here from West Virginia last Labor Day to begin their term at the Bureau of Indian Affairs school.

The Smiths' home is attached to the school building where they instruct 51 Eskimo children in grades one through eight. The Smiths perform all manner of services for these native people, the adults as well as children.

While we were having dinner there was a knock at the door. tI was a small Eskimo girl who had come to ask Delbert Smith to patch up some injuries she had suffered in a fall.

Among their extra activities, the Smiths help treat illnesses as well as cuts and bruises and they prepare hot lunches for the children each day, probably the only hot meals these youngsters are served. And last Christmas day the Smiths cooked a holiday dinner for all of the people in the village.

The young teachers even settle disputes that crop up among the inhabitants, give advice on family and community problems, whatever they might be, and provide clothing for the more needy children who attend the school.

They lead busy lives.

Advise Against Seeding European Red Clover Seed

University Agronomists Report Native Varieties of Seed Are Preferable

European red clover seed is poorly adapted to Minnesota, farmers of the state were warned today.

Production of red clover seed in the United States during 1961 was 21 per cent below the 1950-59 average. This has caused higher retail seed prices and the threat of larger importations of unadapted European red clover seed, according to W. F. Hueg, Jr., extension agronomist, and H. L. Thomas, associate prfessor of agronomy, at the University of Minnesota.

Domestic red clover varieties were superior to European varieties in 12 trials in eight states during 1952-54, the agronomists point out. Hay yield differences favored the domestic varieties by more than 30 per cent.

Hueg and Thomas say that importations of European seed are a threat to domestic seed stocks. Unadapted European seed can be identified by the red stain which appears on 10 per cent of the seed. This staining, required by the Federal Seed Act, provides protection to the buyer.

Buy certified seed of the recommended varieties, Dollard and Lakeland, the agronomists urge. Both of these varieties have proved to be superior to commercial red clover in University of Minnesota tests for disease resistance, yield and quality.

There's only a few cents difference in price between commercial seed and certified Dollard. Certified Lakeland costs about 10 cents more per pound than commercial. Hueg and Thomas say that "the price difference should not be a major factor when selecting varieties, for certified seed is your assurance of a pure variety."

Former Priest in City Honored at East Grand Forks

Msgr. A. I. Merth, pastor of St. Bernard's Catholic church in Thief River Falls from 1924 to 1947, was honored Sunday night by members of the Sacred Heart parish which he now serves in East Grand Fokrs. He was presented with a 1962 model car by his parishoners with Jack Gaddie, president of the church's athletic association, making the presentation.

Speaking briefly at the ceremonies were Msgr. William McNamee of St. Michael's church in Grand Forks, Rev. Warren Regnier of Crookston and Earl Enright, parish trustee. Bishop Glenn of Crookston also attended.

A native of Sleepy Eye, Msgr. Merth received his education there prior to entering the Josephinum Seminary in Columbus, Ohio, where he was ordained in 1919. He was an assistant pastor of the church at Stephen before moving to Thief River Falls in 1924 and to East Grand Forks in 1947. He was elevated to the rank of Right Rev. Monsignor in 1955.

Embury Receives Recognition for Insurance Sales

Russ Embury, Thief River Falls, was paid special recognition for outstanding salesmanship and attainment of production quotas for Amelcan Hardware Mutual Insurance company at the annual sales seminar held in Minneapolis recently.

For achieving his sales quota, Embury was presented a $200 cash award and walnut plaque embossed in gold letter, which recognizes his sales feat. He was also awarded the company's Outstanding Salesman's trophy as one of the top 10 fire insurance salesmen in American Hardware's nationwide operation. This award is considered the "Oscar" of the sales industry. He was also presented an engraved miniature Totem Pole for leading his division in fire insurance sales.

Embury has represented his firm in Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Red Lake and Roseau counties since 1943.

Eligibility for Feed Grain Support Cited

Based on a review of an earlier determination, growers of oats and rye will be able to obtain price support on these crops in 1962 without taking part in the 1962 feed grain program. The program applies to corn, grain sorghum, and barley.

Winton Knutson, chairman of the Pennington county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, points out that this is also a change from the 1961 program, when participation in the feed grain program for corn and grain sorghum was required in order to be eligible for 1961 support on oats and rye.

Corn, barley, and grain sorghum producers, however, will be eligible for price support on these three crops only if they participate in the 1962 feed grain program, the chairman emphasized. (This requirement does not apply to producers of certain "acceptable" varieties of malting barley.)

Corn and grain sorghum producers will be eligible for support on these crops if they reduce their corn and grain sorghum acreage by at least 20 per cent and do not exceed their base acreage (1959-60 average) of barley. Barley producers (except those qualifying under the malting barley provision) will be eligible for barley support if they reduce their barley acreage by the minimum 20 per cent and do not exceed their base acreage of corn and grain sorghum.

Knutson explained also that there will be a limit on the amount of 1962-crop corn, grain sorghum, and barley that may be put under support from eligible farms. The eligible quantity will be an amount equal to the farm's 1959-60 average per-acre yield time sthe corn, grain sorghum, or barley planted acreage as determined by the ASC county committee. There will be no limits on the amounts of oats and rye that may be put under support.

Under the feed grain program, "diversion" payments will be made to farmers who divert corn, grain sorghum, and barley acreage to conserving uses. To take part in the program, farmers must file an application with their ASCS county office. The signup period is Feb. 5 through March 30.

State Teachers' Group Advances

MEA Now Boasts More Than 30,000 Members

The Minnesota Education Association, teachers' professional organization, announced today its membership has exceeded 30,000—setting an all-time high as it begins its second century.

Audited figures show that on March 5 membership reached 30,096. This figure compares with 28,621 on the same date in 1961—a gain of 1,475 for the year—and with the previous all-time high, 28,737 reached last June 30.

"As professionals, we are extremely gratified by this continuing steady progress," MEA President Melvin Voxland, Rochester junior high school principal, said in releasing the figures. "The MEA has more than doubled its membership during the postwar period, having averaged more than 1,000 new members a year since 1950. Our membership now includes more than 85 per cent of the elementary and secondary public school teachers in the entire state."

(The number of teachers in Minnesota increased from 21,145 at the end of the 1949-50 school year to 31,666 at the end of the 1960-61 year, an average of less than 1,000 per year, according to state department of education figures.)

(The MEA's membership also includes administrators and persons on staffs and faculties of private and parochial schools.)

Voxland attributed the growth to "a desire on the part of teachers not only to better their salaries and working conditions but on a deep-seated desire to raise their professional standards in order to better serve their communities and society generally".

Wildlife Week to be Noted Mar. 18-24

Sponsors Seek Expansion of Waterfowl Resources

Minnesotans should understand the status of waterfowl resources of their local areas, declares Roger E. Preuss, of Minneapolis, state chairman of 1962 National Wildlife Week.

Wildlife Week is being observed March 18-24 throughout the state and nation. The theme is "Waterfowl for the Future, by Conservation of Wetlands Which Benefit Man and Wildlife".

"Wildfowl are of great interest to millions of Americans", the chairman pointed out, "and offer recreation for esthetic purposes as well as hunting. Only by preserving adequate amounts of suitable wetlands can we continue to enjoy the flights of migrating ducks and other wildlife."

There is no question that waterfowl are in severe circumstances. Objectives of the educational program are: alert Minnesotans to the need for conservation of natural water retention areas; create understanding of importance of wetlands to wildlife; unite conservation-minded citizens for a common cause.

Preuss emphasized that Minnesota contains a portion of what little remains of America's original prairie marsh habitat, some 89 counties in the Dakotas and Minnesota which still have valuable natural waterfowl areas. Sportsmen and conservationists are urged to cooperate with the department of conservation in acquiring wetlands. Wildlife Week is co-sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation and the Minnesota Conservation Federation.

Aid That Paid

Tokyo now has a population of ten million people and is the world's largest metropolis. A continuing growth is expected, reaching a 12½ million figure by 1970. Traffic is moving underground with new subways, and to high levels by monorail. Tokyo has become a modern city in prosperous Japan.

Twenty years ago our country was fighting a bitter war with the Japanese. Now we are at peace, and while some of the bitterness of that struggle no doubt still remains, there is every reason to believe that our present friendship is based on understanding and good will. With the friendship of Japan our position in the orient is much more secure.

The assistance we gave to the Japanese following the war is proving to be a good investment. The people of Japan, like the people of Europe, used our assistance wisely. They are industrious and intelligent, and their remarkable recovery is due mainly to their own effort. Which raises as a reasonable doubt the question of how much should we do for those who are either unwilling or incapable of helping themselves?

It Was a Good Promise

One of President Kennedy's campaign promises was that the appointment of judges would be strictly on a merit basis, and that party affiliation would not be a consideration. Of the 85 nominations for the federal bench that he has sent to the Senate so far, all but three have been Democrats. The American Bar Association's committee on the federal judiciary has indicated its disappointment in the President's performance.

Will China Pay?

Our Canadian neighbors have greatly reduced their wheat surplus, some with the help of last year's drouth but also by a vigorous program of selling abroad. The best customer has been Red China and these sales have been made by extending government credit. The farmers have been happy with this kind of selling but there are other groups that are concerned about whether the Chinese will be able to pay. The first payment on last year's sales is now coming due and future extensions of credit no doubt will depend on how promptly the old obligations are met.

Pending at the present time is a contract for sales of wheat, barley and flour amounting to $362 million dollars over a period of the next three years. Incidentally, our country is one of the few countries of the world that refuses to do business with the Red Chinese.

Too Much Is Enough

Experience alone should induce us to move cautiously in adopting any new public welfare programs. We know from experience that all government programs of this kind that are controlled in Washington are started small but rapidly become big.

President Kennedy is now asking that medical care for the aged be added to the Social Security program. The Social Security program had a very modest beginning. The cost was trifling. But in a few years that cost is going to require one-tenth of our payrolls just to maintain the present already-expanded program. Adding medical care for the aged is going to mean a still bigger bite.

There is provision now for the care of needy people, and that is as it should be. Most Americans provide for their own declining years in the traditional manner of free people. The Kennedy proposal would make medical care for the aged available for both the rich and the poor, and the net result would be just one more step toward socialism and a government that would do more of the things for us that we should do for ourselves.

Too many of these programs start as innocent kittens, but the kittens develop into cats, and too often the cats become tigers. As we get more government we retain less freedom, and we already have much too much government.

"At Reasonable Cost"

The Manchester Guardian (England) is happy with the success of the Col. John Glenn space flight because of the confidence it will give to the American people in their own ability to hold their own in competition with Soviet science. The Guardian thinks the Russians still have the better rockets "but the Americans are more skilled at fitting them out with instruments and gadgets of all kinds," and sees much merit in the idea that the Americans and the Russians should cooperate in their efforts to land a man on the moon. It makes the following sensible suggestion:

"Though space travel may ultimately widen our cultural horizons, this will take time. Other benefits could be won much more quickly if the resources now to be spent on a competition in space were to be spent in some other way. Yet the dark hints that space may prove of military value appear to be groundless. The prestige that will come from the competition to get to the moon within a decade will turn out to be less valuable than it is sometimes claimed to be — especially for the country which happens to come second in the race. So it would be best if the comfortable glow created by Colonel Glenn's success could inspire some agreement between East and West that something less than competition should be turned into collaboration.

"But even if this cannot be done, there is still a powerful case for asking that the United States should decline the challenge it has been presented with, and that it should declare its intention to send American citizens to the moon only when they can be sent without special fuss and at reasonable cost.

Self-Help Be Outlawed?

(Bemidji Pioneer)

Two of this country's railroads—which like most of the elements withhin this industry, are in serious financial difficulties—want to merge. The merger, their managements believe, would enable them to provide better service and to improve their financial position.

However, there are indications that the Justice Department will oppose the move, on the grounds that a monopoly might result. If the Department does that, a precedent would be established which no doubt, would be applied to other railroads considering comparable plans now or in the future.

The Wall Street Journal made an apt comment on "monopoly" when it said: "How can a company be monopolistic when it faces the competition of many other railroads? When it faces the further competition of airlines, buses, autos, trucks and pipelines? The whole point of merger is to enable the companies to get into a healthy competitive situation and so try to save themselves from extinction."

The Journal also said: "For years Government officials have been wringing their hands over the 'plight' of the railroads. Now when two railroads plan to help themselves by merging, Government officials wring their hands over the proposed remedy."

The principle thus described goes beyond the proposal of these two railroads or any other particular railroad. There are plenty of economists who will argue that the grave railroad problem is, primarily a government-created problem, resulting from over-regulation and oppressive taxation and that only government can solve it. But will government act before the industry goes down the drain, of costly nationalization results?

Ghosts

(Wall Street oJurnal)

Thanks to the American Broadcasting Company we had a chance the other evening to catch-up on the original CBS program touring the White House. And like everyone else, we were struck with the charm and poise of Mrs. Kennedy. She left us with a warm feeling about this house in which she lives.

But what struck us most of all was her own warmth for the heritage of the past. This old chair, that old sofa were not things to be discarded because they were old. Nor were they things to be kept merely as keepsakes, as one stuffs an old museum. Each one was a reminder of some past joy or trial, but she wanted to put them back in their wonted places because, to her, they also have a meaning for today. For her, neither their beauty nor their usefulness has faded away.

And we had a haunting wish that somehow, in that same city, old ideas, old dreams, old faiths could be preserved in their wonted places not as old museum pieces but as things of beauty or for their usefulness. We are told so often today that the past is no guide to the future, that the ideas on old parchment about liberty and freedom and man's relation to the State are all outmoded. They are fine for the National Archies, and to remind school children about how things were but they belong to the old frontier, not the new one.

Perhaps that is so. Yet when Mrs. Kennedy was speaking of the ghosts that walk in that old house we couldn't help wondering whether, perchance, one of them might now and then have something worthwhile to say. And wondering who else there might be, besides this young lady, who might pause a moment on the stairs, and listen.

THE ANDERSEN LETTER

Elmer L. Andersen

Seventy Per Cent Favor Taconite Amendment

Maybe you saw the Minnesota Poll in the March 4 Minneapolis Sunday Tribune which showed that 70 per cent of the people of our state approve of the Taconite Amendment for which I have been working. This is an amazing showing and makes it ridiculous that some people still resist letting the people have a chance to vote on this proposal.

In the breakdown of those supporting the amendment it was shown that 65 per cent of the DFL favor it, 77 per cent of the Republicans, and 73 per cent of the Independents.

From the standpoint of geography 69 per cent of the people in southern Minnesota, 64 per cent in the Twin City area and 77 per cent in northern Minnesota favor it.

In fact, the total of the disapproval is only 11 per cent. The balance of about 19 per cent have no opinion or didn't take a fixed position.

In other words, seven out of eight people who know about the Taconite Amendment and have an opinion on it, favor it.

If you hav enot done so, won't you please visit with your legislators and say, "This has gone about far enough. It's getting ridiculous. I suggest you support Governor Andersen in his efforts to get a Taconite Amendment that would assure equity of taxation to the taconite and semi-taconite processors with other industry in this state so we can get those taconite plants going."

Have in mind, we're proposing this as not a single solution, we're working on a whole series of ways to revitalize northeastern Minnesota. But stable tax policy for huge investment is fundamental. It is time to act.

Electronics Big In Minnesota.

While we work hard to break unemployment bottlenecks in one part of the state, it is thrilling to see the tremendous growth of the electronics industry in our state, new companies, new employment, and increased payrolls.

Just in the last year there has been a net gain of 19 new companies in the electronics field, an increase of 14 per cent, an increase in new jobs of 4,696 which is an increase of 12 per cent. This is the kind of economic growth we like to see.

At the end of 1961 there were 153 electronic companies in our state, employing 44,438 people with a total payroll of more than $200 million.

Big as this is, it is by no means reaching a leveling off point. Actually it is growing at an increasing rate.

One of the key factors in this growth has been the outstanding young electrical engineers turned out by the Department of Electrical Engineering in the School of Technology at the University of Minnesota.

Dr. William G. Shepherd, who is head of that Department of Electrical Engineering is also Chairman of my Minnesota Electronics Industries Committee and doing an excellent job.

So far as young engineers are concerned, we've reversed the trend of young college trained people leaving Minnesota and are now importing them. We are currently hiring many more electrical engineers than we are graduating.

All of these factors led to my naming March 4th to 10th as "Minnesota Electronics Recognition Week".

There are many opportunities for other communities in the state to get sub-contracting companies going. I am sure the executive of your Chamber of Commerce or your development corporation people are checking on this possibility for your community.

Country Life Conferences.

The regional conferences on Agriculture and Country Life are now underway. A great deal of interest is being shown, many excellent suggestions are coming from farmers, farmers' wives, industry officials and everyone else in any way related to this backbone industry of our state.

For your ready reference here is a schedule of the dates and meeting places of the regional conferences: ROCHESTER, Monday March 19, at the First Methodist Church; REDWOOD FALLS, Monday, March 12, at the 1st English Lutheran Church; CROOKSTON Tuesday, March 22, at the Northwest Experiment Station; GRAND RAPIDS, Tuesday, March 27, at the North Central Experiment Station; and ST. CLOUD, Saturday, March 31, at Technical High School.

Agriculture has changed more since World War II than in all previous history. If Minnesota farmers can get clearly in mind the significance of these changes, how best to adapt to them, then we can have a prosperous agriculture.

Also, we want to see to it that in these economic adjustments we preserve the fundamental values of family life on the farm.

Please attend the regional conference in your area, and go prepared to make suggestions that you have been mulling over. Your idea may be worth a great deal to our state.

DEEP IN THE HEART OF TAXES is where the average American finds himself today. While it is agreed that Americans would not trade their situation, including high taxes, with that of Communist nations which attempt to practice collective farming and governmental control, it is also agreed that the tax burden is a heavy one to carry.

The Western Tax Council reports that the average American family (two adults and two children) pays $2,540 a year in taxes. Of this average, $700 is in direct taxes on income, personal property, real estate, auto license and the like and the remaining $1,800 in many hidden taxes. It sounds incredible, but the council states:

There are 78 different hidden taxes in a quart of milk; 101 hidden taxes in a single egg; 125 hidden taxes in a woman's cotton dress; 118 hidden taxes in a man's suit; 154 hidden taxes in a cake of soap; 151 hidden taxes in a loaf of bread; and 201 hidden taxes in a gallon of gasoline.

For every dollar of direct taxes on purchases, the consumer pays an estimated two dollars in hidden taxes. Among common commodities, the proportion of hidden taxes incorporated in the retail price include the following: cigarettes, 55 per cent; auto, 27 per cent; bread, 33 per cent; camera, 30 per cent; gasoline, 45 per cent; hosiery, 33 per cent; new house, 35 per cent; playing cards, 40 per cent; refrigerator, 35 per cent; shows, 33 per cent; telephone, 33 per cent; television set, 20 per cent; and whiskey, 60 per cent.

Could this be the middle-man that the consumer complains about supporting?

Troubled by a mate who snores? The British Medical association, after study of sleeping sounds of Great Britain's snorers, has come up with what is considered to be a helpful exercise. The association recommends that snorers hold an ordinary wooden tongue depressor between their teeth for 10 minutes after going to bed and before settling down to sleep. Wonder if it works. I'll bet it will help for at least 10 minutes.

THE MORNING WARNING

I saw a baby once who seemed
A cuddly little monkey.
His eyes were hidden when he beamed—
His mother called him "chunky".

Another youngster down the street
Is one of whom you've heard
In looking down can't see his feet.
Guess "husky" is the word.

A teenage gal I've seen to ride
Around in papa's Chevy.
It leans a little toward her side.
She's "just a trifle heavy".

A matronly type aunt of mine
Weighs two hundred and eight.
(This seems to be an outward sign
She's slightly "overweight".

But as I mount my bathroom scale
To take a peek at that,
I cannot help a mournful wail,
"Ye Gads, I'm getting FAT."

I shall, above the scale, place
A sign 'til growth shall cease.
These words will stare me in the face:
"Do Not Feed the Obese".

L.O'L. Convention in Minneapolis Warned of Reduced Supports

Upper Midwest dairymen Thursday were told to expect a cut of nearly 30 cents a hundred pounds in federal dairy price supports April 1.

"As things stand now, support prices for manufacturing milk going into butter, cheese and dry milk will drop to 75 per cent of parity, about $3.10 or $3.11 a hundred," said E. M. Norton, Washington, D. C., secretary of the National Milk Producers Federation.

He addressed the 41st annual meeting of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., at its headquarters.

The administration's efforts to maintain dairy support levels at the current $3.40 a hundred pounds were torpedoed when the House Agriculture Committee refused to approve the suggestion.

"Both President Kennedy and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman have said it would be necessary to drop supports to the minimum unless Congress authorized a holding action," said Norton.

Norton said the federation is opposed to the administration's proposed dairy program, which would set up marketing quotas for milk.

Among the reasons: It contains no provisions for curbing dairy imports, it fails to provide minimum support prices if farmers do not approve controls and it would exempt small producers and those in milk deficit areas but does not define either of the terms, leaving that to the discretion of the secretary of agriculture.

Norton said the proposal limits the cost of the support program to not more than $300 million. To be effective, the proposal would only support prices at a nominal level or with severe marketing restrictions.

He said the federation is drafting a new bill to correct some of the defects and will present it for congressional consideration after "grass roots" meetings to formulate opinion.

Don S. Anderson, director of the livestock, dairy and poultry division of the United States Department of Agriculture, declared that cutting price supports to 75 per cent of parity would drastically reduce dairy farmers' income and not reduce greatly the government expenses for the program.

"Even at 75 per cent of parity, the USDA probably would have to buy some $440 million worth of dairy products in the next year," he explained.

Frank D. Stone, Land O'Lakes general manager, reported the nationwide dairy co-op had record business last year.

Gross sales totaled $215,012,237, an increase of 17 per cent over the $183,514,207 in 1960.

Carleton Alumni Donate $600,000 in Capital Gifts

Carleton college alumni have donated more than $600,000 in cash and pledges to the college in a new Alumni Capital Gifts program which has not yet begun general solicitations throughout the country.

Hulings, vice president and director of the Andersen Corporation, Bayport, Minnesota, at a meeting attended by more than 50 visiting alumni leaders, which was held on the campus Friday and Saturday, March 9 and 10.

The Alumni association leaders and their assistants will attempt to raise a total of $1,560,000 from among Carleton's 12,000 alumni as their capital gifts contribution to the College's four-year $12,000,000 development program.

Problems of Farmer Retirement Studied

Lack of opportunity for meaningful activities—work, recreation and the like—is the greatest problem for more than three-fourths of the 300 retired farmers in Goodhue, Watonwan and Wilkin counties recently interviewed by University of Minnesota rural sociologists.

Gary D. Hansen and Marvin J. Taves report the study in the current issue of "Minnesota Farm and Home Science," a publication of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station.

Today's farmers grew up in an era that was not retirement conscious. But, with the lengthening life span and the extension of social security coverage, farmers' attitudes toward and preparation for retirement have changed. Thru their study, Hansen and Taves hoped to learn more about the problems of planning for retirement from farming.

They found that less than one-fifth of the retired farmers who receive social security checks had made definite financial plans for retirement before they reached 65. Only one-third of those with plans had been able to carry them out fully. One-half had been able to do so partly.

Many resisted retiring at all. Two-thirds of the partly employed said they had no intention of ever retiring completely.

By contrast, more younger farmers are making definite plans to retire. One-fifth of the younger farmers interviewed said they intend to retire before age 65, about one-third at 65 and fewer thereafter.

Hansen and Taves found that the strong orientation toward work, attachment to the land, problems of moving off the farm and selling it, lack of experience in other roles and negative attitudes toward leisure activities often make it hard for farmers to adjust to retirement.

To provide for a happy retirement, experiences of retiring farmers indicate that these are important preparations:

Maintaining good health and insurance protection.

Avoiding evaluating oneself as old by continuing relationships with younger generations, new ideas and vigorous thinking.

Owning one's home or living quarters and being somewhat independent.

Bringing resources and needs into line through financial planning and investments.

Consciously understanding one's attitudes and values on work and retirement and the use of leisure time.

Developing several satisfying and flexible roles or activities. These include hobbies and crafts; helping in community development projects; taking responsible leadership in organizations; and studying and discussing important current social, economic or political issues.

State Employment Service Offering Summer Camp Jobs

College Students Will Be Given Preference In Assignment of Jobs

The Minnesota state employment service today announced the opening of its spring recruitment drive for college students to staff dozens of Minnesota summer camps.

Commissioner Frank Starkey said that each year his department works closely with most camping organizations in the state to sign up anywhere from 500 to 1,000 college students to act as camp and program directors, counselors, as instructors in swimming, riding, nature study, arts and crafts, canoeing, music, riflery, athletics, and a variety of other program activities. Also needed are administrative-type personnel such as camp nurses, dietitians, cooks, kitchen help, and maintenance people.

Some of the camps begin their season in late May or early June; others begin later and last until about Labor Day. The average length of camp operation is from eight to ten weeks. Some groups near larger towns and cities now operate "day camps", where children commute from home each day. Another trend is toward weekend camping, especially during spring and fall.

Camps served include those sponsored by YMCA, YWCA, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, church organizations, settlement houses and many other private organizations. Interested applicants are urged to contact any of the 33 local offices of the State Employment Service located in the principal cities of Minnesota.

While the emphasis for recruiting camp personnel is made in the state's colleges, other persons with the proper qualifications are invited to apply. FIRST RETURN in the sale of membership for the Pennington County Fair Association, Inc., was noted Monday when Mrs. Frank Heinze of Rocksbury township turned in $40 for eight memberships and picked up another book of 10 membership cards. One of six membership salesmen in the township, Mrs. Heinze conducted her campaign on the south edge of the city and met with much favorable comment. Accepting the money and recording the total is Mrs. Marjorie Hanson, wife of Silas Hanson who is serving as county chairman for the campaign. Current total of memberships sold and reported at the office of the chairman is $155, all from Rocksbury.

Rural Campaign Underway

Group To Plan Sales of County Fair Membership

With membership sale in the Pennington County Fair Association, Inc., now well underway in the rural area of Pennington county, representatives of organizations in the city will meet Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce office to arrange the city membership campaign.

Represented at the meeting will be the Lions and Rotary clubs, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts, Elks and Eagles lodges and Junior and Senior Chambers of Commerce. Membership sale material will be distributed at the meeting and a plan of action drawn for conducting the sale.

Representatives from the organizations which have currently announced their delegates include the following: Chamber of Commerce, Clarence Carlson, Kenneth Onken and Stuart McLeod; Jaycees, John Eisbrener, Ralph Foster and Glenn Peterson; Rotary, Al Wilcox and Jon Metusalem; American Legion, Loren Borsheim and M. R. Levorson; and Eagles, Roland K. Larson and Leonard Furuseth.

Canvassing of the rural areas is being met with enthusiasm, according to Silas Hanson, county chairman of the membership sale. Returns are slow in coming since township and area leaders are still securing workers and many were interrupted by the township elections on Tuesday.

"There are a number of fellows who have stopped in the office to pick up additional membership books to supply their workers," Hanson told the Times today. "They report a very favorable acceptance of the sale and we can't help but feel optimistic. We are going to try very hard to contact everyone in the county prior to spring break-up and the beginning of seasonal farm work."

Life membership in the new organization which plans to assume operation of the Pennington county fair is being sold for $5. The committee hopes that a number of families will purchase memberships for both husband and wife. Some have stated they plan to purchase membership for their children so that they can be voting members when they reach 21 years of age.

It is expected that membership sale in Thief River Falls will be on an individual basis as provision was not made in the organization for sale of membership to business firms. Contributions from interested businessmen who wish to increase their giving will be gratefully received by the new organization.

M.T.P.A. Counsel Speaks

Tax Reform Advocated by Stone at Rotary Meeting

Tax reform should be one of the first orders of business in the 1963 legislative session, Charles P. Stone, general counsel of the Minnesota Taxpayers association, told the Thief River Falls Rotary club at its noon meeting Monday. The association proposes a replacement sales tax. Stone was accompanied here by Ron Nicholls, M. T. P. A. fieldman.

President Milton Schlecter of the club announced the appointment of Andy Williamson and Wallace Tunberg to the athletic banquet committee; Lloyd Bennes, chairman, Russell Embury and Justus Larson to the nominating committee; and Al Wilcox and Jon Metusalem to the county fair committee.

"Taxes on personal property — particularly those on farm and business inventories and productive machinery, are difficult if not impossible to administer fairly and equitably," Stone said. "They discriminate against those engaged in businesses that require ownership of property.

"Inventories of manufacturers and farmers, including livestock, are mainly goods in an intermediate stage of production and not a suitable tax base. Machinery used to process the products is in the same category.

"Minnesota wholesalers must meet competition from wholesalers in other states; retailers must meet competition from out-of-state mail order organizations; both must have competitive costs and prices," Stone added. "Personal property taxes on inventories and productive machinery must be either added to the costs of doing business or passed on in the form of higher prices to the buyer.

"Elimination of these items from the property tax base will encourage growth and expansion of business and industry now located in Minnesota and will promote the influx into our state of new business and industry," the genral council predicted, "thus providing the additional jobs that we need to keep our young people here at home and at the same time generating more tax dollars, both for the state and for the local taxing districts."

Other needed reform should come in real estate taxes, reduction of individual income taxes and corporate income taxes, Stone said.

"Obviously, an entirely new major source of tax revenue is needed to provide the replacement monies needed to correct these sore spots in our tax structure. One such source, and probably the only one capable of producing the required amount of revenue without overburdening any one segment of our economy, is the sales tax," Stone continued.

He noted that a three per cent retail sales tax in Minnesota with an income tax credit of $10 for each member of the family unit, would produce a net yield of about $121 million a year. This would provide the $73 million needed to replace the property tax revenues lost to the state and local taxing units by the elimination of the household goods and business and farm inventory and productive machinery items from the property tax base.

Such a sales tax would also provide the $13 million per year needed to pay the principal and interest coming due each year on state building fund certificates and the $10 million a year needed to replace the income tax revenues lost by removal of the 5 per cent individual and 10 per cent corporate income surtaxes. A balance of $25 million would be left annually to take care of any deficiencies in financing the 1961-63 expenditures.

"It is to be hoped that the 1963 legislature will not be hampered by the political considerations which were so evident during the 1959 and 1961 sessions, and will be able to put together a sound, forward-looking replacement tax program which will accomplish the tax reform so badly needed to improve Minnesota's business climate and thereby create more and better jobs for our people," he concluded.

Laura Peterson Wed to Paul Klamar Recently

Rev. Marvin O. Carlson officiated at the double ring ceremony Saturday, January 20 at the Clara Lutheran church at St. Hilaire which united Laura D. Peterson of Plummer and Paul F. Klamar of Gatzke in holymatrimony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peterson of Plummer and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Klamar of Gatzke.

During the 2 p.m. ceremony, Mrs. Clarence Weckwerth, aunt of the bride, sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer". She was accompanied by Mrs. James Wilson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor length gown of nylon lace over taffeta, featuring a fitted scoop neckline decorated with white pearls and felt flowers and with a hooped bouffant skirt. Her chapel length veil fell from a crown of seed pearls and she wore a pearl necklace with matching earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of garnet roses and white carnations.

Rosemarie Peterson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a ballerina length gown of mint green embridered nylon over taffeta with matching accessories and white gloves. Her bouquet was of red garnet roses and pink carnations and she wore a necklace and earring set, a gift of the bride.

Attending as best man was Roland Klamar of Gatzke, brother of the groom, and the men wore gray business suits with the groom wearing a red rose boutonniere and the best man a white carnation.

Mrs. Peterson chose for her daughter's wedding a brown acetate dress with brown accessories and Mrs. Klamar wore a figured blue acetate dress with matching accessories. They had matching corsages of red roses and white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors for thirty guests and was given by the bride's parents. A three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom was baked by Mrs. Harold Klamar, sister-in-law of the gromo, and was cut and served by Mrs. Roland Klamar, sister of the bride. Hostesses were Mrs. Elvin Peterson and Mrs. Elmer Erickson, aunts of the bride. Alice and Julie Weckwerth, cousins of the bride, were waitresses and Myrna Weckwerth, cousin of the bride, was at the gift table.

One Up But Two Down

When a brand new drug is introduced, it's price is usually high. That's because initial sales may be low, and the price must cover production costs — which are generally as high for small quantities as for big quantities. But once many doctors begin writing prescriptions, the manufacturer steps up production . . . and is thus able to bring the price down. A survey in our own store shows that, in the past 10 years, for every drug that rose in price because raw materials or labor costs went up, two came down in price because demand increased. That's why we say . . .

50th Anniversary Of Girl Scouts Observed Mar. 12

3½ Million Members Now Participate; First Troop Formed in 1912

Almost 3½ million members of Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. celebrated their 50th anniversary on March 12. Juliette Low organized the first troop of 12 girls on March 12, 1912, in Savannah, Ga., bringing from England the principles of scouting as set forth by Lord Baden-Powell, founder of the scouting movement.

Since 1812, almost 18½ million girls and adults have enjoyed the benefits of Girl Scouting. For 50 years, communities across the nation have been grateful for the influence of scouting on their young people and for the many service projects carried out by individual councils.

The impact of Girl Scouting is not only local and national. It is international as well. International friendship has been at the core of the movement since its inception. Through the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, American Girl Scouts are linked to their sisters in 50 other member nations. Each year sees the growth of international exchange of persons, including not only girls but adults, who belong to the World Association.

Both national and international Girl Scout programs are based on the code of ethics expressed in the Promise which today is just as valid in motivating force of Scouting as it was in the movement's early days: "On my honor, I will try to do my duty to God and my country, to help other people at all times, to obey the Girl Scout Laws."

Although they adhere faithfully to the original Promise and Laws of conduct, Girl Scouts have developed a flexible program to meet the needs of a changing world. This combination of stability and adaptability accounts for the tremendous growth of the movement.

The Promise is reflected in the girls' eagerness to serve their community. As they enter upon their golden anniversary year, troops throughout the country are pledging to carry out a project of service to the children and youth of their community. They will be putting into action the second part of the birthday theme, "Honor the Past — Serve the Future."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Landowski and Gerald and Mrs. Evelyn Prigge and Virgil motored to Moorhead a week ago Sunday to visit at the Ross Landowski home and to help Mrs. Landowski celebrate her birthday.

Challenge Given To D.E. Club at Annual Banquet

Howad Rosenwinkel of State Department Is Featured Speaker

"You must have the desire and the courage to take advantage of opportunities as they come to you." This was the advice given by Howard Rosenwinkel, state supervisor of business and distributive education, at the annual appreciation banquet of the Lincoln high school Distributive Education club Wednesday evening at the Rex Cafe. Approximately 25 students, employers and guests were in attendance.

Gary Gustafson served as master of ceremonies for the event with the welcome given by Marcia Nelson and the response by Silas Glere of Falls Jewelry. Jerry Udstrand led the table prayer, musical numbers were given by a trio composed of Lorna and Karen Moe and Kathleen Torgerson and closing remarks were given by Ellen Jorde.

Rosenwinkel presented to the students the challenge of competing as humans against electronic equipment which has been developed at a rapid rate. He noted that the increase of knowledge in the past 50 years has been greater than progress made in the entire previous history of the world.

"The field of distribution, distributing products from producer to consumer, is a growing field," Rosenwinkel stated. "The problem at one time in the United States, and still the problem in many countries, was to produce enough material goods. Now the problem is to market the goods which are being produced. Distribution creates demand."

He noted that one out of every five persons gainfully employed in the United States is in the field of distribution. In Thief River Falls the ratio is even greater at four to one. "Education in itself is not enough," he told the students. "Success depends on the type of education you select and how you use it."

Student training stations this year include Coast-to-Coast, Hartz Super Market, The Fashion Shop, S&L Department store, Paint & Glass Supply, Lind Motor Supply, Falls Jewelry, Grundy's Office Supply and Larson Music company.

proposes a variety show: "65th Precinct" naturally serves as a center for auditions. Since this is also the period when everyone wanted to become a movie star, the entries in the contest are numerous. Activities in the station house, persons appearing for auditions, and the resultant scramble, set the stage for a hilarious evening.

Prices for the program are at 1920's level also—25 cents for adults, 10 cents for children and double for babes in arms. Money raised will be used for PTA projects. And who knows, there may be an answer to the puzzle of "Who is Bathtub Ginny?"

New Warren School Has $20,000 Fire

Blaze Causes Damage to Building and Equipment

Fire which apparently started in a janitor's supply cart caused an estimated $20,000 damage to building and equipment at Warren high school Friday. Among items considered ruined by smoke were new basketball uniforms which the team was to use in Region 8 tournament play tomorrow and Saturday. New uniforms were ordered and expected by tournament time.

Other damages included wiring, cleaning of all draperies, walls and floors, janitor's supplies, furniture, football helmets which melted from the intense heat, a dozen basketballs, band uniforms, choir gowns and curtains. Climax, a team which Warren defeated for the District 31 championship, offered the use of its uniforms for the Region 8 tourney. East Grand Forks, where D. S. Eikenes, former Warren superintendent, now heads the school system, offered the use of basketballs for the tournament.

Oxygen masks recently purchased by the Warren fire department permitted fighting of the fire from both inside and outside the building, thereby holding down the loss figure.

Soo RR Employees' Credit Union Has Big Gains in 1961

Annual Meeting of Unit Wednesday Night Hears Reports on Good Year

Reports presented at the eighth annual meeting of the Soo Line Employees' Credit Union last evening at the Eagles' Hall showed a spectacular growth in this organization during the past year. An increase of 22% was noted in both share and loan balances for a total of $213,960.46 and $202,869.73 respectively at the end of the year.

A considerably slower growth was noted in membership due to several deaths and a number of transferred accounts as a result of the Soo Line merger at the beginning of 1961 and the subsequent moving of the division offices to Minneapolis last summer.

A total of 346 loans totalling $124,427.86 were approved during the year.

A four percent dividend on shares was again declared for the past year, and a 10-percent refund on interest paid by borrowers was made.

C. J. Collins was re-elected to a 3-year term as director, while D. L. Battleson was elected to the other 3-year post. C. M. Knutson was elected to finish the unexpired term of W. A. Walters who moved to Minneapolis last summer and whose term has two years to run.

Glen H. Anderson was re-elected to the supervisory committee, with Arthur B. Larson and Harold Eide being chosen for the other two positions on this committee.

C. M. Havel, Chas. Dablow and Wm. C. Reed, who have been serving as a credit committee pro tempore, were all elected to continue in this capacity during the coming year.

During the social portion of the evening door prizes of merchandise and cash were awarded. C. M. Havel was the winner of the grand prize, a four-speed automatic record player.

At the close of the meeting a buffet supper was served by the Eagles auxiliary.

What's different about Rambler's brakes? They stop when other brakes can't. Double-Safety Brake System has tandem master cylinders. If front brakes fail, rear brakes still work and vice versa. Self-adjusting brakes standard, too.

Mrs. Wm. Holmes One of 12 Finalists for Mrs. Minnesota Title

Mrs. William (Velma) Holmes, Thief River Falls, is the tallest (five feet, eight and one-half inches) of 12 Mrs. Minnesota finalists who will compete for the coveted crown this weekend at the Builders Show in Minneapolis.

The 34-year-old mother of three children (Michael, 6; Stewart, 5, and Cynthia, 1) is an active PTA member. As a money-raising project for the organization, she has written and will direct her play, "The 65th Precinct," next Monday, March 19. She was instrumental in obtaining a free set of braille encyclopedias for the visually handicapped.

Mrs. Holmes represented Thief River Falls in the 1947 Minneapolis Aquatennial. She was encouraged by her husband to enter the Mrs. Minnesota contest.

The family is involved in a do-it-yourself home building project. The project has taken three years, but the Holmes expect to move in this summer. An arts and crafts enthusiast, Mrs. Holmes is employing her knowledge in decorating the interior of their new home.

She is currently chairman of a gourmet club in Thief River Falls. Her family agrees that ragout and baked potatoes is their favorite meal.

Mrs. Holmes puts husband and children ahead of housework She does her heavy housework when her husband, a fireman for the Soo Line railroad, is gone and the children are sleeping.

More than 300 Minnesota homemakers entered the contest this year. They registered with entry blanks distributed by 200 Minnesota LP Gas dealers, Red Owl stores and the Minneapolis Gas company, three major sponsors of the state-wide contest.

The 12 finalists and their husbands will gather for the first time Friday night, March 12, in the Hotel Radisson. They will be guests of Swift & Co. at a 6 p. m. dinner in the hotel's Flame Room. Each contestant will bring a quick-bread she has baked for judging that night. Finalists from outside the Twin Cities will be weekend guests of the Hotel Radisson.

The judges will be with contestants again Saturday afternoon, March 17, when they take part in a series of homemaking tests at the Builders Show in the Minneapolis auditorium. They will prepare a ham and vegetable dinner, compete in a good grooming activity and decorate a dinner table with their own linen and accessories and crystal, china and flatwear provided by Gorham Silver Co. and Jacobs Jewelers, Inc.

The finalists will select food for their afternoon cooking competition at 10 a. m. Saturday. They will shop in a Minneapolis Red Owl food store. Red Owl will award $100 worth of frozen foods to the new Mrs. Minnesota.

Meal preparation will take place in the Minneapolis Gas Company's Blue Flame Hall at the Builders Show. Model kitchens set up in the Auditorium will be employed.

Announcement of the winner will be made during a live television show carried by WCCO-TV between 8:30 and 9 p. m. Saturday night. She will be crowned by the out-going Mrs. Minnesota, Mrs. Howard (Gloria) Schultz of St. Paul.

The new Mrs. Minnesota and her husband will represent the state in the Mrs. America contest held later this year. She will receive an all-expenses, two-week trip to the national contest.

Girl Scout Program Gives Fun, Education

"Have fun while you learn" might be the Girl Scouts' unofficial slogan. It applies both to the girls, seven through 17 years, and to their adult leaders—no age limit! This week the Girl Scouts are observing their 50th anniversary.

Half the secret of an informal educational program such as that of the Girl Scouts is the enjoyment and excitement of learning new things together, sharing responsibilities as part of a team.

Informal as this program may be, it takes superior leadership to make it stimulating and effective. Leadership training has always been basic to Girl Scouting. All leaders receive thorough training, not only in the organization and management of a troop, but in program activities and skills that may range from firing pottery to first aid.

Some leaders will state that it is a challenge to keep one jump ahead of their girls. The leaders and girls are often assisted by program consultants, men and women who can contribute special skills and experience.

To meet the demand for trained leaders, the Girl Scouts maintain four national training centers in Pleasantville, N. Y.; Buck Hill Falls, Penn.; Excelsior Springs, Mo.; and Pacific Grove, Cal. Approximately 1,500 volunteers receive training each year in the four centers.

More than 20,000 women and men from every state of the Union and 80-odd countries have attended the Edith Macy Training School in its camp setting near Pleasantville since its establishment in 1926. Each summer almost 600 adult Girl Scouts receive training there in all aspects of programming and administration, including camp management and the leadership of girls.

At the request of councils, Girl Scout national headquarters staff members also frequently hold institutes on office management, public relations, camping and camp administration, international friendship and other program activities.

On Sunday, March 11—the eve of their golden anniversary—almost 3½ million Girl Scouts across the nation will rededicate themselves to the service of God and their country. They will attend church services in uniform as evidence of the Girl Scout dedication to God.

Raymond Becklund Home Burns Near Middle River Wed.

Family of Five Flees Blazing Building; All Personal Items Lost

Fire which confronted the Raymond Becklund family when they awakened shortly after midnight early Wednesday morning completely destroyed the four-room home they were in the process of building and forced them to leave the burning home in night clothes and without shoes. All personal items were also lost in the blaze.

Mr. and Mrs. Becklund scarcely had time to carry their three young children from the home before the house was enveloped in flames. Keys had been left in the family car and they drove to the Richard Odberg farm nearby to take shelter for the night. The Becklund farm is located about eight miles southwest of Middle River.

The Becklund's have three children, 3-year-old Terry, 2-year-old LuJean and 2-month-old Bobbi. New shoes for the family were purchased by the Salvation Army yesterday and used clothing is being solicited by the local Salvation Army unit. The family is currently staying at the homes of Mrs. Harry Curtis in Middle River and Walter Becklund near Middle River.

While cause of the fire is not known, it was believed to have started from an overheated stove. Insurance was carried on the home which was under construction but there was no insurance on personal items. Anyone wishing to contribute clothing may contact the local Salvation Army for sizes and type of items needed.

This Area Escapes Heavy Snowfall

Thick Layer Recorded in Southern Minnesota

While nearly all other areas of the state were deluged with heavy snow and strong winds early this week, residents in the immediate Thief River Falls area were forced to content themselves with only a trace of snow in the past four days, that amount being noted this morning.

Storm conditions existed as close as Warren where buses were sent out at 1:30 p. m. Monday and roads were difficult to travel due to heavily packed drifts. Most heavily traveled roads were kept open but travel was termed "difficult". Moorhead, Duluth and the Twin Cities were among those areas where heavy snowfall completely halted traffic.

Temperatures were unseasonably cold during the past several days but general sunshine caused some melting of snow nearly every day. High and low temperatures included 36 and 27 Monday, 27 and 7 Tuesday, 23 and 8 Wednesday and a low last night of 12 degrees. The forecast calls for weather much the same today and tomorrow with slightly colder temperatures.

Knox PTA Will Hear Hankerson

M. R. Hankerson, superintendent of Thief River Falls schools, will speak at the monthly meeting of the Knox Parent-Teacher association Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the school gymnasium, according to Robert Farmes, president of the organization. The meeting has been set back one day to avoid conflict with the Washington PTA production of "65th Precinct" in the high school auditorium.

HOCKEY cheerleaders at Lincoln high schol claim you can't beat fun for having a good time. Outfitted in slacks, sweaters and jackets which they purchased with money raised by themselves at candy sales and school concessions, they lead student body support at all home games and most road games during the season. Miss Marilyn Mead, (back row, center) physical education instructor at the school and a cheerleader herself in high school days at Osakis, is instructor for the girls. Cheerleaders from left to right include Vicki Goulet, sophomore; LuAnn Johnson, sophomore; Susan Ballingrud, senior; Muriel Molskness, senior; and Lorraine Lietzow, sophomore.

HILARITY is the theme of "65th Precinct," the home talent variety show to be presented Monday evening by the Washington elementary school PTA. Written and directed by Mrs. William (Velma) Holmes, the presentation centers around the days of Al Capone and the incomparable Elliott Ness. With actual identity withheld, the group above includes one of Elliott Ness' boys, the Dolly Sisters, a blues singer, "The Lady in the $100 Hat" and her son. Moorhead Man DFL Congress Aspirant

H. Noblitt, Concordia Professor, Is Candidate

Support for and interest in Hardin Noblitt, professor at Concordia college, Moorhead, a candidate for Congress from the Seventh district appears to be growing, according to Frank Gerke, Dilworth, co-chairman of the Citizen's committee for Noblitt.

According to Gerke, Noblitt will make at least ten speeches to DFL and public groups during the next month, including one at the Roseau county DFL convention, March 17.

Noblitt has indicated he would accept the Seventh District's endorsement for Congress "if it should be forthcoming" at the district convention on April 29 at Detroit Lakes.

In the 1960 Ninth district convention, Noblitt withdrew as a candidate to promote party harmony. His activities in DFL politics have included being keynote speaker at the district convention and service on various campaign committees. He has been professor of political science at Concordia College for the past twelve years.

Set Spring Drive for Savings Bonds

Plans Made in St. Paul for Intensive Campaign

On March 9, in the St. Paul Hotel, 425 of Minnesota's leaders in industry, finance, labor, communications and savings bond volunteers met to kick off the "Freedom Bond Drive" in Minnesota, scheduled for May and June.

"Freedom Bond" is this year's name for the familiar U. S. savings bond, of which millions of Americans already own an all-time record high of $44.5 billion.

At the meeting State Bond Chairman Rollin O. Bishop announced that the state's goal for purchases in the campaign has been set at $42 million.

Minnesota's famed Liberty Bell presently located on the Capitol grounds at St. Paul will tour the state to spark campaign interest, through the cooperation of the National Guard.

Every Minnesota family will be urged to buy at least one extra savings bond during the campaign, according to Glen R. Johnson, state director for the program.

He also said that every company will conduct a campaign to sign up a minimum of 50 per cent of their employees on payroll savings, and that 8 million employees are already buying bonds regularly each week.

Twin-city area residents and some cities in the state, will, during the campaign, have a first hand opportunity to review one of the famous Mercury 7 Spacecrafts, similar to the one that carried Col. Glenn into space.

Failure To Show 1962 Plates Is Costly To Many

Municipal Court Fines Seven on Charge; Five Other Cases Heard Monday

Failure to display 1962 license plates resulted in a majority of cases being tried in municipal court in Thief River Falls Monday. In most cases a fine of $10 was imposed with $5 suspended. Only highway patrol and city police had cases to be tried before Judge Stanley Mortenson.

In highway patrol cases, Norma A. Nelson, Philip, S. D., forfeited $10 bond for failure to display 1962 license plates. Harold W. Schulz, rt. 2, Red Lake Falls, and Elmer C. Johnson, Warren, were fined $10 each with $5 suspended on the same charge. Rudolph S. Rice, Roseau, was fined $15 on a speeding charge.

Police cases included failure to display 1962 license plates charges against Robert R. Olson, Howard H. Hoium, John Sande and Russell H. Bjerken, all city, each fined $10 with $5 suspended. Ronald C. Larson, rt. 2, Jordan, was fined $15 on a charge of using an illegal muffler.

Roger D. Kolden, St. Hilaire, was fined $10 for having improper equipment on his vehicle. Richard H. Kroke, Stephen, and Dennis H. Seter, Chicago, forfeited bond of $15 each on charges of possession of liquor by a minor.

Deadline Near for Feed Grain Setup

Signup Period Due to End Friday, March 30

Growers who are still "thinking it over" about participating in the 1962 feed grain program were urged today not to delay any longer. The signup period extends only through March 30.

Edward A. Johnson, chairman, Marshall county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, reports that farmer interest is high in Marshall county as well as throughout the country generally. Indications are that 1962 participation will run well ahead of that under last year's feed grain program.

Farmers who take part in the feed grain program first file an intention-to-participate form in the ASCS county office, indicating the number of corn, grain sorghums, and barley acres they intend to divert from production into a soil-conserving use. The minimum diversion is 20 per cent of the farm's base acreage, but many farmers are indicating their intention to divert more than the minimum.

For participating in the feed grain program, farmers earn diversion payments, and they also qualify for price support on the normal production of their 1962 acreage of these crops. If the farmer wishes, up to about half the expected payment to be earned may be made at the time the application to take part in the program is filed.

The chairman points out that a wide participation in the feed grain program this year will not only save the farmer the costs of planting and harvesting acreages of unneeded feed grains, but it will also continue to reduce the costly pileup of feed grains in government ownership, increase conservation of our farmland, and save dollars for every taxpayer through further reductions in government costs of storing, shipping, and handling government-owned grains.

Mighty Morale Builders

Cheerleaders Say Work In Their Trade Is "Fun"

by Marvin Lundin
City Editor

Midst the raucous calls of booing
And the thunder of applause,
It's the boys who get the "oohing"
But the girls who get the "ahs".

Another high school sports season has slipped by, and while it may not have been the most successful in Thief River Falls athletic history, there will be many memories for those who participated in it. Among those who won't forget the heartache of defeat and the sweet taste of victory are the Lincoln high school cheerleaders.

For these 10 girls, who represent in five-member teams the basktball and hockey cheering sections, the season has been busy. But they wouldn't trade a minute of it for anything less strenuous. "It's fun" is all the reason they need to put forth the effort required to learn the trade of generating student school spirit.

Miss Marilyn Mead and Mrs. Darlene Wilhelm, physical education teachers at the school, supervise the respective hockey and basketball cheerleading squads. They provide transportation and serve as chaperones on out-of-town games. They give constructive criticism at the twice-a-week practice sessions. They help organize fund-raising activities for needed expenses. And they take pride in the accomplishments of their students.

Positions in Demand

Personality, appearance, voices and ability to jump all count when tryouts are held each year. This year about 30 girls tried out for the basketball cheerleading positions for the 1962-1963 season and 16 made their bid for hockey cheerleading jobs. The girls must maintain high scholastic standards. "One 'F' and you're out," is the standing rule.

Through candy sales and operation of concessions at athletic events, the girls raise the money to purchase their own uniforms. For the hockey cheerleaders the slacks, sweaters and jackets totaled nearly $50 for each girl. The basketball girls were outfitted for slightly less.

On alternate years the hockey and basketball cheerleaders handle the cheering chores for the football team. Last year the basketball unit led yells on the gridiron. Next year it will be the hockey group's year to shout.

Practice Anywhere

Practices are held Tuesday and Thursday for both groups—"in the halls, the gym, an empty room, just anywhere we can find that isn't being used for something else." Occasionally a new formation is designed to fit a new yell—usually originated by the cheerleaders themselves—but the traditional lyrics that have been used for years are still the most popular and the most successful.

Cheerleaders also are active in pep club activities and the hockey and basketball groups are each responsible for two pep fests per year plus tournaments. Their primary duty is to build morale for team members and boost school spirit in the student body. And they work at it.

Next year cheerleaders for hockey and basketball will have to be in 11th and 12th grades. Wrestling cheerleaders will be 10th grade girls. Younger girls may gain training as B squad cheerleaders. In addition to the five regulars for each sport, two alternates are selected each year. They fill in as needed in either hockey or basketball.

Competition between cheerleaders of opposing teams is as fierce if not more so as competition between teams on the floor or ice or field. No spectators are as vitally interested in the success of the team as the cheerleaders. No one takes a tournament loss so hard. No one puts as much hard work into lifting team spirits. But as the girls say, "Nobody has as much fun."

Halvorson Rink Wins TRF Curling Club Title

The Harold Halvorson rink—Ken Ose, lead; Willie Mathieu, second; Lester Halvorson, third; and Harold Halvorson, skip—won the men's curling championship of the Thief River Curling club on Wednesday night when, in a match that was conceded after six ends of play, the Halvorson rink defeated the Harland (Skippy) Knutson rink, 11-1, in the finals.

In semi-finals competition earlier this week, the Halvorson rink defeated the Wally Tunberg foursome, and the Knutson rink sidelined the Curtis Johnson rink.

In Wednesday night's championship match, the Harold Halvorson rink took command by scoring a single on the first end, and then adding a pair on the second and third ends for a 5-0 lead. After gaining a single on the fifth end, the Halvorsons gave us their lone tally to the Knutson rink when, after a measure, the Knutson rink picked up a score. The match was closed out after the sixth end when the Halvorson rink piled five rocks into the house for a five-ender.

In the women's division, which semi-finals match was held on Wednesday night between the Fern Liden rink and the May Jahr rink. The Liden rink won by a 6-4 margin, but the match was in doubt until the final rock was thrown. May Jahr had an opportunity to force the match into an extra-end, but her final skip rock just barely coasted through the house, leaving the Liden rink counting one. The Liden rink will now meet the Clara Mae Swanson rink for the title. The line score of the Halvorson vs. Knutson match;

Halvorson	122 105	— 11

Best Wishes for the Ponies

That will be a pretty solid team that coach Irv St. John will send out on the spacious UND fieldhouse court on Friday night when the Warren Ponies, as District 31 champions, meet the Ada Vikings in a Region Eight first-round basketball tournament game.

The Ponies, playing an aggressive hard-driving style of ball, moved through the district tournament last week by scoring wins over Oslo, Crookston, and Climax. Warren's toughest tussle was in the opening game, against the Oslo Bobcats. In that game, the Ponies dropped behind in the opening minutes, trailing by a 10-2 score, but coach St. John's club didn't become unduly alarmed, and their running tactics finally overcame Oslo's superior height, and gave Warren a fairly decisive win. Center Bob Peterson, battling a pair of towering Bobcats in Jim Campbell and Roy Bushaw off the boards, was perhaps the game's star for the Ponies.

This Warren club resembles the Bemidji Lumberjacks to a considerable extent, and this isn't by accident. Irv St. John was an all-state center for coach "Bun" Fortier's Bemidji club in the early 1950's, and he is well-versed in the Bemidji style of play.

The Ponies this season are even uniformed like the Lumberjacks, having jerseys that are of a T-shirt type, and with a color scheme that is at a variance with the traditional Warren black-and-orange colors. This is perhaps part of coach St. John's strategy in shaking loose the Warren defeat complex. It would surely be fine to see Warren against Bemidji in the regional finals, and with Warren coming-out-the-winner.

But before that happy event can occur, the Ponies will have to get past a veteran Ada club on Friday night. Ada, using a modified press, with Dean and Don Bowyer harassing the opposing play-maker, and with Herb Hasz a power on the boards and doing the bulk of the scoring, will be a problem. Warren's Jerry Cook and Tom Howard, both of whom are capable ball-handlers and possess plenty of poise, should "solve" the Ada press.

Up the Allan Cup Ladder

Coach Bill (The Beast) Juzda's senior hockey Winnipeg Maroons moved up the first rung in their quest for Canada's Allan Cup this week when, on Monday night, they defeated the Port Arthur Bearcats, 4-2, to close out the best-of-seven series with a four games won and one lost margin.

The Maroons are manned by a number of players who are well-known to the fans in this area. Juzda, who continues to play a slam-bang brand of hockey at forty-one years of age, is playing coach. Juzda played several seasons with the local Thieves. Freddy Dunsmore, Sheldon Bloomer, Tom Marshall, Jim McKenzie, Lou Joyal, Ross Parke and others played with senior hockey teams down here during the heyday of the States-Dominion hockey league.

Juzda, incidentally, was one of the few Canadians who wasn't surprised at the outcome of the Sweden vs. Canada hockey game on Tuesday night, and which was won by the Swedes, 5-3. A week or so ago, in an exhibition game at Warroad, Juzda played with the Warroad Lakers as they dropped a decision to the smooth-passing Swedish Nationals. Bill was impressed by the Swedes.

Those Surprising Swedes

The Swedish Nationals hockey team followed up their surprising 2-1 win over the United States Nationals in the World's hockey tournament being played in Colorado by scoring a more surprising 5-3 win over the Canadian hockey representatives, the Galt Terriers, on Tuesday night. That win just about clinched the world's title for the Swedes.

These results must make local resident Dan Bjorkman very proud and happy. Wouldn't be surprised to see him with a hockey stick in hand and issuing a challenge to such Sons of Norway stalwarts as Anton Hall and Gust Schilbred for a hockey game on the rink below the Laundry.

Browse Cutting for Deer Again Planned Sunday

Attempts will be made again this Sunday to assist the deer herd in eastern Marshall county through the cutting of browse along bulldozed trails, according to James Lee, president of the Pennington County Sportsmen's club. Persons interested are to meet at 1 p. m. at the city auditorium on Sunday.

Contributions to assist in paying for bulldozer work to open trails for deer to travel are badly needed, Lee added. Cannisters for collection of such contributions are being placed throughout the city this week or checks may be made payable to the sportsmen's club and sent to the Times office with envelopes marked "Deer Fund."

SLOW DOWN AND LIVE

Region 8 Tournament Opens Friday at G.F.

Coach Clarence (Bun) Fortier's Bemidji Lumberjacks will open defense of their Region Eight basketball title on Friday night when, at 7:30 p. m., they meet the Kennedy Rockets in a first-round game of the tournament being played on the UND fieldhouse court in Grand Forks. The second game on Friday's opening round will find the Warren Ponies, champions of District 31, meeting the Ada Vikings, the champions of District 30, at 9:00 p. m.

The regional finals will be played on Saturday night at 9:00 p. m., and will be preceded by a preliminary game at 7:30 p.m. between the losers of the first-round games.

Regional tournament play will not be a new experience for the four schools as they have had teams that participated in previous Region Eight tourneys. Bemidji and Ada, though, are the only schools to have represented Region Eight in the state tournament, and Ada's lone entry, in 1933, came about when Bemidji and Thief River Falls were disqualified.

Marshall Soil District Is Active in '61 Report Shows

Hapka Receives Soil Saver Award; Leonard Yutrzenka Nominated

Statistics for 1961 operations of the Marshall County Soil Conservation district were presented by John Polley, work unit conservationist, at the annual meeting of the district held recently at Florian. Orville Elseth, Newfolden, chairman of the board of supervisors, presided at the meeting.

During the past year the district added 29 new cooperators, completed 21 conservation farm plans, assisted in planting 19 acres of farmstead windbreaks and 42.7 miles of field shelterbelts, planned 56 livestock water pits, planned 140 miles of surface field drainage, assisted with 58.6 miles of mains and outlets and conducted soil mapping of 25,920 acres.

Polley explained the use of the soils map, stating that it is an inventory of the soil which determines the need and extent of conservation practice application. Drainage and erosion control were listed as the greatest problems.

Figures released by H. I. Knutson Marshall county highway engineer, indicated that it costs between $800 and $1,000 per mile over a seven or eight year period to clean eroded soil from county ditches—an average of $100 to $125 per year per mile. There are approximately 300 miles of county ditch in Marshall county.

Halvorson Speaks

H. G. Halverson, area conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service stationed in Thief River Falls, reported that two counties were scheduled for completion of soils mapping in this 14-county area by 1967. More soil scientists will be available for the remainder of the counties at that time.

Robert Bergland, state chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, discussed cost sharing on conservation practice application, commodity credit loans and production controls. He listed soil and water as the most basic of the nation's natural resources and said all of the people in the nation have a responsibility for maintenance of them.

Harlem Sandberg, Marshall county 4-H club agent, reviewed a tree planting program being handled by the extension office and the conservation district. Ponderosa pine trees will be furnished by the district to 4-H club members carrying forestry or beginning conservation as a project.

Hapka Wins Award

Leonard Hapka of Argyle was presented with the district Soil Saver award for 1961. A district cooperator since 1957, he developed his conservation farm plan in 1959 and has made revisions since that time. In 1961 he planted 1.2 miles of field shelterbelt and he has developed a system of field strip cropping to aid in erosion control. He also had a pit dug for water storage and wildlife use.

Leonard Yutrzenka was nominated as candidate to succeed himself as fifth district supervisor. Townships voting for the supervisor were listed as Nelson Park, Lincoln, East Park, Wanger, West Valley, Wright and New Maine.

Unique door prizes were one-half mile of trees for a field windbreak and planting costs. They were won by William Sczepanski of Stephen and Edward J. Johnson of Warren.

Mondale, Wozniak Not to Seek DFL Nod for Governor

Announce Sunday They Will Support Candidacy of Karl Rolvaag for Post

Two prospective candidates have taken themselves out of the picture and Lt. Gov. Karl Rolvaag this week had no apprent opposition for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor endorsement for governor.

Atty. Gen. Walter F. Mondale and State Rep. D. D. Wozniak, St. Paul, announced Sunday they would not seek the gubernatorial endorsement and would support Rolvaag.

The announcements came at a meeting of the DFL State Central Committee.

"I'm going to support Karl Rolvaag at the party convention and during the campaign," said Mondale. "I will be standing to his left when he is sworn in as the next governor of Minnesota."

While Mondale indicated he would seek reelection as attorney general, Wozniak said he was "not coming out for governor" and soon will announce his decision on another office. The law-maker, chairman of the House Tax Committee, is expected to announce for the DFL nomination for lieutenant governor.

The DFL candidates for state office will be endorsed at the party's state convention in Duluth May 25-27.

MERCY MERGER — Two leading private agencies — CARE and MEDICO — have joined forces to make more effective their programs of aid on behalf of the American public to the needy overseas. The merger is symbolized by employees Ida Leinwand (left) and Melba Corso, pictured at the organizations' newly combined international headquarters in New York City. MEDICO, which sends doctors, nurses, technicians and medical supplies abroad, will operate as a service of CARE, which provides food, tools and other self-help items. The merger brings to 36 the number of countries covered and makes possible a unified assault on mankind's greatest enemies — hunger, poverty and disease.

Attack Wild Oats, Is County Agent Advice

First, plan your strategy carefully. Then attack, attack, attack!

That's the way to make war against wild oats, County Agent Paul Stelmaschuk advised Pennington County farmers this week.

Wild oats are hard to control because of their habits of delayed germination and shattering seed before most small grain crops are harvested.

The following cultural weed control methods for wild oats are suggested:

1. Do not plow under seeds that have shattered from the current crop. They may remain alive for many years when buried. Weathering helps break dormancy if seeds stay near the surface.

2. Cultivate shallow in the spring to break the soil crust and cover the seed. Cultivate later to kill the wild oats that have germinated and to bring up other seed that is no longer dormant. Late spring and summer cultivation should be shallow.

About the middle of June put in a crop adapted to late sowing—such as an early variety of flax, potatoes, corn, proso millet, buckwheat, or Sudangrass.

3. Cultivate as in suggestion number two and sow barley late. Use fertilizer and heavy rate of sowing.

4. Sow tame oats early and cut for hay before wild oats have formed seed. Plow immediately after the hay crop.

5. More than one year of early tillage, and delayed sowing or cutting of tame oats for hay, is necessary on badly infested fields.

6. Wild oats can regrow after cultivation. Avoid this by cultivating not earlier than the three-leaf stage, completely uprooting the plants.

DATC (Avadex) and barban (Carbyne) have shown promise of controlling wild oats at the University of Minnesota's Northwest Experiment Station at Crookston. Both of these chemicals now have label clearance. Be sure to follow label instructions carefully.

Pre-plant soil incorporation treatments of DATC at 1¼ to 1½ pounds per acre gave satisfactory control of wild oats with no injury to flax but reduced wheat and barley stands. Less injury to the crop may result by planting barley and wheat 2-3 inches deep before spraying, followed by spraying and two harrowings to incorporate the chemical into the soil.

In post-emergence applications at 4-6 ounces per acre, barban gives good control of wild oats but may cause some injury to flax. Wild oats are most sensitive to barban from the time the second leaf appears until the third leaf appears (usually 4-9 days after emergence).

More information on control of wild oats and other weeds will be found in Extension Folder 212, "Cultural and Chemical Weed Control in Field Crops."

Editorials . . .

"As the Government does more and more for the people, it defeats its very purpose. For its concept of responsibility tends to create irresponsibility. Irresponsibility in Government, because at some point the Government takes on so many tasks that it performs none of them well. Irresponsibility in the people, because they're led to believe they no longer need to do things for themselves."

Nuclear Testing

President Kennedy has no alternative in the testing of nuclear bombs and he should proceed with the program as he announced it. We are sure the tests made by our country will be of a kind that will not be harmful. The only danger is that Khrushchev, in retaliation, will put on a bigger show, but we have no assurance that he will not do that if we stop all tests.

Here is a proper place for intervention by the United Nations, providing international control and inspection to outlaw all nuclear weapons. Until the Russians agree to such restraints we must keep up our experiments in self defence.

Canadian Growth

The population of Canada increased four million during the last ten years according to the census figures made public last week. The Dominion's official population is now 18,238,247, and nearly one million of this total are residents of Manitoba.

It is comforting to know that the country to the north of us is going forward. Located as we are, on one of the main highways for north and south traffic in this area, we have much to gain as our neighbors expand their operations.

Three Records

Flying at a speed of 1,300 miles an hour, a B58 Jet broke three speed records in a non-stop flight from Los Angeles to New York and back. The round trip was completed in four hours and twenty minutes. This flight was another great achievement.

On the other hand it probably means that the jets that can't fly that fast will be replaced by B58s. There will be pressure for another big expenditure for a fleet of the new models, and these in turn probably will be obsolete in a couple of years. In the next two years, at the rate we are going, we will be raising the debt ceiling three times. Is it good or bad?

Danger Ahead

Donald Rogers, business and financial editor of the New York Herald Tribune, thinks the American economy is "poised on the threshold of what could be its biggest boom year in history."

"The slow-paced recovery of 1961 is picking up speed. Given enough momentum, it could break many business records thruout 1962 and beyond," he said. But he sees danger ahead, in an informative and interesting report on the general trend of our economy from which we present the following excerpts:

> "Despite the upsurge in prosperity, the nation's rate of economic growth remains in doubt. Prosperity seems assured. A sound economic policy to go with it seems less assured.
> "Growth—real growth—remains in doubt because business capital spending—re-investment of profits—is in doubt.
> "No one really expects industry to put more than 15 per cent of the gross national product into capital investment of new plant and equipment. This has been the American rate of re-investment for several years.
> "Just by way of comparison—30 per cent of Russia's gross national product goes into capital investment. Germany is investing 23 per cent; Italy 21 per cent; France 18 per cent.
> "Why is this? Why is the richest nation growing slower than the rest of them? I don't care how many task forces study the problem. They'll come up with only one answer if they have the economic sense of high school sophomores. It's because of our tax laws, the weakening, debilitating enemy within our nation, created and decreed by a politically motivated Congress.
> "Growth in a capitalistic society can come only from capital investment. We are not, as a society, providing the incentive for that kind of investment. Corporate profits, after taxes, have remained about the same, $20 to $22 billion annually for the last decade.

Mr. Rogers sees as another danger that threatens our future, the war between big industry and big labor, which he looks upon as the "major hot war of our time." He says:

> "I mean the hot war between the two economic giants in our land—giant labor and giant capital. These two great monoliths, engaged in their titanic struggle for supremacy, pose the greatest danger to our economy in our time—greater by far than the threat of Imperialistic communism.
> "The industry-wide labor unions in America today have almost unlimited economic power.
> "What we sometimes don't perceive, however, is the fact that in some basic industries, a few corporations have almost equally unlimited power. These are not monoplies but groups of a few corporations that control a whole industry.
> "What is the difference between unions getting together on an industry-wide basis to bargain for wages, or all of the corporations getting toether to set prices? There is only a difference in degree. For wages constitute 85 per cent of the cost of most manufactured items. Prices constitute, of course, 100 per cent of the cost to the consumer. Thus we have a whole array of legal talent to police 15 per cent of the cost of an item, while we ignore those who are responsible for 85 per cent of that cost.
> "I must say, merely as a consumer, that the antitrust laws are now the most puzzling laws in the land. Government officials have taken action against a company because its prices were higher than a competitor's; they have taken action against another company because its prices were lower than another's; they have taken action against a company because it had prices the same as a competitor and believe it or not, they have even taken action against a company because it had prices so low a competitor complained it couldn't compete—all of this was done on the basis of protecting the little fellow who is the defenseless consumer.
> "Ah, the defenseless consumer, pitted against the corporate ogre and the thieves of Wall Street.
> "On the other side of no-man's land, our corporate world, with its own peculiar brand of corporate gutlessness, is not doing much more to protect the free enterprise system than is the industry-wide labor union.
> "Under the extreme and extraordinary pressures by the union, many corporations cannot remain competitive. Every time one collapses at the bottom of the industrial heap it runs to Washington and makes out a case of necessity.
> "As a result we are subsidizing in one way or another nearly every manufacturing and producting industry in America.
> "And then we wonder why we are not able to compete in world markets.
> "In time, I submit, we will find our manufacturing processes as mired in government help as is our agricultural industry.

Can We Afford The Ideal ?

Last week, down in Murray County, the Slayton school district rejected a proposed bond issue in the amount of $480,000 to build a new elementary school. In spite of blizzard conditions voters managed to get to the polls. This was the second time in a period of three months that the voters expressed their opposition to the proposal.

Two weeks ago, in Montevideo, the voters turned down by a nearly two to one margin a proposed bond issue to provide additional high school space. This was the third time the voters of the Montevideo school district, by decisive majorities, had turned thumbs down on bond issue proposals. In 1960 they voted 1,956 to 368 against a new high school that would cost $1,500,000, and in October of 1961 they voted 1,231 to 532 against a million dollar addition to the old high school.

Bond issues for school purposes have been rejected by the voters in other communities in recent months, which indicates that we may be moving into an era of taxpayer revolts. It is an interesting possibility. A taxpayer's revolt has been long overdue.

Reading the editorial comments of the Slayton and the Montevideo newspapers, we gather that there is some question about the need for more classrooms. John Webber of the Slayton Herald raised the question of classroom standards, and who determines what a classroom size should be. From the Montevideo American came an observation that indicates classroom size may have been a factor in the election in that district. In groping for a reason, the Montevideo American made this significant statement:

> "It was the third time in the past 16 months that voters have turned down building programs designed to solve what the board, the citizens committee, the state department of education, and others, have termed overcrowded conditions."

Breaking it down to simple terms, we gather that the idealists at Slayton and Montevideo, who thought, no doubt sincerely, that the community should provide ideal education facilities, were outnumbered by those good citizens who, still thinking in terms of the best interests of their children, recognized the merits of a more practical approach.

All of which is interesting because it points up to a question we must decide as a community. We have some decisions to make about the future of our own school operations that are tremendously important.

And apparently, very important in this picture, is the question of standards. Can we afford the ideal, or must we, somehow, struggle along and be satisfied with what is practical.

The 4 that goes around acting like a V-8...Tempest!

Used to be that people swore by V-8's and V-8's alone. And then along came Tempest's spunky 4 to steal their thunder. The hottest version* of this 4 (166 hp) puts out more horsepower than any other production 4 in the world. More torque, too. And every version, standard 110 hp on up, is smooth and silent and effortless. About the only thing Tempest doesn't share with the big boys is its appetite for gasoline and spare parts. Try a drive in a Tempest 4 soon, hear? You might as well save while you're swinging! Pontiac Tempest

UPPER MIDWEST COUNCIL FOR BETTER VISION

Bottle glass no more makes a pair of sunglasses than colored beads make an emerald necklace. Each takes precision and quality to become more than a cheap imitation of the real thing.

Unless they're right for your sight, sunglasses can do your eyes more harm than good. Assembly-line irregularities and inferior lenses can actually fog and strain your vision. Depend on sunwear ground to the prescription of your own two eyes.

When eyes are gone, you'd pay any price to get them back. But why wait until it's too late? Protect your only pair of eyes with regular examinations. See an ethical eye examiner who relies on competence, rather than highly touted bargains.

WHO HITS THE MOST NAILS ON THE HEAD?

Every nail driven home helps strengthen our economy. Much of the money that makes new construction possible comes from the nation's 4,200 Insured Savings and Loan Associations, like ours. Making more than a million home loans a year... of which $5 billion is for new construction... Insured Savings and Loan Associations finance more residential construction than any other type of financial institution.

Job-holders Rise 6.4 Pct. in TRF in Decade

First Installment: General Picture of Developments
By Albert Marshall

(Special to the Thief River Falls Times)

Many of Minnesota's regional trade centers have lost some of their original vitality with the decline in farm population which has marked the past quarter century.

Thief River Falls, however, seems to be doing a bit more than holding its own. A comparison of employment figures covering the years since 1950 show that actually Thief River Falls employers have created 174 new jobs in the past ten years.

A study of employment trends in the state over the period starting in 1950 and ending Dec. 31, 1961 reveals the fact that over 16 per cent more people are gainfully employed in Minnesota right now than in 1950.

Data supplied by the state employment security department was also obtained from 25 offices located in the major cities in the non-metropolitan areas. The figures showed that some of these cities had made remarkable strides in providing more jobs for their residents—and had increased in population and in other economic areas as a result.

Employment Gains Made

While Thief River Falls was unable to match the performance of these cities, it more than stood its ground. The employment office statistics show that local employment registered a 6.4 per cent gain during the decade.

Since Thief River Falls has little industry, and employment in that classification actually fell off a trifle, all the employment gains fell in other lines of activity.

That classification chiefly responsible for the gain in employment was the one that includes government agencies and the public schools. There were 230 more people on their payrolls in 1961 than there were ten years before.

State Gain — 16 per cent

In the state as a whole, employment reached its peak in 1960 with 956,100 gainfully employed. In 1961, there were 952,500 working.

The state department's statistics revealed a gain of 133,600 jobs over the ten year span, for a gain of 16.3 per cent.

As might be expected by those who have kept themselves posted on business activity through the newspaper columns, the Twin City metropolitan area comprising the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, their suburbs, and other sections of the five counties (Anoka, Dakota, Hennepin, Ramsey, and Washington) included in the metropolitan district, had employment gains that were above average.

The Twin City metropolitan area showed a gain of employment of 22.4 per cent.

On the other hand, in contrast to this rosy picutre, Minnesota's other large city, Duluth, presented a distressing picutre.

There were 5,050 fewer people employed in Duluth during 1960-61 than there were during 1950-51. Employment had declined by 11.3 per cent.

Nine Cities Led Parade

Although total employment outside the Twin City complex and the Head of the Lakes showed a smaller gain than the state average—one of 11.4 per cent, nine outstate communities turned in stellar performances, besting the state average.

Five of these nine communities were southern Minnesota towns—Fairmont, Mankato, Owatonna, Rochester and Worthington.

Two of the brighter spots were the Little Falls and St. Cloud in central Minnesota.

The city of Moorhead, part of the fast growing Fargo-Moorhead urban unit, also displayed an unusual growth.

Only one city in the northern part of the state could boast of appreciable employment gains. That city was Grand Rapids.

Employment gains registered by these nine cities were as follows: Moorhead, 48.7 per cent; Rochester 40.4 per cent; St. Cloud 35 pct; Little Falls, 32 pct; Owatonna, 29.2 pct; Mankato, 26.4 pct; Grand Rapids, 20.9 pct; Fairmont, 19.7 pct; and Worthington, 16.4 pct.

In all but one of these nine places, increased employment in manufacturing sparked the overall job improvement. Moorhead, with relatively few jobs in industry, showed a decline in industrial employment, but impressive gains in other areas could be attributed to the facts that Moorhead profited by stepped up commercial activity exhibited in conjunction with its twin city, Fargo.

Parallel Gains

More people employed in industry apparently created new jobs in other lines of activity. For all but one of the nine cities showed employment gains in non-manufacturing activity in excess or at least equal to the state average gain in employment in this area—one of 18 per cent.

The sole exception to this rule occurred at Worthington. Worthington showed only a 8.3 per cent gain in non-manufacturing employment, largely, it may be deduced, from adverse farm conditions in that part of the state and a cutback in railroad employment.

Lesser Gains Elsewhere

Falling below average employment gains for Minnesota, but still making good progress in creating jobs were the following four cities with gains over 10 per cent: Fergus Falls (15 pct), Albert Lea and Willmar (14 pct), and Marshall (13 pct).

Five cities reported gains in the five to ten per cent range: Montevideo (9 pct), Faribault (8 pct), Crookston (7 pct), and Bemidji and Thief River Falls (6 per cent).

Conditions were more static in these five cities, Austin, New Ulm, Red Wing and Winona reported gains of approximately three per cent; and Virginia, one of two per cent.

1961 State Honey Crop Sets Record

29,432,000 Pounds Were Produced in Minnesota

Thanks to billions of busy bees working overtime last summer in fields and forests, there's a lot of honey on the market this year—for use as a spread and in cooking and baking.

Minnesota leads the nation in honey production. The 1961 Minnesota honey crop totaling 29,432,000 pounds was the largest crop since records were started in 1939 and was 10 per cent larger than in 1960, according to the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service of the Minnesota and U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Honey is at its best uncooked—as a spread or topping, but it has dozens of other uses, says Home Agent Laura Duerst. On a blustery winter day, hot biscuits and honey or pancakes or waffles topped with honey have real taste appeal. When you use honey as a sirup, you may wish to dilute it slightly with hot water to make it less sweet and easier to pour.

For a sandwich spread, mix honey with chopped nuts and cream cheese. Or combine it with peanut butter. For variety, substitute honey for the sugar on cinnamon toast.

Here are some other ideas: Try honey and nuts on ice cream. Drizzle honey over your morning grapefruit. Make some honey dressing to add zest to your fruit salads.

Honey also adds special goodness to many cooked and baked products. It may be used in preparing custards, baked apples, candying sweet potatoes. Brushed on ham during the last half hour of baking, it adds extra flavor and a golden glaze.

Black-top Job Is Awarded in Polk

The Minnesota Highway Department has announced contract awards on two federal-aid secondary road improvement jobs in Polk and Swift counties let February 27 and 28. The contracts were awarded to the Hazelmere Bituminous Co., Fairmont, who were the successful low bidders on both contracts for a total of $247,568.

The Polk county project calls for sand-gravel subbase, gravel base and plant-mixed bituminous base on 13½ miles on CSAH 21 between Sherack and the east county line. There were 13 bids of which the Hazelmere Company was the lowest at $129,411. Work is to begin June 4 and be completed by August 15.

Farm Insurance Short Course Set

To Be Held March 27-29 on 'U' M. St. Paul Campus

The St. Paul Campus of the University of Minnesota will be the scene of the third annual farm mutual insurance company short course March 27 through 29, it was announced by Robert R. Pinches, acting director of agricultural short courses at the University.

The course is sponsored by the University's Institute of Agriculture in cooperation with the State Association of Farmer Mutual Insurance Companies, the Farm Mutual Reinsurance Association and the National Association of Mutual Insurance Companies.

Those attending the course will receive information on basic insurance principles and policy coverage, problems of setting rates and making adjustments, handling arson cases, legal and legislative problems and new developments in insurance, says S. A. Engene, professor of agricultural economics at the University, who is program chairman.

Instructors will include five out-of-state speakers.

More information may be obtained from the Short Course Office, Institute of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 1.

F. F. Rondeau, president of the Mutual Service Insurance Companies, St. Paul, will be the main speaker at the annual convention banquet of Central Cooperatives, Inc., slated for the Hotel Duluth main ballroom Monday evening, March 19th, announces Paul W. Brown, member services manager of the five-state regional cooperative. Entertainment at the banquet includes the Shrine Chorus of Superior, and ballroom dancing.

This is the 45th annual convention of CCI, and advance registrations indicate that some 450-500 delegates from member cooperatives in Northern Minnesota, Northern Wisconsin, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and the Dakotas will attend the two-day affair, Monday and Tuesday.

NEWS NOTE

WARNING: U.S. INVADED

More than 4¼ million invade United States in past year!

Now scattered throughout every city, village, and farm. Totally dependent on others for every need.

None can read, write, or speak our language. They know nothing about any religion.

Similar invasion expected this year — and next. Immediate action imperative!

PARENTS, you are helping feed, clothe, and shelter these newcomers— the 4¼ million babies born last year. You will teach them to walk and talk, and how to live. Teach them, too, about God . . . give them a faith to live by.

Trained workers at your church are ready to help.

The future of your country — and your children — rests with you.

Join hands with your church to give them a faith, and a future — TODAY.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Cy Carpenter New Chairman of County DFL

State Chairman Geo. Farr Is Speaker at Convention Friday

The Pennington County DFL convention was held in the Eagles hall Friday, March 16, with 125 persons attending. The following officers were elected: chairman, Cy Carpenter; chairwoman, Mrs. Gladys Joringdal; vice chairman, Charles Kotaska; vice chairwoman, Mrs. Orlando Chervestad; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Bernell Myrum. Bernard Myers was named to the state central committee. Delegates to the district and state DFL conventions are Cy Carpenter, Charles Kotaska, Bernard Myers, Roy Wiseth, Mrs. Bernell Myrum and Odin Hanson. Alternates are Carl R. Anderson, Stanley Radniecki, Ole Selmanson, Mrs. Alfred Johnson, Alfred Johnson and Mrs. Gladys Joringdal.

The convention passed resolutions endorsing Karl Rolvaag for governor and Ben Wichterman for Congress.

State DFL chairman George Farr, speaking at the convention, said that the Republican party is lashing out in all directions, attempting to divert attention from Elmer Andersen's failures as governor.

"In recent weeks the GOP has attacked Freeman, McCarthy, Rolvaag, Humphry, Blatnick, Karth, Mondale, Donovan and the Liberals in the legislature.

"They have tried to cover up Andersen's poor record in office by laying a smokescreen of confusion, excuses and buck-passing. They have even tried to include the President of the United States among those responsible for Andersen's failures."

Red Lake Electric Members To Vote On 4 Amendments

Annual Meeting Slated in Red Lake Falls; Three Directors To Be Elected

Four proposed amendments to the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the Red Lake Electric Cooperative Inc. will be voted on at the annual meeting of the cooperative to be held April 4 in the Red Lake Falls community hall. Registration will begin at noon and the official meeting will be called to order at 1 p. m.

Also included in the order of business will be reports of officers, directors and committees; election of three directors from three districts for a 3-year term; and transaction of other business which may properly come before the meeting.

Amendments are in the form of resolutions which have been mailed to all members of the cooperative. Official ballots which must be signed by persons voting are also included with the copies of resolutions and should be brought to the meeting or mailed if the member will not be able to attend.

Resolution number 1, is to eliminate from the articles and by-laws the following sentence: "In no event may any capital be retired, unless after the proposed retirement, the capital of the cooperative shall equal 40 per cent of the total assets of the cooperative." This would allow the cooperative to pay out to the members amounts of their capital credits or equities when it is deemed such payment will not impair its financial condition.

Resolution number 2 would allow the cooperative to apply a patron's membership fee, deposit and-or credits earned upon a debt owed by a member or a former member to the cooperative.

Resolution number 3 would make the duration of the cooperative perpetual instead of limited to 30 years. The change is permitted by the laws of Minnesota.

Resolution number 4 would eliminate any specified time limit for reception of nominees for directors in district meetings.

FIREPOWER will be demonstrated March 27 at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls by Jerome Mayer, fire protection engineer. The program will be open to the public free of charge and will include a series of demonstrations on how fires start and how they can be combatted. Presentation of the series is sponsored by the community welfare committee of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Pennington County Safety Council, Thief River Falls fire department and local insurance agents.

Fire Prevention Demonstration Set

Acclaimed to be "most spectacular fire prevention demonstration ever seen", a fire demonstration will be conducted by Jerry Mayer, fire protection engineer, on Tuesday, March 27, at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium. The public is invited to attend the demonstration which is cosponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and local insurance firms.

Mayer is nationally recognized and specializes in training lectures on the causes and control of fires and explosions in industrial properties, institutions, mercantile establishments and homes. He has been a fire protection engineer for 32 years, serving 18 years as fire insurance inspector in more than 16 states and 12 years as safety director and fire protection manager for Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing company.

Mayer has designed and built "convincers" to show proper handling and mis-handling of inflammable and explosive materials. He has a 24-foot table full of miniature buildings, explosion chambers, Projectors and other chemical, electrical and mechanical apparatus. The program is filled with real fires and explosions, constant demonstrations and strong impact for lasting impressions.

Sig Sinding heads the Chamber of Commerce community welfare committee which arranged for the series. Also cooperating in addition to the local insurance firms are the Pennington County Safety Council and the Thief River Falls fire department.

There will be no charge for attendance at the event and school students will witness the performance in the afternoon. The demonstrations will show how fires start, how they might have been prevented and how to combat them once they have started.

$138,000 Bond Sale Goal of Campaign

Pennington county's quota for the Freedom Bond Drive to be conducted in May and June has been set as $138,000 it was announced today by J. M. Roche, volunteer Savings Bond committee chairman for the county.

He also reported that sales of Series E and H bonds in Pennington county during February totaled Minnesota sales totaled $5,790,000 in February, 15.3 per cent of the state quota of $80,400,000.

Deadline for Wheat Raisers Signup Mar. 30

ASC Chairman Cites Need of Fast Action to Secure Supports

With only a few days left before the March 30 signup deadline for the 1962 wheat stabilization program, farmers were reminded today that they will not be eligible for price support on their 1962 wheat crop unless they file an application to participate and then actually comply with provisions of the wheat program.

Winton Knutson, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committee, expressed his belief that many wheat growers are overlooking the fact that provisions of the 1963 wheat program are different from those of previous years. He emphasized that merely complying with the wheat acreage allotment this year will not be sufficient to qualify for price support on the 1962 wheat crop.

"We want every wheat farmer who may wish to take out price support on his 1962 wheat crop to understand just what he has to do in order to qualify this year," the chairman declared.

"To be considered as eligible for price support on 1962-crop wheat," he explained, "the wheat farmer must file an application to participate in the 1962 wheat stabilization program, and this must be done during the established signup period, which extends through March 30. Then the farmer must actually comply with his farm's wheat allotment and he must devote the acreage diverted from the production of wheat to a soil-conserving use.

"Diversion payments—as well as price support on the crop—are available to wheat growers who comply with provisions of the 1962 wheat stabilization program."

Producers may file an intention-to-participate form at the ASCS county office any weekday except Saturday, from now through Friday, March 30. The office is open from 8:00 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. It is located in the Pennington county courthouse.

Grygla - Gatzke Residents Hear of High School Plans

To hear answers to questions on the proposed high school for the Grygla and Gatzke areas, a large number of district residents attended a special meeting called by the Grygla school board recently in the Grygla school gymnasium. A representative of the state department of education was present to outline the procedure and situation.

The department official stated that at the present time there are enough high school students to establish a high school and that by looking at the school census for the coming years it appears that the enrollment will maintain itself sufficiently.

He cited the shift-in population from rural to urban areas, noting that the decreasing rural population is part of a trend toward larger farming enterprises. It was also pointed out that the valuation in Gatzke and Grygla districts increased about $27,000 in combined valuation during the past year.

Initially stating that the mill rate for the district would be approximately 192 mills, the department representative had two other major items called to his attention. One was the 10 cents per acre payment on non-agricultural land which would result in receipts of $12,000 annually for the two districts and lower the rate about 22 mills. The other was the present gymnasium which is of high school standards and would reduce building costs approximately $125,000. This would reduce capital outlay mill rate by approximately 25 mills. The new building had been proposed at $375,000, including a gymnasium.

Board members stated that in preparing an estimated budget with John O. Pearson, Marshall county superintendent of schools, it was agreed that about $80,000 would have to be raised in local revenue. This is about $8,000 more than the amount that is presently being raised by the combined districts.

The districts presently pay slightly over 72,000 in local taxes including $52,472 in the Grygla district, $13,523 in the Gatzke district and $6,159 in the Skime district.

Board members stated it was "disheartening" to see these three districts paying almost $28,000 for non-resident high school tuition to outside districts in addition to transportation costs. If the proposal is accepted, they said, the money will stay within the combined district and additional state and federal aids could be received.

A plat of the proposed combined district has been submitted to the department of education and an opinion is expected soon. If approved by the state department, the board said, 25 per cent of the freeholders in the Gatzke district would be necessary to petition for an election.

School Board To Ask $1,595,000 in Bonds

Action Taken After Review of Sketches Thursday Evening

Decision to call for a bond issue not to exceed $1,595,000 for the construction of a new elementary and junior high school in Thief River Falls was made when the board of education of District 564 met Thursday evennig. Architects were present at the session to show their revised preliminary sketches of proposed buildings.

Two plans were again reviewed by the board, one for a two-story junior high school building and the other for a single-story structure. Elementary facilities are planned for single-story construction. The local citizen's committee, selected several months ago, will meet with the board and architects March 21 at 8 p. m. in the home economics room of the school to discuss the proposal.

Representing the architectural firm of [illegible]mel and Green at the session were Richard Hammel, George Klein and Mr. McBurney. Considerable time was spent in discussing the plans and the changes which had been made.

The motion adopted by the board stated that "Independent School District 564 call for an election to issue general obligation bonds in the amount not to exceed $1,595,000 for the construction and improvement of school buildings and that the T. C. Evenson company shall be instructed to draw proper resolutions to be presented to the board at a special meeting to be held March 21, 1962".

Open Meeting Scheduled

An informational meeting for the general public will be held March 26 in conjunction with the monthly meeting of the Lincoln high school parent-teacher association. Architects and representatives of the bonding consultants will be present to present proposals and answer questions in regard to the proposals.

Salary schedules were again reviewed by the board and action again tabled to the special meeting. In other board action, the resignation of Orville Jensen as instructor in the elementary department at Knox school was accepted. He will complete the school term before joining the faculty of the campus school at Mankato State College.

ROAD RESTRICTIONS BEGIN ON STATE HIGHWAYS MARCH 20

March 20, officially the first day of Spring, will be the day when road restrictions will go into effect on Minnesota highways, according to the state highway department. Only one exception to the proposed load restriction map for 1962 has been noted — that being the restriction of highway 32 from Thief River Falls to Greenbush to legal loads instead of seven tons per axle.

The department lists the following chart by way of explanation of axle weights during the load limit season.

Posted Limit	Single Axle	Tandem Axles 4' Spacing	Triden Axles 8' Spacing
4 Tons	8,000 Lbs.	Total 16,000 Lbs.	Total 24,000 Lbs.
5 Tons	10,000 Lbs.	Total 20,000 Lbs.	Total 30,000 Lbs.
6 Tons	12,000 Lbs.	Total 24,000 Lbs.	Total 33,000 Lbs.
7 Tons	14,000 Lbs.	Total 28,000 Lbs.	Total 33,000 Lbs.
Nonrestricted	18,000 Lbs.	Total 32,000 Lbs.	Total 33,000 Lbs.

Each individual axle may not exceed the posted limit and the total axle weight of tandem axles and tridem axles may not exceed the legal axle weights. No permits will be issued during the period of load restrictions for overweight axle loads exceeding legal or posted axle weights.

Arrange Drive for Fair Membership

Eight Groups To Aid In Solicitation; All Areas To Be Covered

Organization of the city campaign for membership sale in the Pennington County Fair Association, Inc., was accomplished at a meeting of 15 representatives of various local organizations Friday evening at the Chamber of Commerce office. Both business and residential area will be covered in the membership drive.

C. W. Rodekuhr, Pennington county auditor and secretary of the committee selected to conduct reorganization of the county fair, reviewed the situation and what is expected of the group. He cited the merits of a county fair in continuing promotion of Pennington county, perpetuation of the 4-H club program and emphasis on improved agricultural production.

It was also noted that the stock company which has operated the fair since its beginning has expressed a desire to dissolve and turn the operation of the fair over to a new organization. Through work accomplished by the reorganization committee, the Pennington County Fair Association, Inc., was formed to continue operation of the annual summer exposition.

If the new organization is to assume such operation, it will need full support of all county residents and a certain amount of working capital. Membership fees were set at $5 to permit as many people as possible to become members and take an active interest in the organization. Membership is in effect for the life of the member, full voting and office-holding rights are included, but the memberships have no resale value, are not transferrable and will pay no interest.

Distribute Material

Membership cards and informational material were distributed and an organizational procedure was adopted to conduct the city campaign. Another meeting will be held soon.

Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Lions will conduct the business district membership sale. Residential canvassing will be as follows: Ward 1, Eagles, Lodge; Ward 2, Veterans of Foreign Wars Post; Ward 4, Junior Chamber of Post; Ward 4, Junior Chambe rof Commerce; and Ward 5, Elks Lodge.

Rural solicitation has been underway for about two weeks with returns beginning to come in in greater number. Marshall county workers turned in 150 for 10 memberships during the weekend and more returns from Rocksbury township were also reported.

Sheep, Beef Topic at Gatzke Mar. 26

Bob Jacobs of Extension Staff Will Be Speaker

An evening meeting for Marshall County sheep and cattle raisers is planned for Monday, March 26, at 8:00 p. m. in the Gatzke school gym. Bob Jacobs, University extension animal husbandman, stationed at St. Paul, will speak on sheep and cattle raising in this area and will answer questions on feeding, housing, and management practices in either enterprise.

The meeting will be divided with about half the evening spent on sheep and the remainder of the time on cattle raising. The discussion will also cover the possibilities of raising quality feeder calves in this area to be fed to market weight in areas farther to the south. It has been predicted Northern Minnesota will be the future feeder cattle capitol of the upper Midwest — serving feedlots in southern Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Jacobs has probably seen more sheep, beef and swine operations thruout the state than any other man in Minnesota. Middle River Vo-Ag. instructor, Tom Kajer, points out that these observations, plus the latest information on livestock research results at University Farm, will make this meeting well worth attending. Coffee will be served.

This meeting is being sponsored jointly by the Middle River vocational agriculture Dept. and the Marshall County extension service.

Miss. Valley Conference Is Told of Women's Power

Three members of the Thief River Falls Women's club, Mrs. C. T. Reich, president of the local club, Mrs. Harold Elofson and Mrs. Rudolph Sagmoen, attended the Mississippi Valley Conference of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the Gardner Hotel at Fargo Friday, March 9, the last of the two day session.

Women representing twelve states were at the conference and much talent and energy was displayed in their enthusiastic drive to impress upon women everywhere the power that lies in their hands, and the role women of today have in determining our country's destiny. In explaining the statement that women hold the balance of power, Mrs. Kay Clancy Metz of Chicago one of the key speakers, stated that there are more women over the age of 21 than there are men. Recent statistics placed the female majority at almost two million.

The major stress of the Conference was devoted to the frightening danger of the rapid growth of communism and how important the role of women is in meeting their moral obligation by instilling in their children the love of God and country.

Women of the federation who had made a tour of South America shared their pictures of this trip which brought a greater understanding of the vital problems of our Latin countries to the south.

Dr. Eugene Cotton Mather, head of the geography department of the U. of Minnesota, gave a factual discourse on South America from a geographer's point of view. He, too, stressed the potential of women in government, in influencing public opinion and in being enlightened as to the causes of the upheaval prevalent in the world today.

Dr. Cotton Mather emphasized the fact that communism isn't the problem but the symptom of the real issue which is the unbelievable grinding poverty, malnutrition, filth and lack of morals which are present in the underprivileged countries of the world. Castro, he said, was a product of these conditions. The money from the American people under foreign aid, which was intended to alleviate the conditions of the common man, has been worse than useless as it fell into the hands of the already rich. He stated the have-nots of the world are against us as they are now learning of the great gulf between our way of life and theirs. His admonition was for women to make their power felt in government and to take a greater responsibility in the perilous days which are facing the free world.

Dr. Joseph Knutson, president of Concordia college at Moorhead, spoke on the theme of the conference "Heritage Survival." He brought out Old Testament references of the importance that heritage has in the life of man and in the New Testament, stressing the dignity of man and the danger we now face in selling our heritage to materialism. He was given a standing ovation.

EVEN AT A LOSS

A recent survey showed that a drug store prescription department loses money every hour in which it does not do at least $15 in business. That's how much is needed simply to break even on the cost of operation. The survey also showed that many drug stores are open many hours — especially evenings and weekends — when prescription business averages much less than $15 an hour. Nevertheless, these stores stay open even though they are losing money — to make sure you can get the prescription you need — when you need it. That's why we say . . .

The Library Corner

By Eleanor Olson

"The Guns of August" by Barbard W. Tuchman is the skillful account of the first month of World War I. The military developments of that month were to have a decisive bearing on the course of the next four years of battle.

The book, brilliantly paced and sustained, is the product of painstaking and sophisticated research and the author interprets it with a full awareness of the role her own subjectivity must play. She is the first to acknowledge that hers is only one of several versions which could be written from the same evidence.

After doing her research, Mrs. Tuchman went to Europe and tour some of the battle areas in August 1959, following closely the calendar of the same month in 1914. This experience is much in evidence in the descriptive passages in the book.

One of the strongest features of the book is the careful detailing of battle plans from the invasion of Belgium to the stopping of the Germans at the Marne. The failure to carry out completely the plans of Count Von Schlieffen by his successor Von Moltke; plus the sublime confidence of Joffre in himself and France (even with all his armies in rout), resulted in the Germans being stopped at the Marne and settling down to the trench warfare and a horrible stalemate that remained unresolved for the next four years.

The chaos begun in this fateful month has haunted our world ever since. This masterly treatment of historical fact has resulted in the nomination of this book for several of the year's literary awards.

Another type of historical research has resulted in a new historical novel by Anya Seton. "Devil Water" spans two continents to produce a very complete picture of life in Scotland, London, the plantation country of Virginia and the Piedmont wilderness during the 18th century. It is a true story fictionized by an author who believes that historical romance must be accurate, not only in fact, but in background and contemporary thought.

This is the story of the Radcliffes, their part in the Jacobite Revolution in 1715, their unswerving loyalty to the Stuart pretender James through 30 years of exile and of their attempts to restore the Catholic faith in England.

Both James and Charles Radcliffe pay for their activities with their lives via the block in the Tower of London, but Charles' daughter Jenny goes to Virginia, searching for her own true love exiled there as a bonded slave.

As far as possible, Miss Seton has tried to find out how people of the era dressed, ate, thought and talked. She depicts her characters photographically without an attempt to psychoanalyze them. While not soul-searching, "Devil Water" is an excellent example of one method of constructing a convincing historical novel.

Newcomers Club Interested in New Residents in TRF

September 10, 1953, a group of women including Mrs. James Disse, Mrs. Phil Hess and Mrs. Paul Bedard began the Newcomer's club with the objectives of promoting the interests of newcomers to Thief River Falls and to orientate the members with each other as well as others in the community.

Since then many women who have been new in the city have been helped by this club to get acquainted with the various clubs and persons in Thief River Falls. Any woman who has lived here for a period of less than two years and who intends to permanently reside here or any woman who has left the city for a period of more than two years and who has then returned with the intention of permanently residing may become a member.

The membership lasts for two years and all alumni are welcome to attend any meetings, which are held the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month at 8 p. m. in the courthouse meeting room, or any social functions. The regular business meetings are held after which there is a social hour in which coffee and dessert is served and the women are welcome to do as they wish. Bridge instructions are available to those interested in learning and a bridge marathon is held once a month which includes all alumni and members along with their husbands and enables the new members to get acquainted.

Also, there is an annual dinner dance which includes members, alumni and their husbands and throughout the year various parties and get-togethers are held such as picnics and bowling.

Once a month a speaker is present to inform the women about various aspects of the community and items of interest to them. Speakers this past year have included Arnt Aune, head of the vocational school and the adult educational classes; Miss Anderson, cosmetology instructor; Becki Ferber, exchange student to Turkey; Marilyn Charlson who is associated with the Friends of the Library; Mrs. Gunder Legvold who spoke on the Girl Scout program; Viggo Fischer and Connie Ekeren, exchange students; and representatives of the Women's club, Mrs. Jaycees, the Hospital auxiliary and the Women's Golf program.

Since this is an organization primarily for newcomers to Thief River Falls and since present members have difficulty in always knowing and contacting these people, anyone who is interested is asked to contact Mrs. William Ness MU 1-2258 or Mrs. J. Williams, MU 1-3494.

Central Exchange Holds Its Meeting in St. Paul

Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc., St. Paul, reported Monday it had "one of the most successful years in our company's history" in 1961. This was despite "a severe drought that brought disaster to crops in many areas served by the Central Exchange.

The regional farm supply cooperative's 1961 annual report, released at its annual meeting, listed total assets of $79,701,472. This compares with $76,259,139 a year ago.

"Net savings to be distributed to patrons" were $8,814,021 in 1961, up from $8,032,731.

In 1961 the supply co-operative, its report read, "shared with agriculture the spirit of optimism that swept the New Frontier. It appeared our government had come to grips with the problems of agriculture and seemed to be working for the interests of family farmers and their co-operatives."

Suggests Setting Good Food Habits in Children Early

'U' of M. Nutritionist Cites Eating Practices of Pre-school Children

How do you teach a pre-school child to develop good food habits? Mothers do have the responsibility of helping children develop the right food habits and attitudes, since these will influence the children's health during their lifetime, points out Home Agent Laura Duerst.

Start by including the four basic food groups in planning daily meals for children as well as adults in the family. These groups include milk—three to four cups for each child daily; meat—two or more servings of meat, poultry, fish, eggs, dry beans or peas; vegetable-fruit—four or more servings, including a citrus fruit or tomatoes, a dark green or deep yellow vegetable; bread-cereal four or more servings of whole-grain, enriched, restored breads or cereals.

In addition to planning well balanced meals, consider some of the characteristic attitudes preschool children have toward foods, urges Grace Brill, extension nutritionist at the University of Minnesota. She lists these special considerations to keep in mind:

Use only one strong-flavored food in a meal. Children are more sensitive to strong flavors in foods than adults.

Include foods which have variety and texture, but avoid stringy, lumpy food. Children like crisp carrot sticks and toast. They like mashed potatoes and puddings that are soft but not lumpy. They dislike stringiness in beans and scum on cocoa.

Serve one food in a meal that requires some but not a great deal of chewing. Hamburger is more popular with children than steak because it's easier to chew.

Use color in meals. Children like food that looks attractive.

Keep food separated on the plate. Children don't like food mixed together.

Serve children first so their food will cool before they're ready to eat. They prefer food that's lukewarm.

Introduce new foods by serving only a bite or two in a meal with familiar foods.

Regional Conference of Rural Life Set at Crookston April 11

Five regional conferences on agriculture and country life will be held in Minnesota during March, Governor Elmer L. Andersen said today.

The conferences, each a one-day workshop session with farmers, homemakers and others interested in agriculture taking an active part, are local "grass roots" continuations of a statewide meeting held at University Farm earlier this winter.

Dates and locations include Rochester, at the Methodist church, on Monday, March 5; Redwood Falls, at the First English Lutheran church; on Monday, March 12; Crookston, at the Northwest Experiment station, Wednesday, April 11; and St. Cloud, at the Technical high school, on Saturday, March 31.

The Crookston meeting, originally scheduled for March 27, was postponed due to conflicts with other events.

Purpose of the conferences is "to explore ways of improving Minnesota's agriculture, promote our state's crops, develop new markets and take the steps necessary to improve rural life," Governor Andersen said.

Farmers, homemakers, editors, rural clergymen, businessmen, agricultural agency officials and others interested in agriculture are expected to attend the conferences, which are open to all.

Arrangements for the meetings are being handled by county agents, Chamber of Commerce members and local committees. State chairman of the Governor's Committee on Agriculture is Robert G. Rupp, managing editor of The Farmer magazine. Each regional meeting will start at 10 a. m., and conclude by 4 p. m.

CONFERENCE OF NURSES AT FERGUS FALLS MAR. 29

The Minnesota Nurses association will hold a regional conference March 29 from 9-4 at Patterson Hall at the Fergus Falls state hospital, Fergus Falls. Registration begins at 8 a. m.

Bill Seeks Work on 'Great River Road'

Sen. Humphrey Proposes Measure in Congress

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey last week proposed legislation to spur development of the "Great River Road" — a modern parkway parelleling the entire length of the Mississippi River.

His bill would authorize the ten states through which the road would pass to use up to 10 per cent of their federal highway funds to help finance right-of-way, construction and improvement costs for the Great River Road.

It would also authorize appropriations of $2 million in fiscal 1962 and $2 million in fiscal 1963 for additional construction of roads and recreational, rest and parking facilities along the Mississippi.

Humphrey said his bill, co-sponsored by Senator Eugene J. McCarthy, calls for utilization of existing highways which meet parkway standards and improvement of highways along the Mississippi which do not.

"This road," Humphrey said, "would connect the Trans-Canada Highway leading to Alaska and the Atlantic seaboard with our great southern highway system along the Gulf of Mexico and leading to the Pan American Highway.

Humphrey said he prepared his bill in cooperation with the Mississippi River Parkway Planning Commission.

CHAMBER L.I.F.E.

Living-Industry-Farming-Education

By Rolly Larson
Manager Chamber of Commerce

Leadership is a virtue. This has been proven so many times thruout the course of history that it is an unquestionable fact. Leaders prevail while others falter and the organizations that are led by qualified personnel prevail while others falter, also.

Therefore we can say that leadership is certainly one of the most important factors deciding the course of events for you and me and for our community. It is with this in mind that the Chamber of Commerce and the Area Vocational School are cosponsoring the Institute for Organization Leadership which begins on Friday evening and will continue over the next couple of weeks. No charge is being made for this Institute in that we feel that as many voluntary leaders in this community as possible should attend for their own benefit and for the benefit of their respective organizations.

It can be understood that most individuals in leadership positions are busy but they should attend this Institute if at all possible. Three evenings over the next couple of weeks might save many times that number if one would learn anything at all. Graduation Certificates will be awarded to those who attend all three sessions.

Those attending will learn the in's and out's of being a good officer, chairman, how to run a good committee, sound parliamentary procedure, how to conduct a well-run meeting, and how to be a good toastmaster. They will learn just a bit about human psychology and how to get results in their respective situations.

Instructors for the course are qualified and experienced people. C. L. Charlson, Dr. Orion D. Beich, Ted Hellie, and Marvin Campbell of Crookston are all leaders here in Northwest Minnesota and their down-to-earth approach to this Institute will be beneficial beyond any shadow of doubt.

Those of you who may not have signed up as of yet may do so by merely picking up the telephone and calling the Chamber office at MU 1-3720 at any time this week. Nobody will be turned down. Everybody is invited to be a part of the Institute if he or she is sincerely interested.

Self-improvement and organization-improvement are the goals of this Institute. The object of the Institute is unquestionable. It's success, however, depends upon the folks who attend.

Success in business too, depends upon you and I who should always Shop and Trade Where Bargains Are Made—Here in the Heart of Northwest Minnesota, Thief River Falls.

Eggs Are Best Food Bargain for March

Milk and Dairy Products Also In Plentiful Supply

Put eggs at the top of your marketing list for March.

That's the recommendation of Mrs. Eleanor Loomis, extension consumer marketing specialist at the University of Minnesota.

Eggs head the U. S. Department of Agriculture's list of plentiful foods for the month, appropriately enough, since March as been designated both as Egg Month and Good Breakfast Month. The large supply of eggs is expected to sell at prices below last year's. Mrs. Loomis urges homemakers to take advantage of this abundance by serving eggs in a variety of ways at breakfast, by making souffles and omelets for luncheon and supper, custards and fruit whips for dinner desserts and by trying new recipes featuring eggs.

Milk and dairy products will be in plentiful supply to perk up Lenten menus. Cottage cheese salads, cheese sandwiches, cheesecake for dessert are a few of the ways to highlight dairy foods. Since many diets are low in calcium, March is a good time to use more milk in soups, custards and other foods.

Heavy supplies of fall-crop potatoes will sell at low prices in March. In addition to fresh potatoes, many potato products will be good buys, including canned whole and sliced potatoes, processed instant mashed and other dehydrated potatoes and frozen French fries.

Navy or peas beans are an economy buy for soups, chowders and bean bakes on blustery March days.

LOCAL FIRM INTRODUCES REVOLUTIONARY NEW SAFETY POWER LAWN MOWER BLADE

An amazing new mowing principle that virtually eliminates injuries to the operator of rotary power lawnmowers has been introduced by the S&L department store in Thief River Falls.

Mr. Waldera, manager of S&L, is justifiably proud to introduce this new Safety Dynamower to our community. In place of the ordinary whirling propeller blade which sometimes hurls heavy objects thru the chutes or cuts a foot caught accidentally in the mower, the new Dynamower operates by means of a round mowing disc that completely encloses the underdeck; is open only at the cutting edges. A series of deflecting fingers below the surface of the disc will deflect a foot or other object from any contact with a cutting edge. For the same reason no solid object can reach the upper chamber to be ejected violently through the discharge chute.

Due to the fly-wheel action of the disc, which develops extra energy through its own momentum, a wind-tunnel vacuum effect is created to draw the grass up between the protective metal fingers and give a positive, clean trim. The steady, forceful stream of air expels the cuttings evenly without clumping or clogging. A center hub on the disc prevents the metal fingers or the cutting edges from digging into the turf, even when the terrain is uneven.

This new disc blade not only increases the operator's safety and efficiency but insures a longer life for the famous Briggs & Stratton engine, since no heavy object can get near enough to bend or damage the crankshaft. Both the engine and the crankshaft are guaranteed.

This new disc blade can be purchased separately and will fit most standard size mowers in the 20, 22 or 24 inch sizes.

Bureau Reports 681 Freeway Miles Open in Five-state Region

A total of 681 miles of highways in the Interstate and Defense system are now open to traffic in the upper midwest five-state area, according to the Bureau of Public Roads in its final 1961 tabulation. By the deadline date of 1975, 3,306 miles of Interstate highways will be completed in Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin.

At the close of 1961, a total of 12,300 miles of the 41,000-mile national system of Interstate and Defense highways had been opened, while construction was in progress on another 4,250 miles. These were the overall figures in the year's-end report made by Federal Highway Administrator Rex M. Whitton. This represented an increase of 1,856 miles over the total of a year ago.

More than $12.4 billion has been spent on the Federal-aid Interstate program since its beginning in 1956. As of December 31, 1961, work estimated to cost $6.22 billion was underway or authorized, according to the report.

In our five-state area, North Dakota has 163.7 miles of its 567.9 designated miles open to traffic. North Dakota concentrated its first efforts on a continuous east-west, cross-state route, and completed all of Interstate 94 last fall. South Dakota, on the other hand, devoted its first efforts to Interstate construction in the Sioux Falls and Rapid City congested traffic areas, and to rural stretches of Interstate Routes 90 and 29. As a consequence South Dakota had completed 111.9 of its 678.8 designated miles by the end of the year. Another 77.7 miles are presently under construction and engineering has begun on an additional 176.5 miles.

In Iowa, it was shown that 203 of its 708.7 designated miles were open to traffic, while 277 miles were in the process of construction and engineering, leaving 228.7 miles to be constructed by 1975.

Wisconsin showed a total of 164.5 of its 452.5 designated miles open to traffic, with the balance of their share in the national system, 288 miles, either under construction or in the engineering stage.

Minnesota, like South Dakota, attacked the problem of the congested traffic areas first, except that, in the case of the North Star State, the right of way complexities presented by the Twin City Metropolitan area were many times greater than those of her sister state. Consequently, Minnesota is still "clearing the track's" in some sections for future development. By the end of 1961, there were 37.4 of the designated 898.1 miles in the Interstate program open for traffic, and 436 miles under construction and engineering, leaving a balance of 424.7 miles to be undertaken and completed by 1975.

Retriever Club Being Formed at Meeting Thursday

Dog Owners Requested To Attend Session and Learn About Procedure

Persons interested in the formation of a retriever club in Thief River Falls are encouraged to meet Thursday at 8 p. m. at Inga's Cafe to hear what such a club has to offer dog owners in training of their dogs for hunting work.

It is hoped that a large number of persons who own hunting dogs or who plan to secure dogs this spring will attend, according to Harry Pluth, former member of the Minot, N. D., retriever club, who is advocating the local organization. Temporary officers will be selected and discussion will be held on membership dues, a place to train dogs and source of supply for practice birds.

Purpose of such an organization is to assist dog owners in training their dogs for the field, stressing obedience and control. If sufficient interest is shown by enough people, it is possible that competition among dog owners in the group will be held in the future.

Curling Club To Hold Annual Meet

Annual banquet and business meeting of the Thief River Falls Curling club will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Eagles club rooms. Charlie Smith, club president, will preside at the session. Officers will be elected for the coming year and other club business transacted. All club members are urged to be in attendance.

Dairy Tour Is Slated Thursday

Dairy farmers are reminded by Paul Stelmaschuk, Pennington county agricultural agent, of the D. H. I. A. tour to be held Thursday. The event will begin with a noon meal at the Rex cafe.

Tours will be held to the Orlando Chervestad farm in Deer Park township, two miles south, one-half east and two south of Highlanding, and Art Stenberg farm just east of Thief River Falls and south of Highway 1. Feeding and management practices will be observed at both farms which have respective Grade B and Grade A operations.

Waterfowl for the Future

National Wildlife Week Is Observed March 18-24

National Wildlife Week, first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938, is being observed March 18 through 24. Theme for this year's observance is "Waterfowl for the Future, by Conservation of Wetlands Which Benefit Man and Wildlife".

Working through more than two million individuals who are members of National Wildlife Federation affiliates and others who are interested in the welfare of ducks and geese, chairmen in all states have organized educational campaigns to alert the general public to complex and diverse problems relating to waterfowl. Educational programs during the week take the forms of talks, exhibits, demonstrations and field trips.

Slide Talks Scheduled

Slide talks have been scheduled for 12 local area schools, according to Herb Dill, manager of Agassiz National Wildlife refuge. Talks will carry out the theme of "Waterfowl for the Future" and will be illustrated with colored slides taken on the refuge.

The schedule includes March 19, Alvarado and Strandquist; March 20, Strathcona and Gatzke; March 21, Argyle, Middle River and Holt; March 22, Warren, Viking and Newfolden; and March 23, Thief River Falls and Goodridge. Pennington County Sportsmen's club will erect a window display at the S&L Department store in Thief River Falls as part of the observance.

Proclamations Issued

Governor Elmer L. Andersen and Mayor Orin Green have issued proclamations noting the national observance. The proclamations note that the people of the state and community are "dependent upon the natural resources—soils, water, forests, grasslands, minerals and wildlife—to sustain life and contribute to the commerce, agriculture and recreation of future citizens".

They also state that "there is growing concern about the future continental waterfowl population and especially the destruction and drainage of wetlands which provide nesting areas for waterfowl and other wildlife", adding that "these natural water storage areas may be of infinite value to man in the conservation of water resources for an expanding population."

Provide Recreation

"Wild ducks and geese are of great interest to millions of Americans," states James Lee, president of the Pennington County Sportsmen's club, "and offer recreation for other purposes than hunting. Only by preserving adequate amounts of suitable wetlands for nesting, resting and wintering areas can we continue to enjoy and thrill to the flights of migrating ducks and geese."

The National Wildlife Federation points out that the numbers of potholes, marshes and swamps are rapidly dwindling, due largely to drainage for agricultural purposes or for uses as industrial sites, airports or roads. Additional wetlands have been hit by drought. The federation states that enough suitable wetland areas must be reserved and held for waterfowl or these resources will dwindle away to insignificance.

Sportsmen's Club To Meet, Discuss Clubhouse Site

Discussion of further action on the clubhouse site for the Pennington County Sportsmen's club will be held at the regular meeting slated for 8 p. m. Wednesday in the basement meeting room of the municipal auditorium in Thief River Falls. Reports from the planning committee will be given.

Two movies will be shown—"Beyond the Fjords of Norway" and "Waters of the White Shell". Lunch will be served with Vernon Scholin as chairman of the lunch committee. All members or sportsmen interested in becoming members are encouraged to attend the meeting.

Ada Faces Danube in Opener of State Meet

The fiftieth annual Minnesota state high school basketball tournament will get under way on the Williams fieldhouse court on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis on Thursday afternoon, March 22, at 2:00 p. m.

The first-round pairings are as follows: Danube (III) vs. Ada (VIII), 2:00 p. m.; St. Louis Park (V) vs. Crosby-Ironton (VI), 3:30 p. m.; South St. Paul (IV) vs. Cloquet (VII), 7:30 p. m.; and Wells (I) vs. Lyle (I), 9:00 p. m.

The semi-finals are slated for Friday night, March 23, with games billed for 7:30 p. m. and 9:00 p. m.; and the championship finals will be played on Saturday night, March 24, at 9:00 p .m.

A new state champion is assured as the Duluth Central squad, which defeated the Bemidji Lumberjacks in the finals last year, was eliminated in the district tournament playoffs. Of last year's state-tournament field of eight teams, only one team, Danube of Region Three, was successful in making a bid for a return trip.

The Bemidji Lumberjacks, defending champions of Region Eight, were heavily favored to gain a state berth, but the Ada Vikings of District 30 sidelined coach Bun Fortier's Bemidji club, 52-51, in the regional finals on Saturday night.

Ada Defeats Bemidji to Win Region 8 Title

Coach Bill Brady's Ada Vikings from District 31 stunned the defending regional champion Bemidji Lumberjacks in the finals of the Region Eight basketball tournament at Grand Forks on Saturday night, dethroning Bemidji, 52-51, to win the regional title. The Ada Vikings will begin play in state tournament competition on Thursday afternoon when, at 2:00 p. m., they meet Danube, the returning champions of Region Three.

In Saturday night's championship finals, the Ada club, with a spectacular first half of play that featured a zone press defense that forced the Bemidji club into numerous errors, moved ahead to a 17-7 lead at the end of the first period, and 29-18 margin at the intermission.

The Vikings, with the Bowyer twins, Dean and Don, spearheading the defense, disrupted the Bemidji offense, making the Jacks' throw wild passes, commit errors of judgment, and otherwise befuddle the defending champion's polished offense. On offense, the Ada club, with great speed, moved the ball down the court, and flipped passes to players breaking in for lay-up shots.

The pace of the game lost some of its break-neck speed in the second half, with the result that Bemidji was able to chip off some points of the Ada lead. Starting the second half, Bemidji had Dick Sessing, Gary Suman, and Bill Rabe on the front line, with Bill Hanson and Jack Phelps at the guards. With the height advantage of the forward line, Bemidji outpointed the Vikings, 16-13 in the third period. In the final seconds of the period, Phelps picked up his fifth personal foul, and was forced from the game. His loss was one of the deciding factors of the game.

With three minutes of the game remaining, Ada resorted to a semi-stall, with the Bowyer twins and Herb Hasz moving the ball well against the cautious Jacks. Bill Hanson, who hit on six field goals in the final period, looped in a field goal with sixteen seconds to play, slicing the Ada lead to 52-49. Ada, to chew up the time, held the ball out-of-bounds for the full ten seconds, and Bemidji, taking the ball for a throw-in, gave it to Bill Hanson. Fearing a three-point play, Ada allowed the Bemidji player to score unmolested as the time ran out, giving the Vikings a well-earned win.

In a game to determine third place, coach Irv St. John's Warren Ponies, with guard Jerry Cook tallying 31 points, defeated Kennedy, 72-62.

Kennedy and Warren Ousted in 1st Round

Friday night's first-round games in Region Eight tournament play at Grand Forks provided the 5,000 fans in attendance with a run-of-the-mill brand of basketball. Except for the opening period of the Bemidji vs. Kennedy game, which found the fired-up Rockets erupting for an 18-13 lead; and the first half of the Ada vs. Warren game, which found Ada romping away to a 38-19 half-time lead, the games were ordinary.

Bemidji cooled off the red-hot Kennedy in the second period, outpointing the Rockets, 18-7, to gain a 31-25 lead at the intermission. And in the third period, Bemidji, with Gary Suman looping-in three field goals, moved into a commanding 46-30 lead. Kennedy, with Del Hagen accounting for ten points, outpointed the Jacks in the fourth period, 18-16, but the outcome was never in doubt.

Ada, with an aggressive zone press, hounded the Warren Ponies into numerous mechanical errors in the first half of play in their first-round game, with the Vikings taking a 14-7 lead in the first period, and a 38-19 advantage at the intermission.

In the second half, coach Bill Brady's Ada club resorted to a ball-control style of game and forced the Ponies to make desperate effort to get back into the game. And coach Irv. St. John's District 31 champions never could overtake the Vikings, losing by a 57-41 margin. Herb Hasz of the Vikings was the game's high scorer with 24 points. Warren's Jerry Cook, after being held scoreless in the first period, tallied ten points in the third period, and added eight points in the second half for an 18-point efort.

Trapping Seasons on Beaver and Otter Set

The 1962 beaver and otter trapping regulations were announced today by the Minnesota Conservation Department's game and fish division.

Game and fish director James W. Kimball said that this year the state has been divided into one closed zone and two open trapping zones. Trapping will be closed in a large area of central and northeastern Minnesota where the beaver population is down. The closed area amounts to about one-fourth of the total area of the state.

More beaver are needed here for maintenance of flowage areas for wildlife and for water conservation Kimball said.

In general, the Northern Zone is that part of the state north of a line drawn from Two Harbors along the Duluth Missabe Railway to Aurora, Virginia, Lake Namakan and the north boundary of the state, south of Lake Kabetogama to Highway 53, along Highway 53 to Linden Grove, Northome, Bemidji, Shevlin, Waubun, Detroit Lakes and Moorhead.

Beaver may be taken in the Northern Zone from 6:00 a. m. March 24 to 6:00 p. m. April 29, 1962. Otter may be taken here from 6:00 a. m. April 14 to 6:00 p. m. April 28, 1962.

The Southern Zone can be defined generally as that part of the state lying south of a line drawn from Moorhead to Detroit Lakes, Menahga, Wadena, Little Falls to the west line of Mille Lacs County. Then south along the west line of Mille Lacs County to Highway 95, then east to North Branch, Sandstone and to the eastern boundary of the state.

Otter may be taken April 7 - April 21, only in those portions of Chisago and Pine Counties lying north of Highway 95, east of Highway 61 and south of a line from Sandstone to the eastern boundary of the state.

The closed area lies between the north and south open zones. The North Shore streams and all of Cook County with the exception of Range 4 and 5 west in Townships 62 to 66 inclusive are also closed.

No beaver or otter may be taken in the closed area.

All state parks are closed as well as some state and federal game refuges. On wildlife management areas beaver may only be taken by securing a permit from the game refuge manager or area game manager.

No more than ten beaver or more than three otter may be taken by any one licensed trapper during the seasons prescribed. All beaver and otter pelts must be submitted to a game warden or other authorized agent of the game and fish director for inspection and for the purpose of affixing a seal to the pelts not later than five days after the close of the season in the zone where the animal was trapped.

Persons planning on trapping beaver or otter should obtain a detailed copy of the regulations from the county auditor when they purchase their license, the announcement said.

The Tournament's Best?

Judging by the locker-room chatter, and the off-court comments of the tournament officials, it is the consensus that the following players were considered among the Region 8 basketball tournament's most outstanding.

First and foremost was Ada's spark-plug guard, Dean Bowyer. Particularly in the championship finals, the blue chip game, was his play of the highest caliber. He was the quarterback who directed the Ada offense, and he was the ball-handler who played a masterful role when the Vikings, in the final minutes of the game, resorted to a time-consuming stall. In the hectic and exciting fourth period, with the tension ever mounting, Dean, with a high-arching shot, dropped in five free throws in six attempts. He gets a guard position.

Warren's Jerry Cook put together two steady games of basketball in the tournament. In their opener against Ada, Warren played an erratic and frantic brand of ball against the Vikings' press defense, but Cook came through with 18 points for a losing cause. And in the winning effort against Kennedy for third place on Saturday night, Cook, who is a junior, scored 31 points, the tournament high. He gets a guard spot, too.

Center play wasn't exceptional in the tourney, but Kennedy's Del Hagen, who scored 22 points against Bemidji in the opener, and 27 points against Warren on Saturday night proved to be the best. He, perhaps, has the greatest potential as a college player. He is very agile, and he plays, and scores from the outside, and he has tremendous spring to garner the rebounds. With his rugged and bony frame, he will probably become a powerful forward some day.

Herb Hasz of Ada gains a forward position. Herb, a junior, scored 24 points against Warren in the first round, and came through with 11 points against Bemidji. One of his points in the final, a free throw with twenty seconds to play, gave Ada a 52-47 lead, and "clinched" the title. Hasz is a capable defensive man, being the "anchor" man of the Ada press defense, being relied upon to harass the opponent until the Vikings' upcourt trio—Dean and Don Bowyer and Bob Drevlow—can get back on defense.

The other forward position is given to Bemidji's Jack Phelps. Phelps after a fine opening round game against Kennedy, in which he scored 20 points, had a frustrating game against Ada, scoring but one field goal and fouling out with more than a period of play remaining. In fairness to Phelps on his play against Ada, it must be explained that he was called on to aid the guards, Bill and Marv Hanson, in moving the ball up the court against the Viking effective press defense. With his change-of-pace and southpaw dribble, Phelps was the most reliable ball-handler on the Bemidji club. His loss, with nine seconds of play remaining in the third period, and on a mid-court foul, was fatal to the Lumberjack hopes.

Where's Red?

Has anybody seen Red Thyren lately? If he has, please let me know. Red and I have a pair of dead "horses" that have to be buried. We picked East Grand Forks to win the District 31 championship; and the Bemidji Lumberjacks to win the Region Eight cage title. These "horses" are plenty dead.

Freshman Cagers Won Nine, Lost One

Dick Nelson Leads in Individual Scoring

Coach Bill Herzog's ninth grade (freshman) basketball squad closed out a very successful season, winning nine games and losing but one game. The lone loss was administered by the Roseau Rams freshman, who scored a 51-41 win over the locals.

During the ten-game season, the future Prowlers scored the following victories: 42-39 over Roseau (overtime); 42-19 defeat of Red Lake Falls; 59-25 win over Warren; 25-21 over Fosston; 57-23 win over Warren; 50-31 over Red Lake Falls; 38-32 over Fosston; 40-30 over Crookston; and a 57-52 win over Crookston.

Continuing Study of Employment Trends in Minnesota Cities

By Albert Marshall
(Special to the Thief River Falls Times

Major Factors Involved

A number of major factors affected the changes in the employment picture from city to city.

One major factor was the growth of new industries in the state. Many of them were small companies having little effect on the general picture, but some were youthful giants providing a great impact.

Typical of these new arrivals were Remington Rand and Control Data, both newcomers to the Twin Cities, and both potent competitors for top positions in the fast-developing data computing field.

Remington Rand took over a small electronics plant in St. Paul in 1954. Its Univac division now employs about seven thousand people, has become the city's second largest employer (next to Minnesota Mining) and has taken over seven plants to produce its wares.

Control Data, a company set up by former Univac executives, is following the same fast growing pattern as its rival.

Twin City area employment has also been bolstered by the Pine Bend development where five plants have been erected to refine oil from the Williston basin and to utilize the by-products of this refining process. Almost all the suburban areas exhibit new industrial construction.

Out-state, the biggest splash on the new industry front was made at Rochester. The choice made by International Business Machines company executives to locate a plant there has brought an infusion of fresh blood to an already bustling community and transformed a city once largely dependent on the Mayo clinic for economic progress to an important center of diversified industrial and commercial activity.

Expansion of Existing Plants

Expansion in previously existing industrial concerns has bolstered employment. State figures show that jobs have multiplied faster in chemical and petroleum products, electrical machinery, metal fabrication, machinery other than electrical, and paper and allied products.

But lumber mills, millwork manufacturers, furniture and fixture factories, steel plants, iron foundries, standard food processors and textile and apparel manufacturers employ fewer people than they did in 1950.

These changes in tempo in existing industry have brought prosperity to Mankato, a city with a large number of diversified manufacturers engaged in making electrical motors, other mechanical devices, metal cans, and in vegetable oil processing.

They have been favorable factors in increasing employment in St. Cloud (a big mechanical refrigerator maker) and in cities like Worthington, Willmar, and Marshall where new techniques in preparing frozen foods for the growing super-market trade have multiplied jobs.

Four cities with paper mills have shared in the ever-increasing demand for products of these mills: Brainerd, Grand Rapids, Little Falls, and St. Cloud.

Little Falls has also grown industrially by reason of opportunities presented to industry in providing equipment for a population with more leisure time to spend.

Two boat manufacturers at Little Falls are now in the big time and this activity has brought new jobs to Mankato and to Red Wing.

More Jobs in Education

Larger school and college enrollments have affected employment conditions in all these cities. Chief beneficiaries have been the college towns—Bemidji, Mankato, Moorhead, St. Cloud, and Winona.

Most state and federal institutions have increased their staffs in the light of providing better service for more people. Brainerd, Faribault, Rochester, St. Cloud, and Willmar—and to a lesser extent, Red Wing—have more jobs as a result.

Rochester has also been able to increase job opportunities by reason of the growth of its big, privately-owned service institution—the Mayo clinic.

Decline in Mining Hurt

Conversely, the serious decline in iron mining activity has brought severe repercussions to these cities: Brainerd, Duluth, Hibbing, and Virginia.

Decreased iron mining activity has eliminated jobs on railroads hauling ore. And the railroads generally have cut their operating and maintenance crews. Brainerd, Duluth, Hibbing, New Ulm, St. Cloud, Thief River Falls, Virginia, Willmar, Winona, and Worthington have suffered in varying degrees as a result.

Some cities largely dependent on general farm conditions have noted ill effects brought by poor crop conditions and the general trend to larger but fewer farms with consequent fewer rural customers for goods and services supplied by urban firms. Crookston, Montevideo, and Thief River Falls have probably been most affected.

Sales and Deposits

Also studied was the effect of changing employment conditions on retail sales and financial stability, as shown by bank deposits.

It was found generally that cities with lessened dependence on rural customers for business have exhibited retail sales gains (1958 compared to 1948. U. S. census figures) less than the state average gain of 37 per cent.

In fact, only five communities can boast of bettering the state average: The Twin City metropolitan district and Fairmont, Rochester, Grand Rapids and Virginia.

If one takes into consideration population growths of the cities themselves, the resulting gains in retail sales per capita between 1948 and 1958 show surprisingly enough that many of the cities lost stature as trade centers.

In this category were Brainerd, Mankato, Marshall, Montevideo, Owatonna, Thief River Falls, and Worthington. In view of the fact that the purchasing value of the dollar has declined since 1950—the government consumer price index in 1958 was 123 (100 for 1947-49), it would appear that merchants in these cities may actually be losing ground.

However, three cities posted both impressive dollar sales gains and per capita sales gains revealing exceptional progress in enlarging their trade areas. These cities were Grand Rapids, Rochester, and Virginia.

Bank Deposits Grew

Sixteen cities showed bank deposit gains in excess of the state average of 46 per cent. Five out of the nine which showed outstanding employment gains were among this number.

Impressive gains in bank deposits were shown by Grand Rapids (up 121 per cent), St. Cloud (up 100 per cent), and Rochester (up 94 per cent). If one adds the savings capital of local building and loan associations to bank deposits, these three cities still led the parade.

However, in some cities, citizen investments in building and loan associations have increased to a far greater extent than bank deposits.

Taking this factor in consideration, Albert Lea, Willmar, Brainerd, Hibbing, and Thief River Falls showed consolidated savings increases that indicated a far more impressive financial progress than that shown by bank deposit figures alone.

And in those cities where building and loan groups are relatively small or undernourished—Faribault Virginia, Red Wing, and Winona in partiular—the converse was true.

In the next and following articles, the writer will examine in more detail what has transpired on the Minnesota industrical front during the past decade; and how and where job opportunities have undergone change in non-manufacturing activities.

When you wonder if you still want to do all the things you've always wanted to do. . That's middle age, mister.

Jayne Mansfield found it easy to portray a glamorous movie star in Allied Artists' "The George Raft Story," in which she is starred. The picture, opening Thursday at the Falls Theatre, boasts of 9 top flight stars.

More Adventure On Hetteen Trip Through Alaska

CHAPTER THREE

March 6, 1960

Because we are about to take leave of the Kuskokwim and make the difficult 48-mile "portage" northward along an old pack trail to the Yukon River, we engaged two native guides who are well acquainted with this bleak region between the two streams. The guides are Alex Aloysius and Sergei Matthew, both being part Indian and part Eskimo.

The guides and their dog team were with us when we left Kalskag. With the benefit of their knowledge of this trail it was bad enough; without them it would have been almost impossible to make the crossing to the Yukon without losing an additional day or two of very precious time. As we left Kalskag our immediate goal was to reach Palmuit, on the Yukon, by nightfall.

It was the roughest kind of going, with glare ice and rough tundra stretching ahead for mile after mile. A profusion of bare moss hummocks rose up to bar our way, and as we sought to push across them, our tractors and heavily loaded toboggans would often tilt crazily, the toboggans almost to the point of turning over. Tripod trail markers that once pointed the way for dog teams across this challenging stretch were gone — either burned up in timber fires or fallen and rotted away with the passing years.

For the last seven miles of the crossing we had to follow small river sloughs that presented only badly broken ice or open water out in the center and soft, deep snows at the channel sides.

We navigated this stretch by frequently criss-crossing from bank to bank and sand bar to sand bar to avoid the stretches of open water. We were able to locate safe ice by one of us going out ahead of the vehicles to test for a solid footing, but this took time. Rough pressure ice kept us in constant danger of tipping.

We were all thrilled when we first sighted the broad Yukon River near Palmuit, where our guides led us to a small unoccupied cabin at the top of a high hill on the river bank. It was about 10 degrees below zero when we arrived at the cabin, which was owned by a relative of one of our guides.

We four, together with the guides, bedded down on the cabin floor for the night.

Shipment of 1961 Potato Crop Is Below Last Year

Shipment of potatoes from the Red River Valley as of early March are nearly one-third less than at the same time in 1961, according to the Red River Valley Potato Grower's association. Rail shipments exceeded truck shipments on the 1961 crop by 593 (400 cwt.) carlots.

A total of 20,967 carlots was shipped from the 1961 crop as compared with 29,272 carlots for the 1960 crop and 26,266 carlots for the 1959 crop. Of the 1961 crop total, 18,189 carlots went for fresh market and 2,778 carlots went for seed.

U. S. No. 1 grade totaled 8,647 carlots with U. S. No. 2 totaling 2,265 and U. S. Commercial totaling 7,277. The total also included 11,683 reds, 6,141 whites and 865 carlots of russets. Rail shipments totaled 9,391 carlots while truck shipments totaled 8,798 carlots.

Editorials . . .

"Does it create confidence in our America to tak about working a 32-hour work week, apparently on the theory we can produce as much and be as useful to society at large as those willing to work 40 or 48 hours and who, of late, have much the same tools as we have?

"We say we are talking about a reduced work week as a share-the-work plan. When pinned down, we admit we are talking about more pay for less work; or putting it another way, more cost for the same work.

"And what we are really talking about is more unemployment because buyers are already reluctant to buy such products as steel, aluminum, and machinery at the prices which must be charged for those products to cover the costs.

"Whatever the future may hold, under present-day competitive circumstances, if we are not careful we can 32-hour ourselves into economic oblivion."

—Roger M. Blough, chairman, U.S. Steel:

We Are Fortunate

President Kennedy isn't running out of ideas on how to spend money. He now proposes the creation of two new agencies to think up ideas for developing new parks and recreation centers. One would be an Outdoor Recreation Advisory Council, and he announced that he already has established a Bureau of Outdoor Recreation as a planning body within the Department of the Interior.

He is suggesting expenditures of $800 million "or more" for these developments, to be recovered by user fees from visitors to federal recreation centers, and various taxes like on boats and motorboat gasoline.

We do not doubt his ability to spend the $800 million but we wouldn't pay much for the government's bonds issued for these purposes if they were to be paid back from the sources he proposes.

And why should the federal government involve itself in a lot of these nickel and dime operations, which can be better managed at the state level, at a time when we are spending money like mad for defense purposes because there is an emergency.

The country is very fortunate in having enough conservaties in Congress at this time to hold the line on some of this nonsense. What a mess we would be in if President Kennedy had a subservient Congress under his thumb.

Fear the Birchers ?

We can see no justification for alarm about the activities of the political "extremists of the right." We presume those who do express concern have the John Birch Society in mind. We are not in sympathy with the program advocated by the members of that organization. But we do not fear that organization or its program as a menace to freedom. We do not fear it mainly because that program never will be popular.

The leaders we must keep a wary eye on are those who seek personal glory and gradually become so absorbed in their own personal interests that they place greater importance on them than on the public interest.

The histories of ancient Greece and Rome provide many examples of popular rulers who became tyrants. First they corrupted the masses. Then they enslaved them. In the process they impoverished the country they controlled. The story follows pretty much the same pattern in all instances.

The lust for power is strong liquor and for some of those who have experienced its exhileration there is no turning back from the glory road. They are the potential men on horseback, who, having achieved power, will retain it by force if necessary rather than give it up.

The Birchers are radical reactionaries. They will receive little popular support. The dangerous leaders in our government are those liberals who are liberal mainly with the government's credit and who recognize no responsibility in the unpleasant task of keeping the nation financially solvent. Building up their own personal popularity at public exense is their main objective.

Food Comes First

Barbara Ward, a leading British economist, whose husband is now commissioner of development in Ghana, has published a book titled "The Rich Nations and The Poor Nations." In discussing the problems of developing the underdeveloped countries she makes this wise observation:

> "So much emphasis has been placed upon the new techniques of industry that it is sometimes forgotten that if farming cannot be transformed there can be no genuine revolution or economic growth."

Russia is an example of a country that cannot be called backward but that nevertheless has overemphasized industry while neglecting its agriculture, and the repeated demands made by Khruschev for increased food production indicates a critical and a continuing need. While there has been much mechanization of farm operations in some select areas of Russia, the average farmer is still a "peasant" and the production of the average farmer is limited. Commenting on this situation the Winnipeg Tribune says:

> "The fact that this problem continues to plague the Soviets should prove sobering to those underdeveloped countries whose leaders look with longing eyes at the Soviet system as a possible cure for their own ills."

According to the Tribune, Miss Ward's book is intended as a warning to the rich nations of the West, and states:

> "The fact that the Soviets are continuing to suffer the consequences of too great a reliance on advanced industrial technology without carrying agriculture along with them should give rise to no complacency on the part of the West.
> "In a world where billions of human beings are poor, but, for the first time in history, universally resent the fact, there is a challenge to act with speed to make a massive effort to ameliorate the situation."

One of our most important contributions to hungry people is, of course, food, but in many backward countries the need for food is the only incentive for work, and for peoples who have survived for centuries on what the jungles provided for them without work, the prospect is not very encouraging.

Modernizing and industrializing the primitive society of the backward areas is not going to be completed in one generation. The results would be encouraging if some progress could be noted at the end of a century.

AFL-CIO Demands

The executive council of the Amercian Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organization says unions "must continue to press vigorously for wage raises." At the same time it argues for increases in "the real purchasing power of workers." The Council also wants a shorter work week but the pay to continue for the idle hours.

The Council expressed dissatisfaction with President Kennedy, stating that he is "overly timid" in pressing for the demands of labor. To which the Christian Science Monitor suggests:

> "That real purchasing power can be increased as effectively by reductions in the cost of goods as it can by hikes in wages. And it can be increased more broadly because price cuts benefit not only union members but also self-employed workers and the three out of four employed workers who are unorganized.
> "Do labor union leaders have some of the boldness they ask of the President and of business managers? Have they the courage to face their own memberships and tell them that the market for labor depends in part on the price of labor?"

An Hour's Work

(The Packer)

An hour's work in the United States will buy 37 ounces of round steak.

In Great Britian, an hour's work buys only 19 ounces of round steak; in France, seven ounces; in Russia, four ounces.

Russians spend about 50 per cent of their income for food, the French and English about 30 per cent.

In the United States, food expense amounts to about 20 per cent of consumer income.

Note From a Small Republic

(St Louis Post Dispatch)

Results of Costa Rica's presidential election are encouraging for democracy there and throughout Latin America. Francisco J. Orlich, a moderate liberal, defeated former President Rafael Calderon Garcia and a third candidate. What is especially significant about the victor is that he had the support of ex-President Jose Figueres, the first prominent Latin America of progressive tendencies to break with Fidel Castro. Also, an openly pro-Castro candidate won less than 1 per cent of the total vote. When little Costa Rica so clearly counts for progress on representative government, its determination will not be lost on larger and more powerful sister republics.

Verboten !

(Milwaukee Journal)

At a World War II Navy center for training radar operators, we once saw a wall—excuse us, a bulkhead—covered with dials, buttons and switches that controled a collection of bells, buzzers and lights. A sign read: "Now hear this. If you must twist dials, push buttons or pull swiches, do it here. When you get inside, keep your hands off the controls."

According to the Insider's Newsletter of Washington, the following sign is now posted outside the computer room of the Los Alamos national laboratory's accounting office:

"Achtung! Alles Lookenspeepers.. Das computenmachine is nicht fur gefingerpoken and mittengraben. Is easy schnappen der springenwerk, blowenfusen, und poppencorken mit sitzensparken. Interesting Opinions

Gov. Elmer L. Andersen

For two days last week I toured a number of the Indian Reservations with James Hawkins the new area director of the U. S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, Minneapolis, and Mr. John Kennedy, chairman of my Indian Action committee.

We visited the Nett Lake, Red Lake, and White Earth Reservations. Mr. Hawkins and I have agreed to work out a schedule that will permit our joint visit of all of the others.

One purpose was to give this practical expression of a new partnership and spirit of cooperation between Federal, State and Tribal leadership, and to "listen and learn".

We not only met with the leaders, but were in and out of many homes, and knocked on many a door where we were not expected nor even known to be in the area. In fact, in many places no Governor had ever before visited, nor had the residents seen an area director of Indian Affairs.

One fundamental observation is that Indians are like non-Indians in that some get along very well and make their own way, others find it hard to adjust to modern society. I believe the Indians who succeed overcome great handicaps of discrimination and limited opportunity. Those who have had a difficult time need help. I believe the nature of the help should be opportunity and guidance to help themselves become independent. I like the Indian people. They are proud, sensitive, fine people. At their best they are among the handsomest and most appealing people anywhere. We saw some that squalor and poverty had reduced to a low level.

Idleness is the curse. If there is not work to be had, then the Indian lives on relief, huddled in a tar paper shack with his family frequently consisting of six or eight children and his wife all in a 10 x 12 one room hovel, without water and without lights or facilities of any kind.

Many Indians have responded to education and opportunity and made wonderful progress, off the reservation.

The National government had been pursuing a policy tending toward phasing out or terminating their activity in Minnesota. This was devastating in its effect on the morale of the Indians, and certainly discouraging to Federal employees working with the Indians. It also had serious implications for state government. The new Area Director comes here with assurances that he will be given the means with which to do a job and that the policy of "withdrawal" will be reversed.

I feel that all of the people of our state have a responsibility toward the Indian people living among us and that this responsibility cannot be shrugged off completely on the Federal government. We need to have an effective partnership working together.

One of the brightest parts of our visit was seeing the schools where bright-eyed, well dressed, neatly combed children were a marvelous contrast to the poorest of the homes out of which many come. There is a considerable drop-out during the high school years which we must seek to overcome.

We visited many homes that were neat and clean, where there was an ample wood pile outside the home, where water had been piped in and where electricity had been extended and where a steady income provided the economic base for social improvement.

Mr. Hawkins and I agreed we should implement a recent University study relating to a survey of mineral resources and that we should seek to initiate projects to use the Indian resources in a job producing way. There are many restrictions of Federal law and bureaucratic rule that need to be overcome and there is a job to build pride back into many of the Indian families.

One of the most difficult problems relates to liquor but most of the Indian leaders feel that given occupation and income the standard of living will improve and the drinking excesses decline.

We promised no miracle, no overnight solutions, but as we journeyed together, the Federal representative, the Minnesota Governor, and the elected tribal leaders and local council officials, everyone took heart that maybe at last the day of constructive cooperation had arrived and that a new day for the Indians of Minnesota could begin to dawn.

"Bonne Biere . . . Bon Repas" —that's the message Quebec diners-out have been finding on their restaurant menus. Other clip-on hints put it into English: Enjoy beer with your meal." No matter what the country, it's a very good idea! Next time you have friends in for dinner, serve beer. Almost everyone loves it, and beer makes a good meal taste just that much better.

Moon Trips and Money

Someone recently estimated it should cost approximately $15,000,000 to travel round-trip to the moon in 1968. That sounds like a great deal of money — but the sum contributed in federal excise taxes by the Brewing Industry could send 53 moon-inspectors on such a journey! 1960 federal taxes paid by the industry totaled over $796,000,000 . . . and we like to believe some of that sum may be helping to finance current space research programs.

Party Potion

Surprise guests with this Spring-minded drink! This recipe makes two punch-cups apiece for four people. But you might multiply it, and serve it for a Spring wedding reception: Dissolve 3 Tbsp. sugar in 3 Tbsp. fresh lemon or lime juice, in pitcher. Add 1 cup cold beer and 2 cups cold carbonated water. Mix well, add six ice-cubes, and serve in glasses that wear a thin lemon-slice on their rims . . . Learn to use beer in cooking, too. 1,000 Jam LHS Mon. for "65th Precinct"

Attendance at Show Forces Presentation Again on April 2nd

Attendance exceeded all expectations for the presentation of "65th Precinct", the Washington PTA variety show, held Monday evening in the Lincoln high school auditorium. There was standing room only by 8 p. m., scheduled time for the performance to begin, and people were being turned away by 8:05 p. m. Attendance was estimated around the 1,000 mark.

Because of the large crowd and enthusiastic reception of the show, a repeat performance has been scheduled for Monday, April 2, at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium. Anyone holding tickets for the first production may use them for the April 2 performance.

Mrs. William (Velma) Holmes, who wrote the script and directed the production, attributed its success to an outstanding cast. "The cast really worked on their acts to make them as good as they possibly could," Mrs. Holmes said. "Without their fine job of acting the event could not have been successful. The high school boys who handled lighting, curtains and music also did a real fine job."

With another production coming up in two weeks, Mrs. Holmes requests cast members who will not be able to participate in the April 2 show to contact her immediately so that substitutions can be made. Proceeds from advance ticket sales on the initial staging of the show should be turned in to Mrs. Robert DuChamp. She will also have tickets available for advance sale on the second performance and cast members are encouraged to obtain their supply for sale.

More Talent Added

"We have several additional acts which will be used in the April 2 performance," Mrs. Holmes said. "I think this will be an even better show because of the enthusiasm which the cast has after the terrific response to the program on Monday night."

Gate receipts Monday evening were slightly over $200 with prevailing admission fees of 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. The same prices will be in effect April 2. And for those who

Sjoberg Predicts Better Television by September 1

Community Antenna Service Expected from Tower Northwest of TRF

Community antenna television will become a reality in Thief River Falls in the early fall according to Gene Sjoberg, proprietor of Sjoberg Appliance, who stated that plans have been completed for the installation of the system by September 1.

By employing a master antenna system mounted on a 500-foot tower, signals from distant stations are received. The tower will be located northwest of the city on 10 acres of land purchased from Hillie Drees. Signals are improved in quality over that received at the master antenna and then are transmitted into homes and other places through an arrangement of coaxial cables.

Each subscriber will have his own set connected to the master antenna, much the same as sets in hotel or hospital rooms are connected to a single antenna on the roof. Connection will be made free of charge with a monthly service charge of $5 anticipated.

Currently there are about 800 master antenna systems in the United States with approximately 800,000 homes and three million persons being served. Others in Minnesota are International Falls, Ely, Rochester, Mankato, Brainerd, Willmar, Winona, Fairmont, New Ulm, Jackson and Little Falls.

While radio signals tend to follow the curvature of the earth, television signals travel in a straight line. The further the person is from a television station, the more troublesome and expensive reception problems become. Many problems of "fringe area" reception are solved by the multi-channel master antenna construction, Sjoberg said.

Army Engineers Drop Proposal for Thief River Work

Herb Dill, manager of the Agassiz Wildlife Refuge, and other representatives of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, discussed the proposal for clearing the channel of the Thief River with officers of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers at St. Paul Tuesday and Dill reports that the project has been dropped. He states that the Engineers had concluded the funds available would not be adequate to do a satisfactory cleaning job.

To do what the engineers though necessary would require substantial contributions by the Fish and Wildlife Service and benefited property owners.

Grygla-Gatzke Consolidation Plat Rejected

Rejection of an application for approval of a plat for consolidation of the Grygla and Gatzke school districts was decided at a recent meeting of the state board of education. John O. Pearson, Marshall county superintendent of schools, was advised of the decision in a letter from Erling O. Johnson, commissioner of education.

Commissioner Johnson urged reactivation of the Marshall County School Survey Committee to proceed as soon as possible with a complete study of the areas. The committee has not met for several years, during which time one member has died and districts have been realigned. A meeting of school officers must be called to reorganize the committee.

"A proposal such as the Grygla-Gatzke consolidation would have far-reaching effects on adjacent districts which have secondary schools at the present time," Commissioner Johnson's letter stated. "Questions relating to the assumption of the existing bonded debt under the consolidation proceedings, the use of existing cash reserves and the construction of additional classrooms need to be considered.

"The ability of the proposed district to support an adequate secondary school program on the existing tax base also needs to be given additional study," the commissioner stated.

The term of only one director expires, he being Gust Konickson. Following the business session a lunch will be served by the members of the Redeemer Lutheran Ladies Aid.

The creamery made good progress during the past year, its statement reveals. There was a substantial increase in its volume and the average operating cost per pound of butterfat was lowered from the 1960 total of 10.659 cents to 7.684 cents, resulting in substantial increases in the payments to producers.

School Board Grants Salary Hikes Friday

Teachers with 4 and 5 Years Training Given Raise for Next Term

Salary increases to teachers with four or five years of college training were granted when the Thief River Falls board of education met in adjourned session Friday, March 16. No change in salary was made for teachers with two or three years of college training.

With a total of 129 teachers in the local school system, most of whom will qualify for salary increases, the additional expenditure is expected to total about $11,000, according to M. R. Hankerson, superintendent of schools. The actual total increase is dependent upon resignations and teachers hired for the 1962-1963 school term.

Under the new schedule, teachers with four years of training receive an increase of $150 annually in the area of 0 through three years experience; $100 in the area of four through seven years experience; $75 in the area of eight through nine years experience; and $50 in the area of 10 through 12 years experience.

Current starting salary for teachers with four years of training and no previous experience is $4,500. Top salary for 12 years or more of experience is $6,800. Starting salary for teachers with five years of training is $4,800 with a maximum for 12 years or more experience being $7,100.

In addition to the salary increase, 55 of the 129 teachers qualify for an additional dependency allowance of $300 as head of household. This allowance was in effect in previous years.

Experience in other school systems will be allowed up to a maximum of six years. This would place experienced teachers, new to the local school system, at step number seven if they have six years experience. This would be $4,075 with two years training, $4,600 with three years training, $4,850 with four years training; and $6,150 with five years training.

Three fourths of the annual salary for the current school year shall be paid in nine equal payments, subject to deductions, and the remaining one-fourth shall be paid on June 28. Annual physical examinations may be required of each teacher at the discretion of the board.

An allowance of 10 days annually shall be permitted for illness of the teachers, five of which may be used for illness or death in the immediate family. Sick leave days not used in any year may cumulate to 70 days.

Silas Hanson

Silas Hanson Heads County Crop Growers

Specialty Crops Are Reviewed by Two Speakers on Tuesday

Silas Hanson of rural Thief River Falls was re-elected president of the Pennington County Crop Improvement association at the group's annual meeting Tuesday. Returned to the board with Hanson were Wilbur Hallstrom, vice-president, and Edgar Naplin, treasurer. Paul Stelmaschuk, county agent, serves as secretary.

A 4-H awards program was established by the group. Three 4-H jackets will be given to the top three 4-H'ers in the agronomy project. A score sheet will be used to evaluate the 4-H'ers work and the three highest scoring members will be presented jackets at the annual 4-H Achievement Banquet.

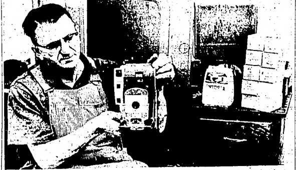
Specialty crops were reviewed at the meeting by two speakers. Robert Potts, fieldman for the Minnesota Crop Improvement Association stated that red clover and timothy production can be profitable in this area and that it is possible to do this on the conserving acres under the A. S. C. program. Stanley Roadfeldt, representing the seed trade, said there is a ready market for these crops and that farmers could grow them if they were certified, under contracts which would provide a minimum price.

Varieties of red clover which the trade wants are Lakeland, Dollard and Penscott. In timothy production, Lorrain and Climax are in demand. Other specialty crops which may be considered are trefoil and sunflowers, but farmers were urged to check into the marketing of these products before starting production.

In evaluating the 1962 Seed and Feed Show, it was decided to provide for commercial booths and exhibits in the city auditorium and to hold the educational meetings in other quarters.

The group also considered a tour for the summer months to visit fields of new varieties and specialty crops.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Engen and family were Sunday dinner guests at the Alvin Halverson home at Oslo.



REWARDS for his efforts are displayed above by Hjalmer Martin, manager of the Newfolden Cooperative Creamery. His butter-making rating of 99.902 was second in organizational Land O'Lakes competition recently and for the fifth straight year he topped buttermakers in District 17. It was the third time he has placed second in competition in the organization, and each time he has been beaten by Leonard Anderson of Lamberton, who this year won with a rating of 99.906. Martin has managed the creamery for 28 years after serving as a helper for seven years. He noted that Wendell Swan, a former Newfolden resident, placed sixth in the contest. Second place prizes included a Polaroid camera, luggage, electric can opener and electric shaver.

Council Asks Bids On Power Conversion

Load Limits On County Roads Go Into Effect Today

County road restrictions go into effect today, according to Joseph Seidel, Pennington county highway engineer. Surfaced roads will have 5-ton per axle limits as will some graveled roads which are in good condition and posted with the 5-ton limit.

Most of the other unsurfaced roads in the county will have 4-ton limits. If conditions warrant later in the season, some of these roads which are in danger of being damaged will be further restricted, Seidel said.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Sackett of Viking were Sunday evening visitors at the Orville Peters home.

Lincoln High PTA to Hear Building Talks on Monday

The Lincoln High School PTA unit will meet on Monday, March 26, at 8 p. m. in the high school auditorium, Francis Hamerlinck, secretary, announced today.

Proposed building plans will be discussed for the Thief River Falls schools. Supt. Marshall Hankerson, the architects hired by the school district, the fiscal agent, school administrative staff, and members of the school board will be present for a discussion, and question and answer period.

Lunch will be served by the ninth grade mothers.

1962 Street Projects And Equipment Rental Also Slated for Bids

April 18 will be a busy day for members of the Thief River Falls city council as a result of action taken at a special meeting Monday evening and the regular session Tuesday night. Bids will be opened that day on the power conversion project, 1962 street program and equipment rental.

Power conversion was discussed at the Monday night meeting. It was noted that the trend of electrical power used increases between eight and nine per cent annually on the average although there was a slight leveling off of use last year. With more new construction of facilities which will be large users of electricity, it was deemed advisable to proceed with the conversion this summer.

Conversion will be made from a 2,400 volt delta system to a 4,160 vlotage system. Purpose for the voltage increase is to increase the capacity of the existing primary conductors without actually changing them. It will also cause less line loss in the distribution system. Estimated cost of the conversion is $69,700 which includes $14,500 for rewinding the Nordberg generator, $25,200 for equipment, wire, cable work, switchgear and cable changes and $20,000 for line conversion plans and specifications.

An alternate bid will also be taken on reconditioning of the Bush-Sulzer unit at a total estimated cost of $29,000. Reconditioning of this engine would provide ample local power in the event of a power failure from the Bureau of Reclamation.

District Court Makes Referral Wednesday at Defense Request

Paul Wangberg, 19-year-old Thief River Falls youth charged with the fatal shooting of Police Sgt. Donald Myers, was ordered referred for psychiatric examination and report at district court held in Warren Wednesday afternoon. Judge Arnold Forbes referred Wangberg to Dr. Reid of the Bemidji Mental Health Center.

Warren A. Saetre, Marshall county attorney, filed information with the court charging the defendant with second degree murder. Defense attorneys in the case are H. O. Chommie and C. L. Charlson of Thief River Falls. Charlson requested psychiatric evaluation at the district court hearing.

Wangberg was released Monday from Northwestern Hospital in Thief River Falls where he had been hospitalized since February 17 for treatment of bullet wounds received in an exchange of gunfire with the policeman. He waived preliminary hearing in Warren justice court late Monday afternoon and was taken to the Polk county jail at Crookston.

Although no date has definitely been set for beginning the psychiatric examination, it is likely that Wangberg will be taken to Bemidji Monday by the Marshall county sheriff's department.

Divorce Granted to Coya Knutson, Former Member of Congress

Former Congresswoman Coya Knutson Tuesday was granted a divorce in Red Lake county district court from Andy Knutson of Oklee on the eve of their 22nd wedding anniversary. She is now living in Battle Creek, Michigan, where she has a position with the office of civil defense mobilization.

Judge James F. Murphy of Grand Rapids granted the divorce after attorneys for the couple agreed on a property division in a conference in the judge's chambers at the conclusion of Mrs. Knutson's testimony. Details of the property division were not disclosed, but it was understood that Knutson would keep the hotel at Oklee under certain circumstances.

Earlier in the hearing Mrs. Knutson had testified that her husband was drunk the first time he saw their adopted son. She sought the divorce on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, "involving frequent drinking bouts" which she said began in the second year of their marriage.

Mrs. Knutson said her husband consented to her running for the Minnesota Legislature, to which she was elected in 1950, but showed no interest in her activities. She said she continued teaching, taking leaves of absence for legislative duties, because "it was a necessity that I work to bring in income for the family."

When she decided to run for Congress, she said, she sold North Dakota land which she had inherited for $5,000 to help with campaign expenses.

Annual Program of Immunization Termed Success

Participation in the February immunization program in grades 3, 6, 9 and 12 at Thief River Falls schools was described as good by Mrs. Margaret Race, school nurse. A total of 625 students were given diphtheria-tetanus booster shots and 365 had smallpox vaccinations.

"Participation in the grades has always been good," Mrs. Race said "with some grades having 100 per cent protection and all grades averaging 95 per cent. Both 9th and 12th grades showed an improvement over last year. Grade 9 has 80 per cent of the class adequately protected and grade 12 has 75 per cent."

The Library Corner

By Eleanor Olson

The members of the community who failed to see a need for library expansion when they marked their ballots last November should have been on hand Saturday, March 17, for the Children's Tea sponsored by Friends of the Library. Nearly six hundred people pressed by the party table, viewed the special displays and watched Mrs. Lendobeja's "flannel graf."

Only the children remained undiscouraged by the pressing throng. The accompanying parents were nonplused and several adult patrons were quite annoyed to find themselves trapped and unable to leave through the clogged entry. They were forced to continue their book-browsing whether they wanted to or not.

The press of children would perhaps have been no less in a new addition, but the ability to handle them quickly with ease and convenience would have been increased. And with two useable entrances in the building, adult users would have been able to come and go at will.

Perhaps those in favor of the status quo would say there is no point in bothering with the youngsters in the first place. Such a suggestion would imply that the staff should stop trying to serve the public to the best of their ability.

Already many projects have had to be postponed which would give library users greater enjoyment and increased knowledge. One such project is the installation of a summer reading program which would introduce children to books they might otherwise miss. Some of the classics which take more time to read than can be managed during the school year, for instance, or groups of books which would apply directly to their summer activities. (Rock-picking, leaf or flower collecting or the growth and development of frogs or insects to name just a few.) Such a program has been shelved in the past because it would need one or more people to supervise, check on participation, help the children with problems and present awards.

Help has been found, however, this year to present the Spring Storyhour series. Mrs. George Martin's Girl Scout Troop No. 7 will conduct this Saturday afternoon series for grades 1-3. The girls will tell stories from 1:00 to 1:30 under the direction of Bertha Hastad of the Library Staff. Miss Hastad is an expert storyteller and the girls will gain wonderful experience while they are fulfilling their public service work requirements for first class scout rank.

Volunteers, like these scouts, can do a great deal to help the Library and its staff. Only as more and more people become interested in helping the Library can other desireable projects become realities under present overcrowded conditions. A small nucleus of interested people established Friends of the Library two years ago with this purpose in mind. But they need more help, more members to carry out new projects and to make the community more aware of the library and the community's need of it. You can help them with your time and your service.

Poison Prevention Week Being Noted

Poisons Cause Many Deaths, Safety, Council Reminds

March 18 through 24 marks the first annual observance of National Poison Prevention Week. Accidental poisoning is an important cause of death in Minnesota and in the United States, according to the Minnesota Safety Council and the Minnesota department of health. In 1960, accidental poisoning was third in the leading causes of accidental death in Minnesota homes, exceeded only by falls and burns. Most poisoning accidents occur in children under five years of age and particularly in the ages between one to three years.

The National Office of Vital Statistics reports that 450 children under five years of age died from accidental poisonings in 1959. All children, but especially those from one to five years of age, should be protected 100 per cent from poisonous and potentially poisonous substances.

Medicines account for about half of all accidental poisoning cases; aspirin, especially "baby" aspirin, leads the list. Household cleaning and polishing agents account for an estimated 20 per cent. Insect sprays, rat poisons, disinfectants and heating fuels are also high on the list. An estimated 250,000 different products are on the market today for use in industry, on the farm, and in the home. Not all of these products are harmful but in many instances those that are, are not recognized as such.

"These products must be in our home, but precautions should be taken in their handling," states Dr. Warren Lawson, director of the poison information center, Minnesota department of health. "All medicines and potentially dangerous products should be kept in locked cabinets and returned to their storage place immediately after using. Studies have shown that in almost all cases of accidental poisoning the substances were not in their customary storage places."

HAPPY HOMEMAKING

by Laura Duerst

PENNINGTON COUNTY HOME AGENT

Spring is beginning to spring around the corners so those who enjoy the outdoors are getting itchy feet to get out to work in the yard. Gardeners are asking "what is the proper procedure in establishing the landscape plan?"

Any method of approach to the development of the landscape plan should be based on the thought of permanency. Any duplication of effort is costly, both in money and time. Therefore, you should plant permanent materials first and then plant the temporary materials afterwards.

The lawn should be established first because it provides a carpet for the entire landscape development. It takes from one to two years to develop a good lawn.

Since permanent trees and foundation plantings grow slowly, you should plant them as early in the development of the plan as possible.

Once you have developed these two stages then the addition of shrubs and shrub borders can be added. Perennial and annual borders can be added at any time during the landscaping development. After they are used as substitutions in the shrub border until it is possible to purchase the shrubs.

The week of March 3-10 was 4-H club week. Several 4-H clubs in the county made window displays. Two clubs that weren't mentioned in previous news releases were Star and Rocksbury. Star placed one on Junior leadership in the window in Goodridge post office and another on livestock in the Erie Store, Rocksbury placed their display in Robert J. Lund's window. By having these display windows is one way to tell people about 4-H club work.

Yard 'n' Garden

Pruning Ornamental Trees and Shrubs

The beauty of a landscape planting must be maintained by careful pruning. Many of the shrubs grown commonly in the landscape can be pruned during March.

Almost all summer-blooming shrubs and shade trees can be pruned now. You can also prune shrubs grown for screening purposes, informal hedges and shrubs that do not have significant flowering. These include Froebel spirea, dogwood and rugosa roses.

Pruning should do three things:

1. Improve the shape and form of the tree or shrub.
2. Remove weak or diseased wood.
3. Rejuvenate and keep the shrub in a vigorous condition.

Shade trees are pruned to improve their form and to thin them out so more sunlight will penetrate through the branches.

Proper equipment is necessary for a good pruning job. You'll need a small hand pruner for cuts under ½ inch, a loper for making cuts from ½ to 1 inch and a good pruning saw for larger cuts.

Most cuts don't need to be treated with a wound compound. However, use a wound dressing such as orange shellac for cuts over ½ inch.

Make all cuts to a side branch or to a main trunk. Avoid controlling the growth by shearing; it makes a shrub look unnatural.

When pruning shrubs, cut back some of the heavy wood to the ground each year in order to encourage new young wood to develop.

Two Local Men at Yule Seal Session

Kjos and Kenneth Taylor Attend St. Paul Meeting

We must clean up our air—community and personal—if we are to reduce respiratory disease infection, Dr. Mathew Divertie, Mayo Clinic, Rochester, told volunteer and professional health workers at the second annual meeting of the Minnesota Tuberculosis and Health association and the Minnesota Thoracic society in St. Paul, March 16.

Volunteer Christmas Seal workers from all parts of the state attended the one-day sessions at the Hotel St. Paul. Representing this county were Herman A. Kjos and Kenneth Taylor, both of Thief River Falls.

"Breathing pure air will result in tremendous decrease in the frequency of respiratory diseases, particularly chronic bronchitis and emphysema (a disease which causes the lungs to become greatly enlarged." Dr. Divertie said. "We don't see these diseases in people who breathe pure air."

Dr. Divertie noted a definite link between respiratory diseases and smoking. "Though doctors do not yet know if chronic bronchitis and emphysema are actually caused by smoking, they do know," he said, "that over 90 per cent of the emphysema victims are heavy smokers. Frequently, too, they live in areas where air pollution is a constant problem."

Respiratory diseases, their prevention and control, will become a part of the expanded program of the state Tuberculosis and Health association, said Josiah G. Neal, St. Paul, managing director.

1962-63 Watercraft Licenses Available

The 1962-63 watercraft licenses are now available for issuance from county auditors and their agents throughout the state, the conservation department reports.

All watercraft registered during 1960 with alphabetical suffixes ending with BA BB, BC, BD, and BE must be renewed during 1962. The licenses expired December 31, 1961.

All 1959 registrants who failed to renew their watercraft licenses during 1961 have forfeited the right to retain the license numbers assigned in 1959, and they must be removed from their boats. New registrations must be obtained.

The department has announced the following changes in registration procedure:

1. Auditors and agents will issue renewal and transfer licenses only when the original copy of the previous license is presented by the registrant.
2. Auditors and agents can no longer issue watercraft licenses when the original license copies have been lost.
3. All registrants who request renewal, transfer or duplicate of a license that has been lost are required to complete in full a watercraft license application, have it notarized, and submit it with the required license fee directly to the department of conservation. The department will issue the license requested.
4. The watercraft license application should be used only when a license has been lost and should not be used for any other purpose. Applications are available from all county auditors and their agents as well as the department of conservation.

ing on streets which will be improved with partial use of state aid. These will include Arnold avenue from the Great Northern tracks to Third street and from Fourth to Sixth street; Knight avenue from the Great Northern tracks to Third street; Fourth street from Main to Arnold avenue; First street from Knight to Arnold avenue; Sixth street from Main to Arnold avenue; and First street from Kneale avenue to T. H. 59 on the east side of the city.

Wallace Heaton, police patrolman, was appointed dogcatcher for the city to succeed the late Sgt. Donald Myers. It was also noted that Harold Anderson is serving as acting superintendent of the water filtration plant following the sudden death of Harold M. Johnson. A resolution of condolences to the Johnson family was also adopted.

Gas Bids Opened

Bids were opened on bituminous material and gasoline. Humble Oil company of Billings, Mont., was awarded the contract to supply 40,000 gallons of bituminous material with a bid of 12.31 cents per gallon. Four bidders expressed interest in the contract.

Cities Service Oil company was given the contract for supplying 30,000 gallons more or less of gasoline in bulk delivery for a bid of 13.5 cents plus 5 cents per gallon state tax. The city does not pay federal gasoline tax. Consumers Cooperative's bid of 16 cents per gallon plus the 5-cent state tax was also accepted for 5,000 gallons of gasoline at the pump.

Second reading of the ordinance to create a city planning commission was tabled pending study of an abbreviated ordinance which has been prepared as an amended version of the initial lengthy ordinance. Approval was given to building permit requests from Kelly Hardware for a new store front and canopy at $2,000 and Albert Sjolsvold for a new dwelling at 301 Knight ave. S. at $8,000.

Resignations Accepted

Resignations of Oscar Paulson of the municipal liquor store and Martin Carlson, custodian at the auditorium, were accepted as of April 30. Cigarette license renewals were granted to Riverside Grocery, A. O. Lindland, Liquor dispensary, sports arena, Hans Prestby, Wallace E. Grovum and VFW Post 2793. Electricians license for M. T. Emme of Western Electric company was also renewed.

Police Chief Elton Cummings reported on the accidents in which the police squad car has been involved and noted that patrolman R. A. Werner, driver at the time of both mishaps, has been placed on curtailed driving.

John P. Skeate, business representative of Municipal Drivers and Helpers Local 664, appeared on behalf of the union in requesting wage increases for 1962. He noted that a meeting of the local had been held the night before and that members had voted to reject the city's position in the opinion that increases are unnecessary. The local also voted to proceed with fact-finding if the council refuses to reconsider.

Discussion included expression of the council's position that city employee's wages are as high or higher in Thief River Falls as in other area communities and comparable or higher than similar non-city employment in Thief River Falls. The council asked more complete comparative information before taking definite action on the request for increases.

Mrs. Allan (DeVonna) Noreen was hired as assistant at the municipal liquor store at a salary of $218.98 monthly.

Dutch Elm Disease Resistant Trees Not Yet Available

No American elm or hybrid elm with the American elm's characteristics that is resistant to the Dutch elm disease has yet been developed for Minnesota. That reminder was sounded this week by County Agent Paul Stelmaschuk and two University of Minnesota plant pathologists.

The search for elms resistant to the disease has been going on since 1930 when the Dutch elm disease was first found in the United States.

Because of the desirable growth form of the American elm, researchers have tried to find a resistant American elm or hybrid combining the American elm's growth form with the more resistant but less desirable elms. So far the program has not been too successful.

The development of an elm resistant to Dutch elm disease is a complicated procedure, usually requiring several years of selection and artifical inoculation. Seedlings sometimes show some resistance to the fungus, but a tree must be tested several years before its actual resistance is known.

One of the most disease-resistant elms found to date is the Siberian elm, Ulmus pumila, but crosses between that species and the American elm have not been successful. The resulting trees are either Siberian elm or American elm, but not the desired hybrid.

Continued high temperatures have made it necessary for the Minnesota highway department to restrict in accordance with the "Proposed Load Restriction Map for 1962", the trunk highways in Zone 4, 5 and 6, Thursday, March 22. With the placing of these restrictions, all roads throughout the state will be subject to restrictions as shown on the load restriction map. Posted signs govern the restriction on each section of highway. Paved roads or those not subject to restriction are limited to legal axle weights by zones as restrictions become effective.

Dill Cites Progress Made At Agassiz Wildlife Refuge

"Progress has been made in solving some of the more difficult problems at the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge," according to Herb Dill, refuge manager. "It is especially appropriate, during National Wildlife Week with its theme of Waterfowl for the Future, that we mention some of these things."

Foremost was the feeding program to alleviate depredations by ducks on privately owned crops, Dill stated. Seven feed sites were prepared within the marsh area on the refuge. These were graveled and grain was hauled to them daily from early August until late in September.

Ducks came by the thousands to take advantage of this bonanza, the manager said. Grain was fed on the basis of an average daily ration of one bushel per 125 ducks. The gravel, which had been hauled to the feed sites, was also eaten by the ducks! Ducks require grit in their gizzards to aid digestion.

The farming program at the refuge was stepped up last year, which will permit raising more food for all forms of wildlife. A total of 320 acres will be farmed by refuge personnel in 1962, with plans for additional acres in subsequent years.

With 47.5 miles of dike and 115 miles of canals and ditches on the refuge, three draglines were kept busy most of the summer cleaning ditches and repairing dike slopes. Four stock water pits were dug for pastures making a total of 12 in the 14 refuge grazing units.

The pastures are moderately grazed by cattle from neighboring farms. Light grazing promotes use by wildlife and 25 per cent of the income from grazing reverts to the county. More than 5,000 acres of refuge lands are suitable for grazing.

"That the Agassiz Refuge is pulling its weight in terms of ducks and geese for the future was shown by the 34,000 ducks and 300 geese raised to flight stage last summer" Dill added. Just as farmers rotate their fields, keeping some fallow to control weeds and replenish the soil, the 13 refuge pools are managed in similar fashion.

A ten-year rotation plan, which has been operated five years, has already shown its value. Waterfowl have doubled their use in that time from approximately 5,000,000 use-days in 1957 to a high of 11,500,000 in 1959, and an average of over 10,000,000 the past three years.

"Summing up," Dill states, "it is highly gratifying to work with our heritage of wildlife on a productive area such as Agassiz. If we are to continue to enjoy these things, and pass them on for future generations, there must be a concerted effort by all people to use wisely what we now have. This means saving enough living space for waterfowl for the future!"

WILDLIFE in Minnesota
by JIM KIMBALL

It has been extremely gratifying to see the pheasant feeding program take off like John Glenn. Also, like John Glenn, we have experienced several "Gs" of pressure which seem to accompany any rapid take off. It seemed essential to get the program going immediately but without adequate advanced planning. I am sure that I must have embarrassed some of our game wardens and game managers. To them, and to some of the sportsmen whom I'm sure we had bewildered for a day or two, I offer my sincere apologies. I'll explain, but first let us take a look at our established policy on pheasant feeding. It reads as follows:

"The Department will not feed wild pheasants artificially and will discourage others from such feeding except under unusual climatic or biological circumstances. It has been found that pheasants can survive successfully for a week or more without food in times of heavy snow and ice cover. Farmers and sportsmen will be encouraged to grow and leave standing natural foods. Such foods will be planted, where necessary, on state game management areas."

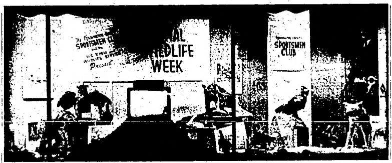
Since heavy snows started blanketing the fields, our wardens, biologists and managers have been picking up road-killed pheasants and collecting a few from isolated areas to weigh and examine. They appeared to be getting along well until quite suddenly the report came in that many of them had lost 4 to 6 ounces of their body weight, which means most of the body fat. With much winter ahead of us, it appeared necessary to use the clause in our policy statement which read, ". . . except under unusual climatic or biological circumstances."

Mr. Carl Heaten, director of ASCS Commodity Office, Department of Agriculture, was called for help in providing emergency feed, and I believe he must have had a call into Washington before he finished talking with me. The wheels of government have a reputation for turning exceedingly slow, but not so in this case. Wardens and game managers were sent memos telling them the program was coming but they could not be told how to carry it out because at that time nobody knew how it would be handled. As soon as the 94 distribution points were established, this information was sent to the field. However, with all due respect to the postal department, the U. S. mails cannot compete with newspapers, radio and television for speed. Warden supervisors were contacted by telephone but this, of course, did not get the word to everyone.

So, I am sure some faithful game wardens must have found themselves in the position of explaining why pheasant feeding was generally undesirable, only to have someone shove a newspaper in their hands stating that the front office had made 30,000 bushels of grain available. I am sorry, fellows, but it either was this or delaying the feeding operation another week. With another snowstorm predicted (and accurately so) and pheasant weights decreasing, we decided not to wait. I am sure your sportsmen will understand.

Notwithstanding any temporary embarrassment, I am extremely proud of the way our wardens and managers took hold of the program, substituted ingenuity and resourcefulness for lack of adequate instructions and made it work. It was also a pleasure, although certainly not a surprise, to see sportsmen, farmers, legislators, businessmen, elevator operations, Soil Conservation Service, and countless others donating their time, trucks and energy to this cause.

I have heard people say, "How could anyone shoot a beautiful pheasant?" I have just placed the third order for 30,000 bushels of corn. It is a safe guess that the bulk of this 90,000 bushels of corn is being lugged into the fields by people who shoot pheasants. It may seem like an enigma to some, but it proves that you can shoot pheasants and love them, too. Who would be saving their lives now if we did not have hunters?



ATTENTION of many people has been drawn to the National Wildlife Week window display which has been erected in the S & L store in Thief River Falls. Arrangement of the display was made by the Pennington County Sportsmen's club in cooperation with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Theme for the national observance is "Waterfowl for the Future by Conservation of Wetlands Which Benefit Man and Wildlife." Included in the window display are a number of "mounted" works of taxidermy by Gay Warnecke of Thief River Falls and wildlife photos displayed by staff members of the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge east of Holt. An automatic slide machine also shows colored slides of wildlife.

It Was a Good Try

The Minnesota and United States curling champions, the Fran Kleffman rink of Hibbing, turned in a creditable performance in the four-rink world's bonspiel that was completed in Scotland this week. The Kleffman's finished in second place, being runners-up to the famed Ernie Richardson rink of Regina, Sask. The Richardsons, a rink comprised of two brothers and two cousins, won the world's championship for an unprecedented third time.

The Kleffmans, in their first encounter against the Richardsons, lost by an 11-5 score; but on Tuesday, in a second-round encounter, the Hibbing rink pressed the Canadian champions, losing by a 9-8 score. Young Dick Brown, the 21-year old who throws the skip rocks for the Kleffman rink, was very impressive in the match against the Canadians.

And as a note to Dan Bjorkman: the Richardsons, in a Monday match against the Rolf Arswildsson rink of Sweden, scored a 21-4 win, setting a record total and individual rink score in rolling up the lop-sided win.

Harold's Selections

Harold Eide, the sports authority of south Riverside avenue, from the railroad tracks to the Gulf of Mexico ticked off the results and the scores of the first-round games of the Minnesota state high school basketball tournament that opens this afternoon in Minneapolis.

Harold, who claims that he has been "feeding" his stuff to Helmer (Great Northern Ole) Ness, states the first-round games will result as follows: Danube, 62, vs. Ada, 48; St. Louis Park, 57, vs. Crosby-Ironton, 51; S. St. Paul, 48, vs. Cloquet, 42; and Wells, 51, vs. Lyle, 46. Eide adds that if Ole has made modest wagers on the information he has received from Harold, he, Ole, should be able to take a vacation trip to Norway this summer.

But it's a cinch that Ole won't be making any vacation trips on Harold's state high school tournament selections. I should laugh at these choices, but I haven't been too well myself lately.

Neil a Casualty

Neil Junker, the former Thieves and University of Minnesota catcher who has been in training with the Kansas City A's at their camp in Palm Beach, Fla., has been sent back to Kansas City, Mo. where he will undergo surgery.

Neil, who is on the major league roster of the A's, and who had bright prospects of remaining with the club this season, is suffering from a slipped disc. It is hoped that surgery will remedy this back ailment, and that the ever-hustling catcher will be able to rejoin the A's in a month or two.

Well Officiated

Mention should be made of the excellent officiating that was evidenced in the district and regional basketball tournaments at Grand Forks. Horace May and Jim Smalley of Bemidji, called the district 31 tournament; and Al Banks and A. V. Johnson of Minneapolis, whistled the Region Eight tourney. These officials had control of the games at all times.

There were a few complaints and some boing by the fans, but that is the rule during tournament time when the partisan feelings of the fans are so flammable.

The meeting isn't restricted to owners of retriever dogs, and an invitation has been extended to hunters and sportsmen who would be interested in the formation of a retriever club.

Conflicts Cause Kiddies Carnival to Be Canceled

Members of the Lions club at their luncheon meeting Wednesday witnessed the presentation of a movie film supplied by J. J. Womack of the Union State bank, showing interesting highlights of the Minnesota Twins baseball club during its first season in 1961.

In its business session, the club was asked by C. W. Rodekuhr of the committee sponsoring the reorganization of the county fair society to lend its assistance to the project. The club voted its support and several members volunteered their services.

Also discussed was the matter of the Lions Kiddies Carnival, usually held in February in past years, but postponed this winter because of conflicts with school and other events. It was voted to drop the project for this year, but to make every effort to include it in the 1963 program.

Industrial Payrolls Remain Stable in TRF

(Ed. note: The following is the second in a series of three articles which will be published in the Times in the hope of bringing about a better understanding of the job situation in Thief River Falls and the state of Minnesota. The articles are the result of a study of employment trends in Minnesota since 1950 by Albert Marshall, former editor and publisher of the Red Wing Daily Republican Eagle.

Employment in Manufacturing

(Special to the Thief River Falls Times).

During the ten year period ending in 1961, manufacturing employment in the state of Minnesota was increased to the tune of 23,050 new jobs. The advance represented a gain of just over 11 per cent.

Thief River Falls, with but one tenth of its working force engaged in industry, naturally exerted but little influence on this outcome. It was, and it remains, an essentialy agricultural trade and marketing center.

It is worth mentioning, however, that what industry Thief River Falls has has maintained a stable level of employment during the past ten years.

Thief River Falls had an industrial payroll covering 296 men and women during the years 1950 and 1951. In 1961, average employment in this field totalled 292. The change during the period has been inconsequential.

The local employment office finds that while the overall picture remains the same there have been changes affecting companies and individual employes.

Two newcomers to town, Dow Key company and Polar Manufacturing Co., have been responsible for new jobs. Land O'Lakes increased their turkey eviscerating operations, but this gain was offset when Peterson-Biddick discontinued its operations and started hauling turkeys to Wadena.

Employment in the city's woodworking plants has remained pretty stable.

Minnesota's Record Better

The picture for the whole state is an encouraging one. Manufacturing in Minnesota is growing at a pace faster than the national average.

The U. S. Census bureau reports covering the years 1958 and 1948 pointed up a gain of industrial employment in this state of over 15 per cent. The national gain was one of less than eight per cent during this ten year span.

State employment security office figures also verify the national trend towards decentralization of industry—although the trend in Minnesota is of exceedingly modest proportions.

Manufacturing employment in the Twin City metropolitan area comprising Anoka, Dakota, Hennepin, Ramsey, and Washington counties, racked up a gain of about 16,700 jobs (a percentage gain of 12.5 per cent) between 1950-51 and 1960-61.

Metropolitan Duluth suffered a crushing 31 per cent decline in manufacturing employment during the decade. The decline affected 3,650 job-holders.

But the areas lying outside Duluth and the Twin City complex reported an industrial growth that exceeded (percentage-wise) Both metropolitan districts. The gain in jobs amounted to one of over 16 per cent.

Several Sensational Gains

This out-state flowering of industrial expansion was marked by startling gains in factory employment in several cities.

Rochester reported a 231 per cent gain; Willmar, one of 127 per cent; St. Cloud was up 93 per cent; Owatonna, 59 per cent; Little Falls, 56 pct., Brainerd, 49 pct., Mankato 44 pct., and Worthington, 39 per cent.

These other communities also made notable strides ahead: Crookston, Fairmont, Grand Rapids, Albert Lea, Marshall and New Ulm.

Industrial employment was relatively static at Austin, Bemidji, Faribault, Fergus Falls, Montevideo, Red Wing, Thief River Falls and Winona. Inconsequential gains were recorded by Faribault, Fergus Falls, Montevideo, and Winona. The four other cities reported small losses.

The Range cities — Hibbing and Virginia — have never become important manufacturing centers. The small industrial payrolls were decimated by the recent decline in iron ore mining upon which most of their plants were dependent.

As a result, industrial employment at Virginia was off by 20 per cent; and at Hibbing, by 43 per cent.

Moorhead also turned in a loss figure. The loss there amounted to one of over 12 per cent—and a drop of 76 jobs over the decade. But Moorhead's prosperity was little affected by this development as that city and its North Dakota twin, Fargo, look to trade and commerce as their economic bulwarks.

Fourteen Industrial Centers

Information supplied by state officials on the 25 communities with state employment offices included in this study and U. S. census data on manufacturing for 1958 reveal that there are 14 cities outside Duluth and the Twin City metropolitan area where a thousand or more persons earn their livelihood in industry. And two cities—Brainerd and Little Falls—achieved industrial employments close to the thousand mark.

These cities in order of their industrial importance (with 1960-61 employment figures in parentheses, except as noted) are:

Austin (4,895), Rochester (4,209), Winona (3,864), St. Cloud (3,791), Cloquet (not included in the study small fraction of the 3,758 assigned to Carlton county in the 1958 census), Albert Lea (3,465) and Mankato (3,064).

International Falls (not included in study but with most of the 2,221 workers listed by the census for Koochiching county), Owatonna (1,963), Red Wing (1,877), Faribault (1,331), Fairmont (1,260), New Ulm (1,171), and Worthington (1,128).

Industrial employment for all the 25 cities, state, Twin Cities, and Duluth, together with gains made over 1950-51, are shown on the tabulation chart accompanying this article.

Individual Communities Report

Here are the high-lights of the developments on the industrial fronts of the 24 other communities included in this study:

Albert Lea, with 63 diversified manufacturing plants including the large Wilson & Co. meat packing establishment, racked up a gain of 453 jobs. This was due largely to expansion of companies engaged in making pre-fabricated homes, store fixtures, fertilizers, and farm machinery.

Austin, headquarters of the Hormel meat-packing empire, showed a loss in industrial employment. The 367 fewer jobs resulted chiefly from increased automation at the giant Hormel plant which provides over 95 per cent of the city's industrial payroll. A new Weyerhauser shipping container plant, employing over 150, came to town and helped to balance the Hormel cutback.

Bemidji saw two sawmills, a box factory, and a small textile plant cease operations. But the Nu-Ply wood products factory opened and the loss was held to a dozen jobs.

Brainerd reported 320 new jobs. Most of this large increase which boosted the manufacturing working force from 651 to 971 came with a large expansion of facilities by Northwest Paper Co.

Editorials . . .

"Freedom can prevail only where the people want it. And sound measures will be adopted in the field of labor, taxes and money only if such measures are supported by the people. Therefore it is plain that public opinion is the controlling element in a free society in the long run. And if that society is to remain free the channels which are open for informing and educating the public must remain uncontrolled. Is this true in the United States today, and just how free is public opinion?"

Keeping the Record Straight

Charles L. Horn, who with O. L. Kaupanger, are the Minnesota Emergency Conservation Committee, maintain a constant state of emergency in their struggle to preserve the wildlife habitat of the state. Wildlife to them is more important than agriculture and, where water is involved, wildlife is more important than industry.

In a recent letter that was given statewide circulation, Mr. Horn has renewed his opposition to the development of the taconite industry in the state. When the mining companies appeared before the legislature some years ago, seeking permission to build the plants that now are operating on the Iron Range, Mr. Kaupanger opposed the developments because state waters would be polluted. In spite of this opposition the legislature favored the proposed industrial development.

Mr. Horn's letter gives the impression that the mining companies are now seeking a more favorable tax structure for the taconite operations and that the proposed taconite amendment would serve this purpose. That is not true. The mining companies are satisfied with the present tax structure for taconite and are not seeking reductions. All they seek is protection against future tax abuses, and, considering the record, they are justified in asking that they be given such protection. The record of the Iron Range communities is not good, and certainly is not conducive to developments that involve the investment of hundreds of millions of dollars.

The facts about the taconite industry and taxes were set forth clearly by Representative John A. Blatnik in a speech he delivered in Congress on September 23, 1961, the occassion being the fifth anniversary of the start of their taconite operations by the Reserve Mining Co. Mr. Blatnik was a member of the state legislature when the special taconite tax legislation was adopted and he was one of the authors of that measure. He knows whereof he speaks and certainly in this field of taxation he is guided by what he believes to be the best interests of the Iron Range and of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Blatnik's speech is available for those who seek dependable information on this important problem. It is unfortunate that the waters have now been muddied by partisan considerations. Under the circumstances it is not strange that the public is confused. The Blatniks and others on the Range know the facts. The responsibility for presenting the facts clearly and honestly to the people of Minnesota should be theirs.

The First Step

Our government and 31 other nations, including Canada, have taken an important first step in tariff reduction, having agreed to a lowering of trade barriers on a substantial number of items. While the changes were generally small, the agreement nevertheless was significant, and especially so as it pertains to our relations with Canada.

This is moving in the right direction, in the best interests of the citizens of both countries. We have prospered because we have had a common market of our own, each state a member. The free exchange of goods and services among the people of all of the states has been beneficial to all of them. An economic union with Canada would create some problems but over a period of time both the Canadians and the Americans would benefit.

Another Korea?

Two American planes carrying American soldiers to Asia disappeared mysteriously in the Pacific last week. Presumably they were to strengthen American forces already fighting in Viet Nam. Under the circumstances it is natural to wonder if this is the beginning of another Korea. Are we assuming all responsibility for the defense of the nations of southeastern Asia that may be threatened by the Red Chinese?

If India is not interested in the defense of that area why should we become involved? Prime Minister Nehru of India thinks we have no business being in Viet Nam and William Fry, United Nations Correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, thinks that if the U. S. and Red China do "become locked in a major struggle, Nehru's sympathies will by no means entirley lie with the United States. And much of Asia will follow his lead."

Maybe we should let the United Nations handle these international policing problems andn devote more time to minding our own business. By being too meddlesome we are offending too many of our friends.

A Ray of Light

May it be noted that on one item of defense spending President Kennedy last week went along with the moderates. Pushing hard for a speed-up in the B-70 program, a 2,000 miles an hour plane, was Rep. Carl Vinson of Georgia, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. He wanted a half a billion dollars to build six of these planes quick.

But the President went along with Defense Secretary McNamara who prefers to move more slowly in the development of a plane for which the need is still uncertain. Now and then a hopeful ray of light does penetrate the gloom.

Learning to Read

We seem to be emerging from that era of darkness in education during which children have been taught to read by words rather than by letters. Now a group of laymen and educators have organized the Reading Reform Foundation in New York to combat "configurationism" and to "restore the alphabet to its proper place as the basis for elementary reading instruction." Commenting on the development, the Christian Science Monitor agrees that a change back to the old method is in order. We quote:

> "Should children be taught to read by whole words or by letters of the alphabet? An intense controversy on this subject is being waged in educational circles.
> "First it was considered a reform in reading methods and certainly it made for more rapid reading—to train the eye to recoznize the look, the "configuration," of a whole word rather than breaking it down into letters and syllables.
> "This was all right until the pupil was expected to write something for others to read. Then it was often found that he had very strange ideas if any about how sounds and symbols were put together to make a word.
> "If the English language could be put through one of the long attempted simplified spelling revisions which would reduce it to phonetic terms, then word images might be more satisfactory. But so long as spelling depends on derivation from a score of different languages, a great deal of it probably will have to be learned by what one instructor called "brute memory."
> "And in that process, alas, as well as for filing purposes, students will have to know their a, b, c's. Probably the answer lies in some synthesis of the two methods, though the thought will be rejected by both sides. For certainly the next decade's crop of readers is going to be called upon for speed as well as spelling."

Learning to read by memorizing pictures of complete words made our language almost as difficult as Chinese, which, they tell us, consists of thousands of word symbols. The next generation will thank us for putting an end to "progressive" education.

Low Cost Power

In ten years, maybe five, electric power will be transmitted long distances over a nation-wide grid. Low cost power will be delivered thousands of miles at fabulous savings. So writes Richard L. Strout in the Christian Science Monitor.

According to Strout, engineers are doing tricks with transmission lines. The size of a transmission line is expressed in kilovolts or kv. Only yesterday transmission voltages over 230 kv. were a rarity—the power loss was too great. Now there are lines in experimental operation of 500 kv., and 1,000,000 volts are just over the hill. The capacity of a transmission line increases in proportion to the square of the voltage: a 500-kv. line can carry almost five times as much as a 230-kv. line.

Strout says that's only the start. It used to be thought 150 to 200 miles was the limit of efficient transmission, but these new, huge, singing wires can take electricity 500 to 1,000 miles on an economical basis. One doesn't have to understand in the space age how a thing is done—it's called "extra-high voltage," or EHV transmission, and that's that. Combined with low cost generation from giant plants located near cheap fuel sources, it forecasts a new era.

America's bulk stretches from time zone to time zone—as householders begin to switch off bedtime lamps in Boston they switch them on in Los Angeles. The peak load of America's pooled power can follow the sun.

Dealing With Castroism

(The London Observer)

It is surprising that the United States should still believe that diplomatic pressure helps the other Latin American countries to resist the infection of Castroism. All the evidence is that such pressure is an embarrassing handicap, and that it would be wiser to leave the Latin American governments to deal with Castroism in their own way.

Interesting Opinions

"I think the reason why appeasement in foreign policy or unilateral disarmament is so disastrously wrong is that the psychology of the Communist party is based on chess, and not on tennis. In tennis, you give up a point to the enemy, this is very Anglo-Saxon, and he appreciates it and reciprocates. But in chess, if you give up a pawn to the enemy, he thinks you're either a fool or a knave. In either case, he checks your king. Either it is a trap, and so he is not grateful, or you are a fool and are to be despised."

Week after week carefully tabulated figures published in "Automotive Market Reports"* show that Chevrolet trucks are worth more in resale value.
why?
If you were a professional used truck buyer, why would you pay more for one make than another? There may be several reasons, but among them would be:
1. A greater demand for the product.
2. A more desirable product for resale.
So if used Chevrolet trucks consistently bring higher prices at auctions all over the country, it means that their quality features pay off for you not only as long as you own them, but also when you are ready to trade them—double-wall cabs, sturdy side panels, roof insulation, select wood floors, reliable and economical engines, real rugged tailgates, a suspension system that helps prolong truck life.
See your Chevrolet dealer for a quality '62 Chevrolet Jobmaster truck.

Industrial Payrolls Remains Stable In Thief River Falls

Crookston, site of a large sugar refining plant and a number of small industries, including one which processes potatoes into the ever-popular "french fries" encountered at every restaurant and roadside diner in the land, had a gain of 117 jobs.

Fairmont, the site of a Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. tape plant, a Stokely-Van Camp canning operation, and a firm engaged in making railroad motors, reported 207 new jobs.

Fergus Falls noted a small increase in factory employment. Work was provided for 12 additional people. Cut-backs were suffered in the sash and door manufacturing industry. But other plants—and Fergus Falls has a number of them engaged in making farm equipment, feed, fertilizers, boat trailers, and food products—added more men and women to their payrolls.

The paper mill which provides most of the industrial payroll at Grand Rapids expanded its operations. Most of the 107 job increase in this city could be attributed to that.

Hibbing had 201 people working in industrial plants in 1951. In 1961 there were but 99. In the interim, the Remington millwork company closed up and small firms serving the mining industry curtailed operations.

Little Falls made a handsome showing. A boost in employment of 358 was due largely to intensified activity at the Crestliner and Larson boat works. In addition to these two growing firms, which account for almost 60 per cent of the industrial payroll, Little Falls has a paper mill with a substantial employe roster.

About 725 new jobs were created at Owatonna. Three new plants came to the city since 1950. Employment at Josten's (school jewelry, etc.) was up by 25 per cent; food processors employed a fifth more people; farm equipment and tool makers increased employment by about ten per cent.

Rochester's New Era

The establishment of a branch I. B. M. plant at Rochester ushered in a new era for that city. The ten year increase in jobs fell just short of the three thousand mark. About 85 per cent of this gain can be attributed to IBM, with several smaller firms accounting for the balance.

New jobs resulting from developments at St. Cloud totalled 1,828. Contributing factors to this increase: a branch plant of Waldorf Paper company, the coming of Fingerhut, plastic seat cover maker, increased employment at several small plants and by Franklin Transformer, manufacturer of refrigerators and freezers. Franklin accounts for about a quarter of the total industrial employment.

Winona Moves Ahead

That busy hive of industry, Winona, reported an increase of 170 new jobs. Over 46 different products are made in the city. Noted during the decade was increased employment by companies engaged in metal fabrication, textiles manufacture, and plastics. Food processors employed fewer people. The big chemical and drug firms (Watkins, etc.) and the foundries maintained the previous sizes of their forces.

While jobs in industry have received due recognition in state and community promotion plans, jobs in non-manufacturing pursuits far outnumber factory employment. Their importance cannot be discounted. A discussion of developments in this field will appear in the next and final article in this series.

'U' Tells How to Boost Eary Tomato Yields

Home gardeners can greatly increase early yields of tomatoes by following some techniques used by University of Minnesota plant scientists.

R. E. Nylund, professor of horticulture at the University of Minnesota, suggested use of these techniques to gardeners attending the opening session of the University's annual horticulture short course on the St. Paul Campus this Wednesday morning:

Select an early variety such as Faribo Hybrid EE or Fireball.

Grow the plants in peat or clay pots instead of flats. Root damage is far less from setting the potted plants in the garden than transplanting from flats.

Place black plastic mulch over the planting area.

Set the transplants through slits in the black plastic, planting them close together—about a foot between plants in the row, with rows about 3 feet apart.

Use a starter solution at transplanting time to get plants off to a good start. Dissolve ½ cup of complete fertilizer in a gallon of water and use about 1 cup of this solution around each plant.

If the weather is cool when blossoms come out, spray the blossom clusters with a hormone blossom spray to prevent excessive blossom drop.

Nylund also told gardeners that starting muskmelon plants in peat pots about two weeks before planting and using a black plastic mulch in the garden will greatly increase yields of muskmelons.

Cost of black plastic film for the home garden is negligible, he said. Besides increasing soil temperature, black plastic controls the weeds, conserves moisture, keeps fruits clean and often freer of disease. Weed control alone may make the black plastic mulch worthwhile, Nylund declared.

Antibiotics Are Termed No Cure-all

Doctors Issue Warning on Using Penicillin

Most persons who ask their doctor for a "shot of penicillin" have the wrong idea about the powers of antibiotic drugs, says the Minnesota State Medical Association.

Penicillin is one of the most familiar, and one of the first of a group of drugs called antibiotics. These drugs have been remarkably successful against pneumonia and in fighting various other infections and diseases.

When penicillin was new it was given for almost everything. As time passed, however, doctors learned that some people are allergic to penicillin, and that others gradually become allergic with repeated doses of the "wonder drug"

Doctors also learned that some of the germs in the body, especially after often-repeated doses, became resistant to antibiotics. No one is exactly sure how this happens, but it is believed that among the organisms which cause your infection there are a few which are too tough for penicillin. The drug therefore kills off the weaker germs, leaving those resistant to penicillin. These multiply and later you may find that there is a whole family of penicillin-resistant organisms. When this happens, your doctor has to try something else.

It is best, advises the Association, to be cautious in using penicillin ointments, cough drops, or pills, unless prescribed by a doctor. You might possibly build up resistance to penicillin by small doses and make it ineffective in a serious illness when you really might need it.

Take Second Look, Motorists Urged by Highway Dept.

Drivers Are Advised to Pay Close Attention to All State Road Signs

Take a second look and think twice whenever you approach one of the many "Signs of Life" that are designed to guide both motorists and pedestrians safely in traffic, the Minnesota highway department warned today.

Changeable weather conditions of the season cause break-ups in roadways, and leave treacherous icy spots hidden on curves, under overpasses and many other places. An unexpected chuck-hole or an icy spot can send a car careening out of control without warning.

Highway maintenance crews to their best to repair damaged roadways as soon as trouble spots are located, but often the hazards cannot be entirely cleared away. Traffic signs are posted to warn motorists of these dangers. The messages mean what they say. Those who ignore the posted warning signs sometimes find they have made a final and fatal error.

Approach traffic control devices such as "stop-and-go" signals with slow speeds and extra caution. Other drivers may find it difficult to stop safely and give you the right of way or, in turn, you may not be able to maneuver safely under adverse road or weather conditions. A "rolling stop" at a stop sign is out of the question for a sober-minded driver. Unexpected thru traffic can bring you to a "Dead Stop" if you get in its way.

Pedestrians also are obligated to obey traffic signs and pavement markings such as at crosswalks. They have a responsibility toward themselves and others to "take an extra look" for turning cars or careless motorists. It is important that both walkers and drivers serve as their "brothers' keepers" to keep motoring pleasant in Minnesota.

Beet Growers Suffer Setback, Says Langen

"The possibility of permanent sugar legislation this year has taken another set back," declared Congressman Odin Langen Friday. Langen noted that only a little over three months remain before the Sugar Act expires and "the Department of Agriculture and the Administration still refuse to offer any kind of a recommendation that would provide for the needed expansion of domestic sugar production."

Congressman Langen said nothing has been received except scanty outlines of recommendations prepared by the Agriculture Department for last week's discussions with interested groups. "Even these inadequate outlines suggest a policy that would result in the reduction in acreage even for the established old growers," added Langen, "and the long-range effect on present growers would be most undesirable."

Langen said this is in direct contradiction to a letter he received from the Agriculture Secretary in January, which assured the Congressman that "the Department is sympathetic with the desires of domestic growers for a larger share of the market."

"It seems to me," said Langen, "That further delays, a failure to come up with concrete recommendations, and off-the-record hints at reductions are poor ways to show sympathy for the domestic beet growers in this country."

Langen called for immediate action by the Department of Agriculture "if it isn't already too late. That June 30th deadline is no longer in the distant future. It's right around the corner." The Minnesota Congressman said again today that it will be regrettable if hurry-up, last-minute legislation forces a mere extension of the old Sugar Act instead of a long-range, helpful measure geared to the future well-being of the sugar industry.

Artificial Larynx Made Available On World Scale

Distribution of an electronic larynx developed by Bell Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric has now been arranged on a world-wide basis. The artificial larynx is to be used by persons whose larynx has been removed surgically or whose vocal cords are paralyzed.

When the new artificial larynx was made available, the Bell system received hundreds of requests from 57 countries, reports James Koller, manager of the Thief River Falls office of Northwestern Bell. There were, however, no distribution facilities outside the United States.

Arrangements were made by Senator Hubert Humphrey to have the device distributed through the World Health Organization, a specialized agency of the United States. This organization will make the larynx available at cost to ministries of health in foreign nations, providing voices to the voiceless throughout the world.

You see a giant ship at dockside and suddenly, you yearn to board her and journey to far-off, exotic ports.

Why? For the sake of excitement — adventure — or because, like most people, you feel the need to escape, at times, even from yourself?

This desire to escape is human. But it is also impossible. No matter where you go, the self you'd like to fling away, travels with you.

Sail the seven seas, if you can. But first find personal peace. Go to church. God shows you, through His Church, the only way that you and that self of yours, truly can travel together.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

BY MARY LUNDIN

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT SPRING that sort of puts new life into everything. It's evident in the community where activities seem to hit a feverish pitch about this time. Certainly it's notable in school where activities of the year are being brought to a conclusion with contests, concerts and special events. And when friend wife says to plan on being home Saturday afternoon, there's no question that spring fever has induced an added spark of energy which stimulates a strange disease commonly called housecleaning.

And this disease gets to be contagious. It spreads from room to room through the whole house with increasing vigor, gradually even reaching to the sacred interior of my private den, where I have retreated to preserve my sanity as the winter's horde of coveted odds and ends is ingraciously deposited with accumulated trash.

End result of all the fuss and furor is an immaculate little home, free of dust, dirt, finger marks, grease spots and stale air. Floors are spotless and shining—awaiting the first day that the kids come in from playing in the mud to get a drink of water; windows are recklessly thrown open—creating a cold draft conducive to pneumonia; the basement is practically a void with all storable items neatly stacked in boxes—ready to be moved when seepage begins to pour in; and all personal items are orderly arranged in drawers—where they will finally be found next fall after months of fruitless searching.

Isn't it wonderful that Spring—like Merry Christmas—comes just once a year?

Don't miss the Washington PTA production of "65th Precinct" April 2 at the Lincoln high school auditorium. Watch the performance of the Dolly Sisters, Cuddles and Louie, the wife beater and the big capture for traces of brilliance. If you missed it the first time, don't make the same mistake twice. Much credit is due the parents and teachers who have volunteered their services to stage the show which will benefit the chapter treasury. Costumes alone, in Roaring Twenties vogue, are worth the price of admission.

Early reports on the sale of membership in the Pennington County Fair association are encouraging. Continued success in the community and county-wide venture will give other communities in the area a standard to look to as a lesson for cooperative venture. Bought your membership yet?

A fact sheet which crossed my desk today stated that the petty-coat originally was a vest worn by men under sweater or jacket. The ladies borrowed it, changed the name, style and purpose. Many of them do the same thing with a regular paycheck. The sheet also states that. Benjamin Harrison made 140 addresses in 30 days of campaigning for the Presidency and never repeated any speech. Guess he must have been as forgetful as the modern political promise-makers.

Speaking of politics, it is interesting to note that Sen. Hubert Humphrey for some time alternated every other week with cartoon comedies on television. One week the cartoon program was substituted for with a corn festival. The station is to be praised for its attempt to maintain weekly continuity in the type of program presented.

Observing the errors of others is the easiest way to prevent mistakes. It's also a good way to get jailed for window-peeping.

The following poem was contributed by a reader and, though it lacks something in continuity of rhyme scheme, it does provide our message for the day.

"I'M FINE"

There's nothing whatever the matter with me.
I'm just as healthy as I can be.
I have arthritis in both my knees
And when I talk I speak with a wheeze;
My pulse is weak and my blood is thin,
But I'm awfully well for the shape I'm in.

I think my liver is out of whack,
I have a terrible pain in my back,
My hearing's poor and my sight is dim,
Most everything seems to be out of trim.
The way I stagger is sure a crime;
I'm likely to fall at any time,
But I'm awfully well for the shape I'm in.

I have arch supports for both my feet,
Or I wouldn't be able to cross the street,
Complexion's bad due to dryness of skin,
But all things considered,
I'm fine for the shape I'm in.

Dentures drive me crazy, I'm restless at night,
And in the morning I'm a terrible sight,
Memory's failing, head's in a spin—
I'm practically living on aspirin,
But I'm awfully well for the shape I'm in.

The moral is, as this tale unfolds,
That for you and I who are growing old,
It's better to say, "I'm fine", with a grin
Than to tell everyone of the shape we're in.

INCOME TAX ADVICE

By Minnesota State Bar Assn.

Dividends and Retirement Income

(This is the fifteenth in a series of articles on income taxes made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar Association, Public Relations Committee.)

For Federal income tax purposes your dividend income is tax-free up to $50— or up to $100 if you and your wife each received dividends of $50 or more (as where you and your wife own stocks either jointly or separately). This exclusion must be claimed specifically on your Federal return. In addition, you are entitled to a dividend credit against Federal taxes equal to 4 per cent of your divident income (that is, your dividend income minus your $50 or $100 exemption), or 4 per cent of your taxable income, whichever is lessdr. Under the new Minnesota income tax law, a taxpayer enters his Federal adjusted gross income as his Minnesota gross income (with certain modifications) on his Minnesota return. Accordingly, if you received dividends and specifically claimed the $50 or $100 dividend exlusion on your Federal return, you will, in effect, also receive a $50 or $100 dividend exclusion for Minnesota income tax purposes. There is, however, no dividend credit against Minnesota taxes.

The following discussion concerning the retirement income credit is applicable only to your Federal return.

A person who is 65 years of age or older, and who earned at least $600 per year in each of any ten years prior to the taxable year from wages, salaries or other remuneration for personal services performed, is entitled to a credit against his tax equal to 20 per cent of the first $1,200 of retirement income which he receives minus certain specified amounts. Where a husband has the required earned income, his wife can also qualify either by having worked herself or by receiving credit as his widow for the income earning years of her husband.

Retirement income consists generally of taxable pensions, annuities, interest, rents and dividends. The first $1,200 of retirement income upon which the credit is computed must be reduced by the amount of Social Security payments or railroad retirement pension payments received and also reduced by the amount of wages and salaries received during the taxable year in excess of $1,200.

If you receive $2,500 in retirement income as defined above, earn a salary of $1,400, and receive Social Security benefits of $500, you compute your credit by starting with the maximum retirement income of $1,200, and deducting the $500 of Social Security benefits received. From the net amount of $700 you then deduct the amount of wages you received in excess of $1,200, or 200. This gives you a net retirement income of $500 to which the 20 per cent credit is applied to give you a credit against your tax of $100.

Although you must always deduct Social Security benefits received against the retirement income figure, you are not required to also reduce this amount by your earned income received after you have reached 72 years of age.

If husband and wife both qualify for the retirement income credit, they can take the credit only with respect to retirement income which they individually receive. Thus, your wife cannot take a retirement income credit where she receives no retirement income in her own name.

(This colum, based on Minnesota and Federal law, is written to inform, not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of a trained expert who knows the facts, because the facts may change the application of the law.)

CROP REVENUE UP, LIVESTOCK DOWN

In the period a quarter of a century ago, 1935-39, crops accounted for 24.3 per cent of Minnesota's annual cash sales of agricultural products, livestock and related products 75.7 per cent; the shift in 1961 was not as great as might have been expected: 26.2 per cent from crops, 73.8 per cent from stock. Within the livestock bracket some of the changes have been much sharper: proportion of Minnesota cash revenue from cattle and calves climbed from 21.3 per cent to 33.2 per cent while hogs dropped from 26.5 per cent to 21.3 per cent; sheep and lambs dropped from 2.8 per cent to 1.6 per cent. Dairy products dropped in the quarter century 34.5 per cent to 29.1 per cent, eggs 7.6 per cent to 6.9 per cent, chickens and broilers from 4.0 to .8 per cent; only turkeys went up, 2.0 per cent to 5.1 per cent. The total agricultural dollar volume climbed from a $329 million annual average twenty-five years ago to $1,468,000,000 in 1961.

Houske Renamed Head of County Soil District

Supervisors Adopt New Tree Planting Program, Give Book To Library

Oscar Houske of rural Thief River Falls was reelected chairman of the board of supervisors of the Pennington County Soil Conservation district at the reorganizational meeting held Friday afternoon in the Pennington county courthouse.

All other officers were also reelected. They include Harold South, Goodridge, vice chairman; Raymond Parnow, Goodridge, secretary; and Silas Hanson, Thief River Falls, treasurer. Melvin Scholin of Thief River Falls is the fifth member of the board.

Supervisors decided at the Friday meeting to have a man available from the district office to assist with tree planting this spring. The man will bring the district tree planter to the various farms and will be available to assist the farmers with planting.

Farmers who will plant trees must furnish their own tractor to pull the planter. An experienced operator for the planter will result in a better job of planting and help to assure that trees will be planted at the proper time rather than during a lengthy spring period, the supervisors said. A cost of two cents per tree, in addition to the cost of the tree itself, will be charged for this service.

Approximately 15,000 trees or about 30 acres will be planted this spring on the basis of orders received, according to Robert Kloubec, work unit conservationist for the district.

The board also approved presentation of the book "Land, Water & People" to the Carnegie Public Library in Thief River Falls. Houske made the presentation to Miss Frances Shanahan, librarian, at the library Friday afternoon.

Rehabilitation Clinic Held at N.W. Hospital Thursday

Dr. Miland Knapp, 'U' of M. Staff Member Confers Here with Medical Staff

Dr. Miland E. Knapp of the department of physical medicine at the University of Minnesota, and director of physical medicine at the Kenny Rehabilitation Institute at Minneapolis, conducted the fourth of a series of clinics on physical rehabilitation with the medical staff and the staff of the rehabilitation service of Northwestern Hospital Thursday.

Patients who had suffered impairment of the brain or body as a result of strokes and those suffering congenital irregularities such as Erb's Palsy or familial spastic paralysis were given special consideration. On Thursday evening Dr. Knapp lectured on the special treatment possibilities for patients suffering such disabilities, and illustrated his talk with slides and movies.

Dr. Knapp's services are made available at no extra charge to patients through a special grant by the Thief River Falls Foundation, which is matched by the hospital.

Knox School Gym Suffers Damage in Fire Thursday

A blaze that had its origin in a defective ceiling light fixture caused an undetermined amount of damage to the Knox school gymnasium Thursday afternoon at 3:55, the local fire department extinguishing the blaze. Fire Chief Roy Langevin stated that a portion of the ceiling was damaged and the floor scorched in spots, as well as damage to several gymnasium mats.

Shipping Ass'n. Volume Declines

In spite of a merger of the Thief River Falls Cooperative Livestock Shipping association and the Plummer association in 1961, gross value of livestock sold in 1961 decreased $10,627 from the 1960 total. The statement of operations was reviewed at the annual meeting of the association Friday in the meeting room of the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls.

Fred Koop of rural Thief River Falls, George Hesse of Red Lake Falls and Pete Girardy of Plummer were reelected to three-year terms on the board of directors by the approximately 40 persons who attended the meeting. All officers were reelected at board reorganization following the meeting and include Alfred Solum, president; Simon Brelland, vice president; and Harry Oen, secretary-treasurer. Gordon Hunt is the seventh director on the board.

Speakers on the afternoon program were Gordon Haesner, branch manager of Central Livestock Cooperative at Fargo; Paul Stelmaschuk, Pennington county agricultural agent; and Fred Sorenson, agricultural coordinator for the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school. Hesse reported on the annual meeting of Central Livestock Cooperative which he attended as a local delegate in February.

Statement Reviewed

Gross livestock sales in 1960 were $451,063 as compared with $440,436 in 1961, the annual statement reveals. Net received by patrons declined from $420,559 in 1960 to $409,696 in 1961.

Although total number of livestock shipped increased to 6,975 in 1961 as compared with 6,849 in 1960 the reason for the increase was the large number of sheep marketed during the past year. Cattle sold in 1961 dropped to 1,069 from 2,101; calves declined from 763 to 482; hogs decreased from 1,503 to 1,140; while sheep climbed sharply from 2,492 to 3,284.

Part of the decline in hog marketing may be attributed to the feeder pig market initiated in this area by the Wisconsin Feeder Pig Marketing cooperative last summer. The Wisconsin group has regular pickup of feeder pigs in this area.

Total income of the local cooperative increased slightly to $6,425, due mainly to transfers from the Plummer association. Expenses also increased slightly to $2,508, due in part to an increase in livestock losses to $1,568.

St. Hilaire Child, 3, Injured by Sheep, Is Operated upon

Ellard Thompson, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Thompson of St. Hilaire, underwent surgery at Northwestern Hospital for spleen damage resulting from an injury thought to have been caused by the butting of a sheep.

The youngster was found in the Thompson yard in which there were several sheep. His condition is reported to be good.

Deadline Near to Enter Feed Grain Program

Friday Is Last Day for Farmers to Sign, Says ASC Chairman

Growers who are still "thinking it over" about participating in the 1962 feed grain program were urged today not to delay any longer. The signup period extends only through March 30.

Winton Knutson, chairman of the Pennington county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee reports that farmer interest is high in Pennington county as well as throughout the country generally. Indications are that 1962 participation will run well ahead of that under last year's feed grain program.

Farmers who take part in the feed grain program first file an intention-to-participate form in the ASCS county office, indicating the number of corn, grain sorghum, and barley acres they intend to divert from production into a soil-conserving use. The minimum diversion is 20 per cent of the farm's base acreage, but many farmers are indicating their intention to divert more than the minimum.

For participating in the feed grain program, farmers earn diversion payments, and they also qualify for price support on the normal production of their 1962 acreage of these crops. If the farmer wishes, up to about half the expected payment to be earned may be made at the time the application to take part in the program is filed.

The chairman points out that a wide participation in the feed grain program this year will not only save the farmer the costs of planting and harvesting acreages of unneeded feed grains, but it will also continue to reduce the costly pileup of feed grains in government ownership, increase conservation of our farmland, and save dollars for every taxpayer through further reduction in government costs of storing, shipping, and handling government-owned grains.

Mr. and Mrs. Steven Sande of Grand Forks and Mr. and Mrs. Cliff VeVea were Sunday afternoon coffee and supper guests at the Lloyd VeVea home. Other guests were Pierre DeMers and Clifford Mack of East Grand Forks.

Controversy Flares About New Girl Scout Council

DISPLAYING one volume of the set of braille encyclopedia which is to be received by Thief River Falls schools is Russell Hanson, left, division manager of Field Enterprises Educational Corporation, publishers of World Book. Presentation was made Saturday afternoon at Washington elementary school with acceptance made by George Stockman, right, director of elementary education.

Objections Voiced at Meeting Thursday; National Views Given

Controversy concerning the proposed inclusion of the Northwestern Minnesota Girl Scout Council into an enlarged council comprising 34 counties in Minnesota and North Dakota flared at an informational meeting held Thursday afternoon in Thief River Falls. Eight Girl Scout leaders attended the session held in the municipal auditorium.

Miss Margaret Keeley, Minneapolis, member of the national field staff of the Girl Scouts of the U. S. A., was present at the meeting to present the proposal which had previously been rejected by the local organization. Mrs. Roy Benson, Stephen, council president, presided at the meeting.

Included in the proposed council jurisdiction are six councils with present offices in Thief River Falls, Grand Forks, Devils Lake, Jamestown, Valley City and Wahpeton. Counties currently in the Northwestern Minnesota council are Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Polk, Pennington, Red Lake, Clearwater and Norman.

With 85 per cent of the nation currently operating under the enlarged council system, work is being done by the national Girl Scout organization to complete reorganization of the remaining 15 per cent, Miss Keeley said. The national board of director established the end of 1963 as the time when council coverage is to be completed.

It is also proposed that the central office of the new council be located in Grand Forks and that four professional scouters—one supervisor and three advisors to work in the field—be employed by the council. The budget for such a proposal has been estimated at slightly over $41,000.

Express Opposition

Local Girl Scout leaders have expressed opposition to the proposed consolidation of councils and hiring of professional workers. Several factors have been cited in the local position. Among them are the following:

- Belief that professional workers would not give enough assistance to volunteer leaders and enough help to girls in the program to justify their salaries;
- Distance to travel for attendance of council meetings and to conduct council business would be greatly increased and costy in both time and money to volunteer leaders within council communities;
- Apprehension that some communities would be required to pay more than their fair share of council expense in relation to services received and that previous public support of the Girl Scout program would not be as enthusiastic under the new program;
- Natural objection to the loss of the council office in Thief River Falls where it has been maintained

April 23 Date Set for Bond Election

Monday, April 23, was set as the date for the general school election on the proposed bond issue of $1,595,000 for new school construction when the Thief River Falls board of education met Wednesday evening following a general meeting of the citizen's advisory committee.

To give all residents of the district an opportunity to have questions answered and gain a thorough knowledge of the local school situation, an open meeting for all district residents will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Architects, bond consultants and members of the school board and administration will be present at the session.

When the bond election is held on April 23, voters favoring the proposal will mark ballots in the affirmative "Yes" designation. The question which will be presented is, "Shall Independent School District No. 564, Minnesota, issue its general obligation bonds in an amount not exceeding $1,595,000 for the purpose of construction of buildings and improvement of facilities?"

50 Dairy Farmers on Farm Tour Thursday

Fifty Dairy farmers and several businessmen guests braved muddy roads to take part in a dairy tour held Thursday. The tour opened with a noon luncheon sponsored by the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce at the Rex Cafe.

Drylot feeding of dairy cows was observed at the first stop of the tour on the Art Stenberg farm. Stenberg feeds his alfalfa hay and silage once a day with no protein supplement. The cows are always on the yard so that the pasture can be used to produce forage. This allows more yield of forage per acre and a constant feed of the same quality to the cow which makes possible maximum production per cow.

"Getting cows to produce steadily at their top economic level is the secret to a successful dairy operation", Stenberg pointed out. In addition, the Stenberg farm featured dairy calves which get a good start through proper sire and dam selection and proper feeding.

County Agent Paul Steimaschuk pointed out that dairying in Pennington county has changed considerably in a five year period. Farms reporting milk and cream sold dropped from 780 in 1954 to 517 in 1959; sales per farm in the same period went up from $1,168 to $2,319; milk cows on farms decreased from 7,795 to 5,558 and the pounds of whole milk sold from 2,200 fewer cows went up from 15,518,000 to 32,850,000. This is more than doubling production per cow and using far fewer cows, Steimaschuk pointed out.

Viewed on the Orlando Chervestad farm in Deer Park township was a modernized Grade B. dairy operation. In use was a pipeline milker, bulk tank and properly

A Marshall, Minnesota contractor McLaughlin and Schultz, is the apparent successful bidder for construction of base and bituminous surfacing of 10.86 miles of CSAH No. 6 between the end of the paving west of Gatzke and east to T. H. No. 89.

The Marshal firm bid $160,463.02 for the completed job March 14 as the Marshall county board opened bids for the project. Contract award is subject to the approval of the Minnesota highway commissioner, said H. I. Knutson, county highway engineer.

An exceptionally good bid was received, the total being approximately $40,000 below the estimate of $203,275.50 made by the engineers of the state highway department. The work includes a sand-gravel sub-base, gravel base, bituminous base and bituminous surfacing.

Spirited bidding featured the letting with 13 contracting firms submitting proposals, which ranged as high as $212,791.45.

The next road improvement letting in Marshall county is scheduled for April 3 when commissioners will open bids for surfacing of the Great Easter, (CSAH No. 3) and CSAH No. 4 east of Argyle. At the same letting bids for constructing a new bridge over the Middle River east of Argyle will also be tied in with the road job.

145-Voume World Book Braille Set Presented To Handicapped Program

Approximately 63 persons attended the presentation ceremony Saturday afternoon at Washington elementary school when a 145-volume set of braille World Book encyclopedia was officially given to the local school system. The set, valued at more than $700, is paid for by contributions of World Book sales personnel in the state.

Making the presentation was Russell Hanson, St. Paul, division manager of Field Enterprises Educational corporation, publishers of the encyclopedia. George Stockman, director of elementary education in the local school system, officially accepted the set and in turn presented it to Mrs. Martha Nubson, director of the local program for the visually handicapped.

Women's Group to Back Amendments

League of Women Voters Supports All 3 Proposals

The League of Women Voters of Minnesota announces support of all three proposed amendments to the Minnesota Constitution.

These amendments will be on the ballot at the general election next fall. An active campaign will be waged by the League to encourage a YES VOTE throughout Minnesota.

Amendment I concerns provisions for investment of Minnesota trust funds. The League feels passage of this amendment will maintain the standards of a safe investment policy and at the same time increase the earnings of the trust funds for our schools.

Amendment II removes the state debt limit from the Constitution. It allows the legislature to decide the size of state debt. The large League majority which backed the amendment was aware that experts in governmental debt are not convinced of the effectiveness of debt limits. Also League members did not wish to jeopardize the state building program.

Lengthening the legislative session—Amendment III—also has the support of the League. Perhaps this is a stop gap solution but it is surely a step in the right direction. Legislators need more than the current 90 days every other year to handle the problems of Minnesota today.

Radio Free Europe State Drive Opens

Seeks $140000 to Fight Communist Propaganda

The 1962 Minnesota Radio Free Europe fund drive has been kicked off with the goal set at $140,000, it was announced today by Cliff Sommers, Owatonna, Minnesota RFE chairman. National goal is $11,000,000. The American Legion auxiliary is one of many groups spearheading the 1962 Minnesota campaign.

Sommer emphasised Radio Free Europe's dependence on support from individuals ,corporations, organizations and foundations.

"Because Radio Free Europe is a privately owned radio station, supported entirely by private contributions, its existence depends on the funds so generously contributed by the American people," Sommer said.

Radio Free Europe broadcasts regularly to the 80 million captive people in Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania and is one of the free world's best instruments for "getting the truth across" behind the Iron Curtain, Sommer explained.

Convulsions Held Not Too Serious

A convulsion, though rarely in itself a cause of death, is still one of the most terrifying things a parent can witness.

What causes convulsions: According to the Minnesota State Medical Association, convulsions are often a first sign of diseases like upper respiratory infections, whooping cough, pneumonia or scarlet fever. Other causes are low blood calcium (as in rickets), birth defects, brain concussions, poisoning (especially lead), tumors, low blood sugar, and lack of oxygen. Contrary to popular opinion, convulsions are seldom, if ever, caused by teething, overeating, or in the U. S. worms.

Many young parents fear epilepsy, not knowing that epileptic attacks are uncommon before the age of three. Physicians also state that some children may mimic convulsions as a way of gaining their own way.

What can you do for convulsions? The Association advises that you provide the child with bed rest and complete quiet. Cover him adequately, but not excessively, as he may already have a fever. Don't let him know you're alarmed.

If breathing stops so long that the child becomes blue, give artificial respiration. This is rarely necesarry, although breathing often stops for several seconds.

Don't try anything else without medical advice.

Safety seems to be foremost in people's minds most of the time, it seems to me. People are quite security minded about their families, their homes, their cars and themselves. This seems to be a general and growing picture.

Yet, in many respects, folks are very reckless about some things that are dangerous, but never given too much consideration. One of these things is fire and explosion danger. Here in the Thief River Falls area we've had several gruesome fires in recent times that we know about. There are probably dozens that took place that nobody ever heard about. In almost every instance, a fire starts because of human error and therefore, fires and explosions can be prevented if people understand the real causes.

Tuesday night at 8:00 in the Lincoln High School auditorium, Jerry Mayer, former safety director for Minnesota Mining, will present the most outstanding fire prevention demonstration that you've ever seen. Mr. Mayer will have explosion chambers, he'll have miniature buildings on fire, he'll have gas chambers and he will offer his knowledge. Mr. Mayer intends to teach you how to live with the fire and explosion hazards that surround you at work, play, and in the home every day. He will talk to baby-sitters and tell them what to do in case of emergency. Mr. Mayer will have something to offer anybody or everybody who wants to attend. Any man, woman, or child who wants to learn and be thoroughly entertained at the same time should attend the demonstrations on Tuesday evening. There is absolutely no charge to those attending the sessions.

We'll plan to see you on Tuesday night and we'll see you too as you Shop and Trade Where Bargains Are Made—Here in the Heart of Northwest Minnesota, Thief River Falls.

Winter Snow Here Holds Much Water

Contains 4 to 5½ Inches of Water, Engineers Say

Surveys conducted under the direction of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers indicate there is from four to five and one-half inches of water in the snow between Thief River Falls and the Red Lakes.

Members of the survey team told Morris Owen, chief engineer of the power plant, that at the junction of Trunk Highways Nos. one and 89 on the Reservation the test revealed most water. At Goodridge there was 4½ inches and at Highlanding four inches.

The spring run-off may be reduced by the generally shallow frost in the area, Owen was told. In the eastern areas there were places where there is no frost. The Red Lakes are about six inches below normal level and the outlet gates may be closed during the period of heavy run-off.

COLUMNS ARE WRITTEN by weekly columnists in whatever slack moments they may find in their schedule. Sometimes the deadline forces a combination of work and entertainment if entertainment is to be allowed to interfere at all. Let's imagine that this is being written at a regional championship basketball game with the comments in parenthesis being those conflicting thoughts of the column writer. And so it begins.

Personal character improvement is the topic for this column. It is the duty of every citizen to build himself or herself into a tactful courteous, (First quarter is half over and those stupid kids haven't scored more than a free throw. Why don't they take a time out to get reorganized?) considerate, construcive thinking individual.

Courtesy is one of the most important individual traits. (Move on, lady. I got this seat first and if you can't get here early it's not my fault. So what if your son is playing. He hasn't done anything worth watching yet.) We must cultivate our thoughts to a high plane to achieve a spirit of true courtesy. Respect the rights of others and be polite at all times.

Avoid undue criticism. Unjustified comment about that which you do not understand is a mark of ignorance. (WHAT A FOUL ON THAT PLAY? OF ALL THE IDIOTIC CALLS! WHERE DID YOU GO TO SCHOOL, REF, VASSAR? GET IN THE GAME OR PUT THAT WHISTLE IN YOUR POCKET!) If you cannot say something constructive it is best to keep quiet. Criticism should be given only when it can be helpful.

Be tactful. Avoid comment which lacks tact. (Your brother plays center? Number 27? That scrawny kid with the 10 thumbs? Good thing the rest of the team is rebounding, or this wouldn't even be a game.) Temper your words to the situation and exercise diplomacy.

Practice constructive thinking. Strive for improvement of yourself and others by making helpful suggestions. (That guy is all by himself again. There goes another two points. What's the matter with those guys? Why doesn't the coach do something? They gotta stop that play. Two minutes left and they let a man score wide open. Tie game. We have to get going. What would I do? Gosh, I dunno. I'm not the coach. He get's paid for it. Let him figure it out. But he better do something. Somebody should.)

Learn to accept criticism. Don't be quick to anger. If you prove to be right be modest. If you are wrong, admit it. (WE WON! WE WON! What a lucky shot. I knew we could do it. What a great bunch of kids. What poise. What coaching. They're great. I always said they were good. Boy that's my team.) Avoid controversy. Arguing never decided anything. It's not whether you win or lose — it's how you play the game that really counts.

The guard was escorting the condemned prisoner across a mile of muddy field to the place of execution. The condemned man complained bitterly of the sticky mud. "Aw, shut up," growled the guard. "I don't know what you're complaining about. I'm the one that's gotta walk back, ain't I?"

Two elderly men were taking their first airplane trip which happened to be on a run with frequent landings. At each stop a red tank truck rushed out to refuel the airplane. "These planes sure make time, don't they?" the first man queried. "Shore do," the second answered, "and that little red truck ain't doing so bad either."

Next week another contributed verse. This week, before all the snow is gone, an original.

IT MIGHT AS WELL BE SPRING

The roof gives birth to a new icicle,
The water runs in a constant trickle,
The sun grows warm as its zenith rises,
Each day brings untold surprises
And it might as well be Spring.

The snow banks turn from ghostley white
To shrunken, blackened, fading plight
As warm rays of irridescent sun
Reduce their numbers one by one
And it might as well be Spring.

And so the vicious cycle goes
From spattered cars to runny nose
To mothers crying out the blues
O'er Sonny's misplaced overshoes
And it might as well be Spring.

A curious youngster loudly hoots
As too deep water fills her boots.
Fleecy clouds begin to billow
From out the depths of pussy willow
And it might as well be Spring.

A fresh, new smell ride the morning breeze!
There's life anew in the dormant trees;
The spell of Winter has been broken.
Truer words were never spoken—
"Thank God for the dawn—and Spring.

Job-holders in State Reach February Peak

Employment in Minnesota in February reached a level of 936,400, reflecting the continued recovery from the economic recession of a year ago, it was reported today by Frank T. Starkey, commissioner of the department of employment security. Down only 5,200 from January, the record employment in the state last month was 25,800 above February, 1961, he said.

The over-the-year gain was almost evenly split between manufacturing and non-manufacturing activities. Within manufacturing, most of the gain was recorded in hard goods metalworking and in food processing industries, Starkey said. The gain in metalworking reflects recovery from the recession of last year as well as the significant and continued growth in the electronics field. Also, last year one of the large plants in this group was temporarily shut down, idling approximately 1,200 workers.

The losses since January were mainly seasonal in nature and occurred in retail trade, transportation, and construction industries. Department, apparel, and automotive goods stores led the losses in retail trade. Within transportation, trucking and railroads made up the major part of the drop. Construction, as expected, dipped to its low for the winter in February; however, the heavy snows since the February survey period may have a substantial adverse effect on construction employment figures for March, said Starkey.

Non-manufacturing industries showing the largest over-the-year growth were trade, government and services. Retail activities accounted for much of the gain in trade. Government and services recorded gains about in line with long-term trends. The apparent gain in transportation over the year is due to a labor dispute during February, 1961, which reduced air transportation by approximately 3,000 persons at that time.

Weekly earnings of production workers in Minnesota's manufacturing industries were $100.99 February, down $1.25 per week from January, due to a decline of .5 of an hour in the workweek; at an even forty hours, the workweek in February was virtually the same as a year ago.

Starkey reported that unemployment in Minnesota rose to 114,400 persons in February, compared to 113,600 in January. A year ago, 139,000 persons in the state were out of work.

The rate of unemployment remained virtually unchanged over the month at 8.2 per cent. A gain in the labor force, occasioned by the rise in agricultural employment was proportionate to the slight rise in unemployment and resulted in no over the month change in the per cent of unemployed.

In February, 1961, or during the depths of the past recession, 10.3 per cent of the labor force was unemployed, Commissioner Starkey said.

Lakehead Pipeline Company Plans $8 Million Work in '62

To Provide Additional Capacity on Line from Clearbrook to Superior

To increase capacity to refining areas in Eastern Canada, Lakehead Pipe Line company, Inc. will add six booster pumping stations and will loop a 38 mile section of its existing line, R. E. Trammell, general manager, announced today.

The plans call for the construction of six electrically operated pumping stations on the 30" section of the crude oil pipe line be- Sarnia, Ontario. The tentative lo- Sarnia, Ontario. The tentative locations are at Ino, Wisconsin and Gogebic, Rapid River, Mackinaw, Lewiston and West Branch, Michigan. These new stations will consist of three pumping units in outdoor installations and will be remotely controlled from the Superior Station.

In addition to this increased power, additional capacity will be provided by the laying of a total of 38 miles of 34" diameter pipe in two loops between Clearbrook, Minnesota and Superior, Wisconsin. A start on this work is planned for early August.

It is expected that the construction program, subject to governmental permits, will be completed by year end. Cost of the construction program including looping and the new stations, has been estimated at approximately $8,000,000. These funds will be drawn from the company's cash resources.

Controversy on Girl Scout Plan Flares Thursday

for a number of years;

- And an aversion to the initial expressed statement that reorganization is "inevitable" regardless of local leader opinion.

"Forget the Past"

"What you need to do is forget about the past and look to what can be done in the future," Miss Keeley repeatedly told the group meeting Thursday afternoon. "As leaders you should be interested in the program, just as we are, to provide the best possible program for Girl Scouts in your communities."

The national staff member said that services to Girl Scouts are limited under past and present organization. Training courses for leaders, expanded camping programs and record keeping in a central location are all advantages of the reorganized and expanded council, she said.

It has been recommended that present council offices be maintained under the new program as "Girl Scout rooms" and that they be used for what leaders have said they needed locally. These wants include a library of reference books, storage of neighborhood equipment such as flags, camp and craft supplies and printed materials, a place for professional workers to hold conferences and a place for local organizations to meet.

Thief River Falls, Newfolden and Middle River are proposed as a neighborhood unit under the new program.

"Council coverage is unfinished business," states a letter from Mrs. Charles U. Culmer, national president, which was circulated at the meeting. "As you know, the plan requires not only that all areas of the country be included in council jurisdiction, but, also, that these jurisdictions contain the resources which will insure a uniform level of service throughout our county. This involves us all, in one way or another.

"On many occasions during the past 50 years the Girl Scouts have moved forward in giant steps. Together we are now going to take two more — completion of the council coverage plan and launching the program changes."

Action on the reorganization is being asked by the national organization at the Northwestern Minnesota Council to be held in May. If a majority of the six councils in the proposed jurisdiction favors the consolidation, the national board of directors will proceed with council reorganization.

equiped milk house as well as barn cleaner. Korydon Chervestad explained that all these additions were made in a five-year period after a fire destroyed an old barn. He stated that all the growth shown in their family dairy business was not easy and that everyone in the family has helped in making it possible.

The farm is in dairy and turkey production. Twenty-four holstein cows are being milked by the Chervestads. "With Dad working off the farm to help our farm income, this mechanized operation has made it possible for the family to stay in the dairy business", Korydon explained.

The tour was closed with coffee served through the courtesy of Bridgeman creameries. Sponsored by the DHIA, Top of the Nation Dairy association and Chamber of Commerce, the tour is designed for an interchange of ideas among dairy farmers and an exposure of the business to downtown merchants and business people.

HAPPY HOMEMAKING

by Laura Duerst

PENNINGTON COUNTY HOME AGENT

Do you have teenagers in your family? If so, whay type of diet are they eating? Like most teenagers they are always hungry, yet often select "empty calories" to satisfy appetite.

The reason why many teenagers have finicky eating habits is due to emotional change. This may cause them to eat too much or skip meals entirely. It is found that this group wants to be like the crowd, independent of parents and teachers but having approval from all. Many girls fear they will get fat. This fear is one of the greatest factors in poor nutrition, in both the teenage girl and her mother. A girl needs about one-third less calories than a boy—so she can't eat as often, or as much, as he does.

Calories are only one part of the weight control picture; activity is the other. When your calories and activites balance, your weight remains steady.

What makes up a good diet for a teenage boy or girl?

Be sure everyone has dairy foods daily. Milk isn't fattening as so many girls think. Everyone should have two or more servings each day from the meat group. From the vegetables and fruit group four or more servings a day. Last of the basic 4 is the bread and cereal group. In this group four or more servings.

What can parents do about the diet a child gets? Help the teenager to understand that:

1. Good looks begin with good health.
2. Basic beauty begins at the breakfast or dinner-table.
3. Smooth skin, good teeth and glossy hair all come from the food they eat.
4. Pep and energy can only come from the food eaten.
5. What foods they need and why.

Egg whites at room temperature beat better than cold egg whites. Separate whites from yolks and leave the whites at room temperature for a short time before whipping. Cover the yolks with cold water and return to the refrigerator. Use as soon as possible.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Highlanding 4-H

The Highlanding 4-H club held its regular monthly meeting at the C. R. Appelman home on March 19. The meeting was called to order by Lynette Paulson. There was no old business. New business discussed was the 4-H plays to be given in April. Junior leaders chose the characters for the play, "The Shack of His Life," and a leaders council report was given.

Anita Swanson gave a project report on her Crookston Winter Shows demonstration. Roger Han gave a dairy project report. Darlene Appelman gave a sewing demonstration on two ways to sew on a button. Susan Geving gave a bread demonstration on corn meal bread which was served for lunch.

Educational literature on our 4-H projects was handed out to each family, the play was read by the chosen members and lunch was served by Mrs. Appelman. Darlene Appelman played some selection on her accordion.

The next meeting will be held at the Ernest Swanson home.

Demonstration was given by LaVonne Holen and a project report by Richard Johnson. The program was given by the Alvin Fjeld family. Recreation was by the Mayor Holen family and lunch was served by the Alvin Fjeld family.

Editor & Publisher tells the parent, "The next time your son asks if he should be a newspaperman, ask him to check off the list of qualities that an ideal journalist should have: He should have a compulsive urge to write, an insatiable curiosity, a passion for knowledge, a yearning for public service and for leadership." This is the first part of a check list written by Arville Schaleben of the Milwaukee Journal.

The Saturday Evening Post makes the comment that we have an urgent need for foreign trade if we are to remain prosperous. It said, "We are moving toward the point Britain attained long ago when her slogan became, 'Export or Die!' With our natural resources dwindling, we can justifiably add, 'Import Too!' Clearly we aren't going to achieve the exports without the imports."

Forty pits were constructed last year in the Beltrami Soil and Water Conservation District to furnish stockwater for pastures that are away from the farmstead. Morris Blackburn, SCS work unit conservationist at Bemidji, reports that wildlife also benefit from these water areas. Broods of ducks have hatched on several of the older pits; all of them are of value for resting areas on waterfowl flights north and south. And all of the pits were used extensively by deer last summer.

Lime-deficient fields scheduled for alfalfa in 1963 should get their lime application this spring, says Merle Halverson, University of Minnesota extension soils specialist. Reason is that it takes time for lime to dissolve and do the "sweetening" job for which it's intended.

Tree planting is an increasingly popular practice. Milton Maxwell, chairman of the LeSuer County SCD board of supervisors, reports that the County Extension Service and the district board helped distribute 22,000 trees for windbreaks and erosion control last spring. This district plans to order 10,000 black hills spruce and ponderosa pine from the North Dakota Forest Service for delivery this spring.

There's no more waiting for water to run off in the spring for Henry Stiening, who farms 320 acres in Clay County, Minnesota. Drainage surface water from snow and heavy rainfall had always been a problem on Stiening's level land. To lick it, he installed 18,175 feet of drainage ditches at a cost of $2,000. According to Assistant County Agent Curtis Johnson, Stiening is now able to seed earlier and realize an increase in crop production. "Even at $2,000, I feel this is money well spent," says Stiening. "If water is to be a problem this spring, I could get my investment back in a single season."

Better methods of tilling and conserving sandy soils was the theme of the soil conservation tillage demonstration held last fall on the Ed Mutsch farm in the Watonwan SCD. Tillage methods that would control wind erosion more effectively than the conventional moldboard plow were demonstrated. Of outstanding interest was an offset harrow, a heavy disc-like machine. It formed a rough soil surface while retaining most of the crop residues on the surface. This combination results in an effective means of controlling wind erosion.

Good cropping practices are largely responsible for 100-bushel corn yields from land once virtually abandoned because crops wouldn't grow. Chisago county farmer Allan Jarchow needed more land. Three years ago he bought neglected acreage adjoining his farm, sampled the soil and added lime and fertilizer according to recommendations. County Agent Duane R. Schrader says Jarchow now has the fields in a good rotation, has been able to expand his livestock operation and add improvements, such as a barn cleaner, to help his work. A top farmer, Jarchow has been a regional winner in the extra-yield division of the Extra-Profit Corn Contest for three consecutive years.

Twenty-two miles of tile drainage has been installed on the William Henselin and Sons 675-acre farm since 1954. This includes over six miles that were installed in 1961. The tiling contractor said it is the most tile he has ever installed on one farm. Henselin, a cooperator with the Fillmore County SCD, says "Every nickel to pay for it has come from the farm."

COLLEGE IQ SCORES COVER BROAD RANGE

IQ Scores of U. S. college students cover a very broad spectrum, according to the American Council on Education, which reports that test scores of more than 60,000 students in 200 colleges and universities averaged a score of 104. For individual institutions, the ratings ranged from 38 to 142. Regionally, colleges in the Northeast enrolled students of the highest ability (117), followed by the North Central states (105), the West (101) and the South (95).

Global TV could be the greatest force yet discovered to break down the language barriers that hamper communication, says Dr. Arthur C. Clarke, British physicist. Dr. Clarke points out that despite the many languages existent, only seven take care of the needs of half of mankind. These seven are Mandarin Chinese, English, Hindustani, Spanish, Russian, German and Japanese. Unless a new universal language is concocted, the choice will eventually be between English, Mandarin and Russian, Dr. Clarke says.

Nurse shortage in America is serious now and could become critical in the next five years, according to Chemetron Corporation, which conducted a survey among a thousand U. S. hospitals. St. Louis Park Quint New State Champion

Coach Lloyd Holm's well-balanced St. Louis Park team, representatives from Region Five (the Minneapolis area) won the 50th annual Minnesota state high school basketball championship by defeating South St. Paul, 62-57, on Saturday night on the Williams Arena court on the University of Minnesota campus in the finals of the three-day tourney.

To gain the championship, the St. Louis Park Orioles moved through the tournament by edging out Crosby-Ironton, 75-73, in an opening round overtime tilt; subduing a stubborn Danube team, 66-62, in the semi-finals; and then outlasting an ever-trying South St. Paul quint, 62-57, in the finals.

The South St. Paul team, champions of Region Four, scored a come-from-behind win over an aggressive Cloquet club, 63-56, in a first-round tilt; and then scored a decisive win over Wells in the semi-finals.

In a game that preceded the championship tilt on Saturday night, Well, of Region Two, defeated Danube, 68-62, to gain third place. And in the consolation finals, the fast-moving Cloquet club, showing tremendous scoring power in the second half, defeated the Ada Vikings of Region Eight, 79-49.

The Ada Vikings, who entered the state tournament as a "surprise" by defeating the heavily-favored Bemidji Lumberjacks, 52-51, in the Region Eight finals last week, performed in a creditable manner. In a first-round game on Thursday afternoon, the Vikings dropped a 65-63 decision to a tournament-wise Danube club.

Moving into the consolation bracket on Friday afternoon, the Vikings of coach Bill Brady defeated the Region Six champions, the Crosby-Ironton Rangers, 59-58, with Don Bowyer's free throw with a second of play remaining, providing the winning margin.

In the consolation finals, the Ada club turned in a strong first period, and trailed the Cloquet Lumberjacks by a one point, 19-18. The Region Seven champions came up with a 16-point second period while holding Ada to but eight points; and in the third period, the team from the Iron Range riddled the Ada defense for twenty-five points to "insure" the game.

Ada's junior forward, Herb Hasz, who scored thirty-one points in the Vikings' opening game, and added twenty-five points in the second game, and finished with three points against Cloquet, was named to the all-state tournament squad.

Well Done, Vikings

Coach Bill Brady's Ada Vikings, a popular winner of the Region Eight cage title last week, upheld the prestige of the region by their play in the state tournament that was concluded on Saturday night.

Although the Vikings won but one game and lost a couple, it was the manner in which the ever-hustling Ada club performed that drew the plaudits of the crowd and the praises of the side-line experts.

Because Region Eight is primarily a rural area, lacking the population concentrations of the industrial sections of the state, the number of students attending high schools in the region does not approach the vast numbers in other regions. The result has been that Region Eight has been subjected to criticism by the metropolitan area, and the charge has been made that Region Eight is favored and an injustice has been done to the more heavily-populated areas.

This argument always arises during basketball time, and it does have some foundation. But the argument could just as easily be brought about by Regions Seven and Eight during the high school hockey tournament, when the northern part of the state, which produces the better hockey, is given but three berths, while the Twin Cities area gets five berths.

But to get back to the Vikings, Ada proved, by giving a veteran and tournament-wise Danube team a 65-63 scare in an opening round game, and defeating Crosby-Ironton, 59-58, in a consolation round game, that their win over Bemidji in the regional finals was merited. Only in the second half of their game against the pressing Cloquet team, did the Vikings play below par, losing by a 79-49 score.

Ada and coach Bill Brady and Region Eight can be proud of the Vikings.

Joins the Pros

Gordon (Red) Berenson of coach Al Renfrew's Michigan Wolverines hockey club, and who concluded his college career last week, has joined the Montreal Canadians of the National Hockey league.

Berenson, a 21-year old native of Regina, Sask., has been an all-American hockey selection with the Wolverines for the past several seasons. Red, who is six-feet, one-inch in height, and weighs in at 195 pounds, is a center-ice player, and has been rated by coaches and hockey scouts as a prime prospect for NHL play.

In signing with the league-champion Canadians, Berenson will be rejoining his right-wing of junior hockey days, Billy Hicke. Some years ago we were in a group of local hockey fans who made a trip to Winnipeg for a junior hockey playoff game between the St. Boniface Canadians and the Regina Pats. And Berenson, only sixteen years old at the time, was a star in that tilt, and playing a stellar right wing was Hicke. The Montreal Canadians have gained a good hockey player in the former Michigan star.

Not Bad, Mr. Elde

Did you notice that Harold Elde, Soo Line conductor on the North End, and south-side sports expert, picked the four winners in the opening round of play in the state basketball tournament?

When chided about the scores of the games, which he predicted, and which were somewhat off the mark, Harold replied that he had overlooked the fact that the boys were playing on a college-sized floor. He made his first-round selections according to a secret formula, and used a high school-sized playing floor as a base. He will try and do better next season.

Soft Ice

Player-coach Bill Juzda's senior hockey Winnipeg Maroons opened their best-of-seven series with the Saskatoon Quakers in the western Canada Allan Cup semi-finals on Sunday afternoon. The first game of the series was played at Winnipeg, and the Maroons, who are rated among Canada's top amateur teams, defeated the Quakers, 7-5.

Scoring three goals for the Winnipeg club was Freddy Dunsmore. Dunsmore played a lot of hockey in this area some years ago when he was a member of the Roseau Cloverleafs.

The second game of the series will be played tonight, Monday, at Winnipeg, and then the series will be shifted to Saskatoon.

Hetteen Trip In Alaska to Prove Worth of Vehicle

CHAPTER FOUR

March 7, 1960

It was 5 below zero when we arose this morning, had a satisfying breakfast prepared by Bessie, and fired up the engines. While we were loading the last of our gear, our two guides set out with their dog team on the return trip to Kalskag.

Then we started up the Yukon on our way to Holy Cross. This was a new phase of the trip, and it was a thrill to be traveling the Yukon, which is entirely different than the flat tundra country and far more interesting.

To our left as we headed up the big frozen river was a high range of hills — part of the coastal chain of mountains — that are in contrast with the flat country of brushy undergrowth and few trees that lies to the south.

Wooded hills, heavy with birch and spruce growth, fringe the Yukon and give it a beauty and interest even in the dead of winter.

We ran on the river ice as far as Holy Cross, arriving at the Holy Cross Catholic mission and school in the early afternoon amid a noisy welcome from a group of native school children who had gathered at the river to see just who we were.

Their excited comments about our vehicles indicated an intense interest in these motorized sleds.

Later, the Rev. John Fox, S. J., who directs the mission, told us that soon after we hove in sight some of the school children announced our approach with shouts of, "Airplanes without wings are coming."

Father Fox insisted that we stay overnight at the mission, and we accepted his invitation without further urging. We thoroughly enjoyed his hospitality. He served us an excellent dinner and we enjoyed the luxury of a refreshing shower.

Before leaving Holy Cross we used the mission shops to make a routine check of our equipment and make a few adjustments. Also, we were able to park our machines in the shops overnight.

This was real luxury.

CHAPTER FIVE

March 8, 1960

We left the mission at Holy Cross at an early hour and traveled 40 miles up the Yukon to Anvik before calling it a day.

At Anvik we stayed overnight at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Glenn Wilcox, where we enjoyed an excellent dinner and comfortable beds. This is an Episcopal mission that was established in 1897.

That evening Mrs. Wilcox took us to see Anvik's surprisingly modern new state school that is conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Dean Henker. The Henkers proudly showed us around their school, which was something one would never expect to find in this vast back country. It is a substantial one-story structure that includes living quarters for the Henkers. The pupils here are mostly Athabascan Indian children.

Just about all of the children of Anvik, and half of the community's adult population as well, turned out to greet us and to study our motor sleds and the other equipment we carried.

It seems that wherever we appear we never fail to draw excited comments from the adults as well as the youngsters. Before retiring we made plans to push on at a fairly early hour tomorrow morning.

March 9, 1960

We took on a heavy load of gasoline — 75 gallons — before leaving Anvik because of the big stretch of country that we must cross before reaching another inhabited place where more fuel can be obtained.

It was 8 degrees below zero when we left at 8:30 o'clock. We road over very rough snow and choppy ice, and my clothing became wet from blowing snow. This must have been the coldest and windiest day so far.

We covered 54 miles today despite the bad snow and ice conditions and made our camp at Blackburn's cabin, a shack that had not been occupied, except by a family of martens, for the past two or three years.

So untidy was the cabin's interior, we spent two hours cleaning house before having our evening meal, which Bessie prepared on a cook stove that was in the shack. It was tasty and satisfying, and after we had finished we were in fine spirits once more. She always prepares very good and nourishing food. We find it best to eat only two meals a day on the trail.

Once dinner was completed, we retired to our sleeping bags on the cabin floor. It was too cold to stay up, and hence I am writing these notes while lying in the sleeping bag. A candle furnishes the light that I need to write in my log book.

Much Interest in Retriever Club

15 Dog Owners at Meet on Thurday; Next Session Apr. 12

To discuss the possibility of forming a retriever club in Thief River Falls, a group of about 15 interested dog owners attended a meeting Thursday evening at Inga's cafe. Next meeting was set for April 12 when officers will be elected and action taken on constitution and by-laws for the club.

Harry Pluth, who has had considerable experience in dog training and has been a member of other retriever clubs, presided at the initial meeting. He told the group what they could expect to teach their dogs through group training and explained briefly some of the methods used in training.

It was noted that while the club would be primarily comprised of members who wish to train hunting dogs for retrieving, any dog owner interested in teaching his dog obedience is invited to become a member of the organization.

Stan Gibson, Pete Sullivan, Ole Ekeren and Pluth volunteered to attempt to locate a suitable site near the city which could be used for training purposes. Members prefer a spot with both water and field, and also with a small building in which pigeons could be kept for use in training the dogs to retrieve.

Gibson volunteered to contact elevator operators about the possibility of securing low-priced spillage grain for pigeon feeding. A family membership fee of $5 per year was proposed by the group.

Nilo Rantanen, representing a group of sportsmen from the Middle River area, noted that there are a number of dog owners in that community who would be interested in becoming members of the club. The group indicated that membership should not be restricted to Thief River Falls residents and that all sportsmen in surrounding communities should be issued an invitation to become members.

Anyone interested in becoming a club member and receiving a reminder notice of the April 12 organizational meeting is asked to contact either Ole Ekeren or Stan Gibson.

Bennett Cerf, popular T. V. panelist, who serves as Chairman, Braille Calendar Committee of the American Foundation for the Blind, advises that blind people must commit much to memory and must develop keener touch faculties, in order to compensate for their loss of vision.

Gain in TRF in Decade Non-manufacture Jobs

Third Installment: Employment in Other than Manufacturing
by Albert Marshall

(Special to the Thief River Falls Times)

Most of the purely rural areas of Minnesota lost population between 1950 and 1960. This drop in rural population had adverse effects on small cities and towns whose business and professional people make their livelihood by supplying the needs of the rural residents.

The larger trading centers, like Thief River Falls, fared better under these conditions than did their smaller neighbors. But their economic progress was retarded.

This city, as a consequence, showed a smaller gain in employment that did cities in the southern and central sections of the state where notable industrial expansion took place.

Thief River Falls has little industry, but it is a lively business center and employment in the non-manufacturing fields gained during the years between 1950-51 and 1960-61 to the tune of 178 new jobs, according to state employment security department records.

As a matter of fact, every type of activity expanded to some degree requiring additions to work forces—except the transportation industry. Thief River Falls, like other railroad division points, suffered from curtailed railway operations. Here the loss amounted to about 130 jobs.

Altogether, non-industrial employment exhibited a gain of about seven per cent over the period. But that was quite a bit below the state average. The comparable state increase was one of 18 per cent.

State Increases Substantial

During the ten year period ending on December 31, 1961, a state employment increase amounting to 110,650 new jobs in the non-manufacturing fields was disclosed by records made available by the Minnesota employment security office.

The importance of the Twin Cities as the state's major service center is clearly emonstrated by the fact that 5,500 of those new jobs were provided by employers in the Twin City metropolitan area. That represented a 27 per cent gain—far and above the state's 18 per cent gain.

While Duluth showed a job loss of 1,400 during the decade, the rest of the state—the strictly rural territories and the small urban centers—provided 26,550 new jobs—an employment increase of slightly more than ten per cent.

A closer look at the state picture shows that employment in the trades (retail stores and wholesale establishments) was up by over 11 per cent. Public service (governmental agencies, public schools and institutions, and state colleges) enjoyed a whopping 30 per cent increase.

Construction employed 24 per cent more people, and the service classification embracing all those many enterprises ranging from private schools, colleges, and non-profit, privately-operated, hospitals to beauty, barber, and auto repair shops, laundries, and offices staffed by members of the medical, legal, engineering, acounting, and other professions — augmented its employment by 35 per cent.

Employment declined in the transportation and public utility field — by almost eight per cent — due largely to curtailed railroad and bus service.

But banks, credit and loan companies, together with real estate and insurance firms, enjoyed an increase amounting to almost 29 per cent. This finance classification added to that miscellaneous employment that defies classification —and in most cities the two are combined—exhibited a 41 per cent gain.

Eight Cities Beat State Record

Eight Minnesota communities were able to provide employment gains in this large non-manufacturing area of work exceeding the state's 18 per cent gain.

These growth leaders were: the Twin Cities, Rochester, St. Cloud, Mankato, Moorhead, Fairmont, Little Falls, and Grand Rapids.

It is worthy of note that all of these places, with the exception of Little Falls, showed population gains that also exceeded the normal Minnesota growth rate. And Little Falls fell just short of that mark.

While population growth apparently triggered employment gains in these fields, there were other factors which influenced employment changes in individual cities.

Eight cities noted declines in wholesale and retail employment, and three of these cities had large population gains. Declines in the volume of wholesale trade and the large-scale emergence of supermarkets featuring self-service merchandising in certain localities cut into store and warehouse employment.

Those cities in which state colleges or institutions were located were major beneficiaries of far higher educational and custodial enrollment and the addendant large staffs required.

All of the cities reported more employment in the government-public education classification as might be expected as all of them are county seats and service centers of federal and state activities to varying degrees.

While employment in the construction industry in the state was up by 24 per cent, several growing cities actually showed a drop in the building classification — due no doubt to the fact that their building booms had reached their peaks earlier in the decade. This phenomenon was in evidence at Fairmont, Grand Rapids, Mankato, Virginia, and Worthington.

Almost all of the communities reported increased employment in the wide-spread field of service activities. In the few spots where losses were reported (Brainerd, Grand Rapids, Marshall, New Ulm and Worthington) the losses may have been due to a preponderence of certain types of services in the classification. There is evidence that some service establishments—notably laundries and dry cleaners and repair shops other than those servicing automobiles—have withered away under the impact of changing consumer demand.

On the state level, laundries and dry cleaners employ about nine per cent less people than they did ten years ago. And employment generated by the repair services mentioned above declined by 28 per cent.

Crookston and Faribault were the only towns to report a drop in the finance classification. This classification, incidentally, is relatively unimportant as a job provider in almost all the cities studied.

Individuality of Cities

An examination of the relative importance in Minnesota outside the Duluth and Twin City areas of the various job classifications as providers of employment — in conjunction with an inspection of employment in these classifications city by city, points up some interesting conclusions.

hTe following cities have doubled the number of people employed in retail and wholesale commerce that one might expect to find on the basis of their population. In the state the average is 4.83 persons per hundred residents.

These cities — Albert Lea, Bemidji, Crookston, Mankato, Marshall, Rochester, Thief River Falls, Virginia, Willmar, and Worthington—thereby give evidence of preeminence as major regional trade centers.

In the service category, all the cities, except Grand Rapids, Marshall, and St. Cloud qualified as major focal points of supply for professional and other services to the surrounding area. For in all these places employment in the service classification was more than double the state break-down.

On a similar basis, Grand Rapids and Willmar stood out as places with exceptionally large concentrations of governmental employes.

Ten cities were conspicuous as leading transportation and public utility centers — Bemidji, Brainerd, Crookston, Fergus Falls, St. Cloud, Montevideo, Thief River Falls, Virginia, Willmar, and Winona. Most of them have been railroad division points and have suffered with the cut-back in rail service.

Seven cities are headquarters for construction activity on a larger scale than the purely local requirements of their communities would apparently justify — Crookston, Fergus Falls, Moorhead, Red Wing, Thief River Falls, and Winona.

Only one of the 25 has any unusual stature as a center for services rendered by employers in the finance category. That city is Owatonna, the home of one of the state's larger insurance companies.

Round-up By Communities

Now after a general preview of the developments which have occurred, here is a brief run-down by communities.

Bemidji merchants added more than two hundred people to their payrolls. The state teachers' college staff was enlarged. The overall gain amounted to seven per cent, slowed by a territorial population decline.

Brainerd reported a loss of over 500 jobs. Northern Pacific trainmen and car-builders were laid off. Stores and shops cut their staffs in the light of unemployment on the nearby Cuyuna iron range. More employment in government and education (an increase of 346) helped to make the losses more bearable.

Crookston saw a small gain — one of 87 jobs. The building industry accounted for an increase of 92 people. In other fields, small gains were concelled by losses of approximately equal size.

Fergus Falls counted 586 more people employed in non-manufacturing pursuits. In every field where there were gains — with trade, government, and construction all adding more than a hundred apiece.

Grand Rapids residents found solace in the enlarged activities of governmental agencies and the schools. The city, regional headquarters for the state game and fish department, the site of a conservation department supply depot, and with one of the largest school districts in the nation (some children travel 40 miles from home to classroom), gained new employment from these sources.

The situation, however, was none too bright due to the declining mining activity on the nearby Mesabe range. Grand Rapids people working in the mines were laid off, and retail store sales — and store employment — dropped off.

Moorhead registered spectacular gains. The big increase in population resulted in an increase of 60 er cent in the number of people on non-manufacturing payrolls. Gain in jobs amounted to 2,075. Exceptionally large were the increases in staffs of service establishments and financial, real estate, and insurance agencies.

Big Increase at Rochester

A total of 3,037 new jobs was the tally in fast-growing Rochester. The only drop in employment from the 1950-51 level was recorded by the building industry where there were 408 less people at work.

New Dates Set up for Agriculture Parleys

New dates have been set for the four remaining Governor's regional Conferences on Agriculture and Country Life. Two earlier dates had to be re-scheduled because of adverse weather and conflicts, according to State Chairman R. G. Rupp, who is managing editor of THE FARMER magazine.

The dates are as follows: Grand Rapids, at the North Central Experiment Station, on Tuesday, March 27; Saint Cloud, at the Technical High School, on Saturday, March 31; Redwood Falls, at the First English Lutheran Church, on Monday, April 9; Crookston, at the Northwest Experiment Station, on Wednesday, April 11.

All conferences are workshop sessions, starting in each location at 10 a. m. Each will begin with a short talk on Minnesota's Agricultural Potential, followed by the workshops, at which farmers, editors, homemakers, rural clergymen, businessmen, agricultural agency officials and others interested in agriculture will take an active part.

The conferences are open to all. Everyone with an interest in agriculture is urged to attend. Purpose of the conferences is to explore ways of improving Minnesota's Agriculture, promote the state's crops, develop new markets and take the steps necessary to improve rural life.
